WARMUP SESSION AT MARINCELLO

Firemen advance behind a fog nozzle to practice controlling structural blazes at the old Marin Land and Cattle Co. headquarters in Marincello. Eight firemen from Sausalito, five from the Marin County Fire Department and six from Synanon participated today in burning down this old bunkhouse and other abandoned structures on the property, now owned by Gulf Oil Co. The firm donated the buildings to the county's fire training program. A Sausalito water tank truck and Synanon's new pumper unit were used in the drill. In recent years, the old buildings had been occupied only by trespassing transients, Gulf said.

Health Insurance To Cover Nation: Nixon

'Partnership' Plan To Aid Workers, Families

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon proposed today a national health care plan under which employers would provide low-cost insurance for workers and their families, and the federal government would foot most or all the bill for the poor.

In a special message to Congress, the President outlined a program which would:

—Require private employers to work out arrangements under which workers would ultimately pay only 25 per cent of health insurance premiums, and each worker and member of his family would be protected for costs all the way up to $50,000 for a catastrophic illness.

— Provide premium-free protection for families of four making less than $3,000 a year, and coverage at a sliding fee for those with incomes up to $5,000.

Administration officials said the plan would provide health insurance coverage for all but about 40 million Americans and virtually eliminate the costly Medicaid program of health care for the needy.

HEW Secretary Elliot L. Richardson said the cost to the federal government during the first year of such a plan's operation would be about $3 billion.

Nixon presented his own scheme for meeting the nation's health care needs amid a spate of alternatives being offered by members of Congress, including a national health insurance program being pushed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The two proposals were the main features of a "national health insurance partnership" which Nixon said would carry out his pledge to prevent any American family from going without medical care because of inability to pay.

The President's low-budget proposals also would:

—Foster development of private health maintainance organizations in which persons could voluntarily enroll for medical care at a fixed prepaid fee.

—Provide $545 million for the health profession's scholarship program for low-income students and provide additional funds for developing area health education centers.

—Create a Health Education Foundation which would "become a national focus for expanded citizen health education."

—Provide additional funds for research into the causes and cure of cancer and sickle cell anemia, the latter an inherited blood disease found almost exclusively in Negroes.

Nixon said his program was "one in which the public and the private sectors would join in a new partnership to provide adequate health insurance for the American people."

In the last 12 months, the

Nixon: No Concessions, No Limit On Air Power

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon said Wednesday he will not limit use of U.S. air power in Indochina and refused to rule out the possibility South Vietnam may invade North Vietnam.

The President also said the South Vietnamese continue to shoulder more of the fighting, so successfully in fact that the withdrawal of U.S. soldiers may be accelerated and Hanoi soon may wind up dealing with Saigon, not Washington, in any peace talks.

Nixon's assessment came in an unscheduled 40-minute news conference at the White House. And while he talked in optimistic terms about Vietnamization, he warned Hanoi that "as long as the North Vietnamese have any Americans as prisoners-of-war, there will be Americans in South Vietnam—and enough Americans to give them an incentive to release the prisoners."

Nixon said the limits on use of U.S. ground combat troops outside Vietnam, as he has outlined them before, still hold; but "I am not going to place any limitation upon the use of air power except, of course, to rule out a rather ridiculous suggestion that is made from time to time ... that our air power might include the use of tactical nuclear weapons."

The President said there was no reason to believe mainland China would see the current South Vietnamese operation in Laos as a "threat against them or any reason therefore (for them) to react to it."

Asked whether Saigon might decide to launch an invasion of North Vietnam, he replied:

"I won't speculate on what South Vietnam may decide to do with regard to a possible incursion into North Vietnam in order to defend their national security."

His response seemed to indicate that such an invasion, at least, was an option available to Saigon.

He said the Laotian operation was going according to plan but conceded the South Vietnamese "have run into very heavy resistance on the road going into Sepone"—the Communist stronghold on the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Gen. Creighton W. Abrams has reported, Nixon added, that the South Vietnamese were waging the Laotian campaign "in a superior way."

"I can say today that as a result partially of our success in Cambodia (last spring) and based also on the present success of the Laotian operation, that the troop withdrawal program will go forward on schedule ...

"In terms of troop withdrawals, the Cambodian incursion insured it and allowed us, as a matter of fact, to set our sights somewhat higher. The success of this operation guarantees the continued program and gives the prospect of a greater troop withdrawal during the months ahead."

He said he would have an additional announcement on

Pentagon To Halt Spying On Civilians

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced today that all military counter intelligence and investigative activities—including surveillance of private citizens—would henceforth be under direct civilian control.

The action as prompted primarily by reports of Army abuses related to watching and keeping records on suspected subversives and other civilians, beginning with the 1967 Detroit riots.

Laird's announcement was less sweeping than he had indicated in December that it would be. The shakeup leaves the military directly in charge of foreign intelligence.

When he ordered a review of defense intelligence gathering two months ago, he said all intelligence gathering by the Defense Department should be placed directly under civilian control.

Laird put Robert F. Froehlke, assistant secretary of defense for administration, in charge of directing, managing and inspecting "military investigative and related counter intelligence activities."

A civilian organization called the Defense Investigative Review Council was set up with

Schoonmaker Agrees To Sell Sausalito Property

By WAT TAKESHITA

T. L. Schoonmaker, president of A. G. Schoonmaker Co. of Sausalito, today assured a bankruptcy referee that the company will sell its Sausalito property, pay off its creditors in full and continue operations on a reduced scale elsewhere in the Bay Area.

Schoonmaker testified today at the Marin Civic Center at a meeting of creditors before Conley S. Brown of Eureka, referee in bankruptcy.

August B. Rothschild of San Francisco, attorney for Schoonmaker, explained that this is not a bankruptcy to dissolve the company. "The company will continue on a reduced scale. We are merely presenting a plan to pay off creditors, and this plan requires an acceptance by the majority of the creditors."

"The company is solvent," said Rothschild. "It has a net worth of about three million dollars. But due to economic conditions, it ran out of working capital and it became necessary to file this plan of arrangement."

The company owes a total of $3,400,000. Schoonmaker said its total assets amount to $6,400,000, including accounts receivable and property.

Brown heard the testimony and continued the hearing for an indefinite period, probably about two months, to get a progress report on the sale of the 27-acre Schoonmaker property in Sausalito and details on how the creditors will be paid. Rothschild said the Sausalito

Nature Conservancy Purchase Of Slide Ranch Is Announced

By GEORGE NEVIN

Slide Ranch, 133 acres of rocky coastline north of Muir Beach, has been acquired by the Nature Conservancy, officials of the group announced today.

Bruce F. Wolfe, Conservancy Western representative, said a down payment has been made on the undeveloped land, but the full purchase price of $375,000 has yet to be raised. (See picture, page 9.)

The land was secured by a loan from Mrs. Kenneth Anderson of Orinda after two years of negotiations with the ranch's owner. San Francisco attorney Douglas P. Ferguson, who lives in Mill Valley and does volunteer work for the conservancy, obtained the loan and negotiated the sale, Wolfe said.

Slide Ranch lies between Shoreline Highway and the Pacific Ocean just north of the Muir Beach overlook and is the habitat of at least 100 species of animals and birds, including deer and bobcat.

The ranch had been recommended for acquisition by the California Parks and Recreation Department but lack of funds made its purchase impossible.

The Conservancy, a Privately supported land conservation organization which has preserved more than 225,000 acres of wild lands in America, was able to buy Slide Ranch because it is "independent and private" and is not bound by the same restrictions as government agencies, Wolfe said.

Eventual transfer of the land to the State Park System or other public agency is being considered as a possibility, he said.

Wolfe called Slide Ranch "one of the few open and wild acres on the Marin coast that is not in public ownership. Its preservation is vital if the unspoiled beauty of the coast is to be maintained."

Future recreation uses of the ranch by the general public are foreseen, he said, but for the time being educational groups will conduct scientific projects to study "nondestructive" uses of the land.

At present several University of California graduate students are conducting ecological surveys of the ranch's animal population and architecture students have completed a site analysis to determine how to protect the land.

The ranch is open to the public by appointment through the Nature Conservancy, 215 Market Street, San Francisco. Contributions for purchase of the ranch also may be sent there, Wolfe said.

Slide Ranch is the second West Marin ranch to be acquired by the Nature Conservancy this month. The group announced last week that George W. Wheelwright III had donated 535 upland acres of the 630-acre Green Gulch Ranch to the Conservancy. That ranch lies east of Shoreline Highway inland from Muir Beach.

McGovern Sees World War Threat

McGovern, already an announced presidential candidate for 1972, took strong issue with Nixon's assertion at a news conference Wednesday that he would not limit use of American air power in Southeast Asia while also refusing to rule out the possibility of a South Vietnamese invasion of the north.

Said McGovern: "I think he's given up on a political decision. He's flirting with World War III in Asia."

McGovern said that from now on, the administration would "have to bear the responsibility for every life lost."

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., said Nixon's statements "don't surprise me."

"It appears the President intends to do whatever he wants to in Southeast Asia and there is little we can do about it," said Fulbright.

At a Capitol news conference, McGovern said he believed Nixon was "still dreaming of some kind of military victory ... and that's just not in the cards." He charged that the President was "running out" on his campaign pledges to end the war.

Allied Drive Into Laos Claims Sharp Increase In U.S. Deaths

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist gunners today shot down five more U.S. helicopters in fighting in Laos and across the border in South Vietnam, where fighting subsided around the encircled American fire support base Scotch.

American military spokesmen did not give the locations where three helicopter gunships were shot down in Laos but said two crewmen were wounded. Two others were shot up in Quang Tri province across the border but managed to land with two crewmen wounded.

Unofficial figures showed at least 19 American helicopters have been destroyed in support of the South Vietnamese campaign in Laos in the past 11 days. U.S. casualties in the support role were 31 killed, 79 wounded and six missing in action. The casualties do not include GIs wounded in Communist shelling attacks.

The U.S. Command said today 51 Americans were killed in Indochina last week which included the first six days of the Allied drive into Laos. It was more than double the death toll for the previous week.

U.S. spokesman said the toll for the week ending last Saturday would rise still higher with addition of six deaths in helicopter crashes inside Laos.

The deaths were so far carried as "missing in action" because of delays in body recovery and identification.

The American death toll compared with 24 the previous week and the 51 killed was the most since the week ended Nov. 21 when 65 died. It raised to 44,459 the number of GIs killed since Jan. 1, 1961 and the year's toll to 251.

Another 217 Americans were wounded last week, a drop of 160 from the previous week and the lowest weekly total since the week ended Jan. 16 when 211 were wounded. A total of 294,946 Americans have been wounded in more than 10 years of war.

Federal Housing Stung In Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A Senate committee said today the federal government has intensified the nation's housing shortage by tearing down more homes than it helped build and by spending more to subsidize squalid homes than decent ones.

In a report on 33 years of "federal failure" in housing, the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs also accused the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) of adopting discriminatory policies which accelerated the decline of central cities into slums.

The committee said the FHA has refused to insure loans in central city neighborhoods. That, along with high interest rates, has meant that no housing money is available in the central city, it said.

"This practice constitutes a significant contribution to the deterioration of our nation's cities and the consequential social ills we claim to deplore, from rising crime rates to high infant mortality," the committee said.

"As far as FHA is concerned, the federal government has failed to relieve the housing crisis in this country," it added.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S,D., committee chairman, said in a statement accompanying the report that the government has built only 1.5 million housing units in the 33 years since the first federal housing legislation was adopted.

"The real need requires that level of output each year, not each third of a century," he said.

McGovern, an announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he would introduce a bill that would create a new agency — the Emergency Rural Home Development Administration— which would be charged by Congress with providing minimum housing, sanitation, clean water and such community facilities as day care centers for any town of 25,000 or below —including rural areas—within five years.

As bad as city housing is, he said, "two thirds of America's inadequate housing is in rural America and yet those areas receive less than 20 per cent of the nation's public housing."

The report said most federal help goes to middle or high income families at the expense of poor people whose homes are destroyed.

Reuther Crash Held Fault Of Altimeter

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Labor leader Walter Reuther died when the pilot of his plane was lured below a safe altitude by a freak illusion and a faulty altimeter in which parts were missing and one part was installed upside down, safety investigators said today.

Reuther, 62, head of the United Auto Workers union; his wife, her nephew, and a friend of Reuther's died along with the pilot and copilot when their small chartered jet crashed May 9 while attempting a night landing at Pellston, Mich.

In its report, the National Transportation Safety board said the twin-engine Lear jet clipped trees on a hilltop two miles from the runway, but the pilot was able to keep the plane airborne for one-half mile before it hit another clump of trees and crashed.

Investigators found the pilot's altimeter and an examination showed "some incorrect parts had been installed, some parts were missing and one part was installed upside down."

The altimeter apparently was functioning during the flight but did not give the pilot an accurate reading.

Normally on a landing approach the copilot's altimeter serves as a cross check for the pilot's altimeter, but the investigators said the plane was circling to the left as it prepared to land and the copilot may have been looking out the left side of the cabin toward the Emmet County Airport. "In such a case, he may have been obtaining his altitude information from the pilot's altimeter," the report said.

Sniper-Type Killing Of Nun

DETROIT, Mich. (UPI)—A nun was shot and killed early today when two shots were fired through her bedroom window at St. Cecilia's Convent on the city's west side.

Murder warrants were sought against four unidentified suspects who were arrested in an apartment building across the street from the convent, police said.

Police said Julita Maria Williams, 37, was dead on arrival at Henry Ford Hospital. She had been struck in the temple by one of two sniper-type shots fired through her bedroom window about 1 a.m., they said.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Guards Doubled

ISTANBUL (UPI)—Turkish police doubled their guard at all foreign consulates today after six explosions rocked U.S. and British establishments across Istanbul, shattering windows but causing no serious damage.

Explosions late Wednesday hit two U.S. military installations, the British consulate, the Turkish American Foreign Trade Bank, the Anglo-Dutch Shell Oil Co. research laboratories and a private engineering college.

Another blast in Ankara damaged a car parked in front of an apartment house where an American family lived. Two schoolboys in the capital were injured, one with loss of an arm, when a box they found in the street exploded in their hands.

Pair Indicted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) —Alabama's first black sheriff since reconstruction and one of his black deputies are to be tried in federal court in April or May on charges of beating a prisoner.

Macon County Sheriff Lucious Amerson and Deputy Richard Coleman Jr. surrendered to federal authorities Wednesday and were released on $1,000 bond each. They were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The two officers are accused in a two-count indictment of inflicting summary punishment on Wilbert Dean Harris, also black, last Aug. 22 after a gunfight at the Macon County jail in Tuskegee.

Amerson could not be reached for comment on the indictment.

Berlin Status

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State William P. Rogers and West German Foregin Minister Walter Scheel have concluded that Moscow still is seriously interested in reaching a negotiated agreement on the future of Berlin, diplomatic sources said today.

Scheel ended a visit to Washington today. He met with both Rogers and President Nixon, and the sources said he took the view the four power Berlin talks now are entering a crucial stage and that the Soviets are seeking to influence their course through a "war of nerves" carried out by press reports about Soviet dissatisfaction.

Scheel was said to feel the Kremlin would make no fundamental decisions in the Berlin talks until after the 24th Communist Party Congress in Moscow in March.

Liquor Store Employe Shot

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Two holdup men killed one liquor store employee and wounded another Wednesday night during a holdup.

The victim was identified as Thomas J. Morley, 19, San Francisco while Stephen Kaiser, 23, was rushed to Mission Emergency Hospital for surgery.

To Study Rocks

The rocks were in bags stowed in the mobile quarantine van that Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell left aboard their recovery ship when they flw home last week. The van was due here on a cargo plane early today.

Most of the lunar samples examined so far consisted of rocks no bigger than apples and a large amount of soil collected from the dusty Fra Mauro Valley landing site.

The second aluminum sample container was opened Wednesday in the lunar receiving laboratory It contained mostly soil samples. The first box was opened last week and it held rocks and soil collected during the astronauts' long hike up a crater capped ridge.

Limited Record

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The AFL-CIO said today the last Congress made a good, but limited record of progress and blamed President Nixon for its shortcomings.

"President Nixon has tried erroneously to pin a do-nothing label on the 91st Congress," the labor federation said. "But it was administration policy and presidential vetoes that kept that record from being better."

The AFL-CIO, in a 116-page booklet entitled "Labor Looks at the 91st Congress" said the limited progress left the new Congress with a long list of unfinished business.

"It must tackle many new problems: public service jobs, accelerated public works, quality medical care for all americans, a minimum wage for all workers above the poverty level, reforms in welfare to insure all Americans the right to a decent standard of living, protection for the consumer and the environment," said the booklet, prepared by legislative director Andrew Biemiller.

Quits Interior

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House said today that Fred J. Russell has resigned as undersecretary of the Interior Department.

A government source said Russell was under pressure to quit because of "several embarassing decisions" when he was heading the department between the dismissal of former Secretary Walter J. Hickel and installation of Rogers C. B. Morton as secretary.

The White House would not make any other comment than "he has tendered his resignation," but the source said Russell submitted it Wednesday.

A PERSONAL PROTEST

Walking for peace, 40-year-old Mrs. Louise Bruyn of Newton, Mass., begins her 45-day walk to Washington, D. C. Mrs. Bruyn, mother of three teen-agers, said yesterday at the start of the walk that the undertaking was a personal protest against the war in Indochina because "I can no longer sit in the comfort of our beautiful home, knowing the death and destruction we are causing in another land." Hanoi Accuses U. S. Of Planning N. Viet Drive

PARIS (UPI)—The Communists accused the United States today of planning new North Vietnamese military adventures which would threaten Red China. The United States rejected the charges and offered immediate negotiations on the withdrawal of all foreign troops from invaded areas of Indochina.

U.S. Ambassador David K.E. Bruce reminded the Communists of President Nixon's stated resolve to withdraw all U.S. forces from South Vietnam as part of an over-all settlement and told Hanoi's Xuan Thuy "everyone knows" North Vietnamese troops are in Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam.

"I see no reason why we cannot now begin immediately to negotiate an agreed timetable for the complete withdrawal and return home of all those troops—both yours and ours—so that the people of Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam can determine their future free of the presence of all outside forces," Bruce said.

Quake Pushes Range Of Mountains South

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The destructive Los Angeles earthquake was so powerful that during the massive temblor the mountains at the western end of the San Gabriel range rose three feet and then slipped three feet to the south.

State Geologists told a news conference Wednesday that the quake also caused several thousand landslides in the mountain range area and that studies were under way to try to determine whether heavy rain could cause future earth slippage.

However, Westerly G. Bruer, chief of the California Division of Mines and Geology, said an investigation so far has shown no reason to believe that another destructive quake would occur in the northern San Fernando Valley for a number of years—probably for several decades. The mountain range borders the valley—the worst hit area in the Feb. 9 earthquake.

Bruer said the quake measured 6.6 on the Richter scale and was rated as a "moderate to large" temblor but not a "great earthquake" such as the one in 1906 that hit San Francisco with an intensity of 8.3.

However, Douglas Morton, a state geologist, said the quake was powerful enough that "the mountains rose up three feet in relation to the valley floor and moved three feet to the south."

Damage from the quake, which took the lives of 64 persons, was still being tolled as some good news came from the federal government.

Ralph D. Burns, western regional director of the office of emergency preparedness, said a bill which President Nixon signed into law last Dec. 31, provided for the federal government to pick up the entire tab for damage to public property. It also provided for funds for all or nearly all wages for emergency service.

The public bill now totals an estimated $236.5 million and still is growing.

However, the government will provide relatively little financial relief for owners of homes or businesses—whose generally uninsured property damage so far totals $156.4 million. The list still is growing. But homeowners and private businessmen are eligible for low interest loans and grants of $3,500 in some cases.

In the major shock area—called the "disaster triangle"—a block-by-block canvass of buildings was 80 per cent complete.

Posted as unsafe by city inspectors in the 40-square mile area with the San Fernando Valley at its center were 271 private homes, 32 apartment buildings containing 882 dwelling units, and 234 private businesses.

Those buildings will have to be repaired to meet city standards before occupancy or be demolished.

Telephone Rate Increase Asked

San Francisco (UPI) — The staff of the California Public Utilities Commission Wednesday proposed an increase of $62.8 million a year for Pacific Telephone Co.

The company has requested an annual increase of $195 million, and hearings on its proposal are in recess until Feb. 24 when the CPUC staff will be cross-examined on its recommendation.

The staff said its recommendation would yield Pacific Telephone 7.64 per cent, compared to the current 6.77 per cent return on its investment.

Proposed Peninsula Highway Hit Again

After six public hearings, some Tiburon and Belvedere residents doubt the new highway system proposed for the Tiburon Peninsula will solve more problems than it will create.

They voiced their objections and concerns last night at a joint meeting of the Tiburon and Belvedere planning commissions.

Most of the residents were concerned that the new road would cut off access to Richardson Bay. Many opposed any new highway in order to discourage population growth.

The proposed new highway system, designed to meet anticipated traffic and population for the peninsula with respect to tideline ecology and recreational facilities, was prepared by a joint Belvedere-Tiburon Transportation Committee over the last six months.

Alvin R. Kuhn, Tiburon planning commissioner, explained to the 50 residents in attendance that the first section beginning near Reed Ranch Road would be a four-lane highway extending past the intersection at Trestle Glen Boulevard to Avenida Miraflores.

This area, designated as phase I, he said, would be placed as far from the bay shore as possible leaving room on the tidelands for a recreation and cultural center, the sanitary district, Richardson Bay Park, and a recreational area around the knoll.

According to Wayne Moody, Tiburon planning director, Phase I, if approved by both cities and the State Division of Highways, would be under construction by 1973 and be financed entirely by the state.

Every two years thereafter, Moody said, a new phase of highway construction would begin until the entire length of new road to downtown Tiburon is completed.

Most of the complaints from residents centered on phase II of the project.

The proposed plan would narrow the four-lane highway to two lanes from the knoll near Avenida Miraflores to Rock Hill Road. Moody said the two lane road would be constructed close to the shore leaving the old Tiburon Boulevard as a local service Road.

Residents of this area between Pine Terrace and the Tennis Club would be most affected by the new highway. The new two-lane road would cut off their access to the bay, leaving little room for a proposed bicycle-pedestrian path along the shores of Richardson Bay. (They had voted against the proposal at previous meetings.)

Moody explained that the remainder of the two-lane road would parallel the old Tiburon boulevard on its westward side.

"Why narrow the road from a four-lane highway to a two-lane highway?" questioned several of the residents at the meeting.

Kuhn explained that a large number of cars coming into Tiburon off Highway 101 would gradually peel-off into the residential area starting at Trestle Glen Boulevard. By the time the traffic reached the Hilarita area, he said, their numbers would be diminished even with the increased populations projected for 1990.

One woman questioned why other possibilities have not been presented, why, for example, the new highway was not planned for Ridge Road, and the tideline ecology protected from the proposed construction.

Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commissioner Donald K. Loomis said Ridge Road had been considered but that maintaining open space in that area was considered a higher priority. He said that the goal was to keep as far from the bay shore as possible.

Loomis said that in the area near Pine Terrace where the new highway would parallel the bicycle path, a small part of the bay could be filled to provide greater distance between the road and pathways.

Other residents resented the lack of other alternative plans presented at the meeting.

"What is the function of this meeting tonight," asked one man, "to convince us this plan is right?"

Kuhn explained as he did to similar questions that the committee's proposal was considered the best of several proposals and was recommended for consideration by the joint planning commission.

The only other alternative, Kuhn said, was that originally proposed by the state Division of Highways to make the entire route into Tiburon a four-lane highway close to the shore and partially on filled land.

Lawrence Lab Building A Super Atom Smasher

BERKELEY (UPI) — The atom smasher which created the last four manmade elements has been shut down for modifications which scientists hope will lead to the discovery of several more.

They theorize that some of the elements which "Super-Hilac" can make when it goes back into operation next fall will last millions of years rather than the millionths of seconds of recent manmade materials.

Super-Hilac — the modified heavy ion linear accelerator at Lawrence Radiation Laboratory of the University of California—will have the potential to create virtually every super-heavy element that has been proposed in theory.

The $3 million, six-month alteration announced today will make the machine the first one capable of accelerating ions as heavy as uranium—the heaviest natural element—to energies high enough for penetration of heavy target nuclei. It is hoped such collisions will create previously undiscovered elements when hundreds of protons and neutrons combine in new forms.

Before its modification, Hilac created elements 102 through 105—although Russian scientists and Berkeley physicists are still arguing over who really first found the short-lived element 104.

Former Monk Denies Plot

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A former Benedictine monk who describes himself as a "married Catholic priest involved in an experimental peace movement" has denied an alleged plot to kidnap a high federal official.

Paul Mayer, named by a federal grand jury as a coconspirator in the alleged plot, told a news conference Wednesday, "We have rejected all acts such as those of which we have been accused."

Mayer is one of seven persons named as coconspirators in a bizarre plot to kidnap presidential security adviser Henry Kissinger and to blow up an underground heating system in the nation's capital.

BRUCE P. COLLINS

Greenbrae Scout Cited For Effort

Bruce P. Collins of Greenbrae has been awarded the Medal of Merit by the Marin Council of Boy Scouts for trying to revive a heart attack victim.

On May 29, 1970, the 14-year-old Eagle Scout of Troop 11, Kentfield, made a determined though unsuccessful attempt to revive Max Pollak, 84, of Sausalito, through mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

The medal was awarded upon the recommendation of the National Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts of America.

Carpet Tests Are Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In 1967 Congress passed a law directing the Commerce Department to set standards preventing distribution of dangerously flammable rugs, carpets and other products.

In 1970, with standards still not set, 32 patients were killed in a Marietta, Ohio, nursing home fire. Officials said most of them were asphyxiated by smoke from rubber backing on a carpet.

This year, the Commerce Department set flammability standards for rugs and carpets.

Today, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), which must enforce the standards, proposed tests to be used by manufacturers so they can certify their carpeting is not dangerously flammable.

Lower Enrollment Ceiling Planned At UC Campuses

BERKELEY (UPI)—Enrollment at the University of California will not increase as rapidly as predicted in the early 1960s, a study showed Wednesday.

Neither President Charles J. Hitch nor the board of regents has announced a change in planning yet, but a study indicates the university's nine campuses will have a total enrollment by 1980 of 135,000 students, instead of the present 106,000.

Earlier predictions were for a total of 250,000.

The most recent forecasts are from a working paper authorized by Loren Furado, vice president in charge of planning and analysis.

The working paper forecasts that both the Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses will increase to 30,000 but that newer and smaller campuses will not grow rapidly.

Campuses at Irvine, Santa Cruz, Riverside and San Diego each will have a ceiling of 10,000, instead of 27,000, the study showed, while Davis will have 16,000 and Santa Barbara 15,000. For Davis an enrollment of 25,000 previously had been predicted and the figure for Santa Barbara had been 25,000.

Site Is Found For Belvedere Antenna

After long search, Cable TV of Marin appears to have found a satisfactory site in Belvedere for construction of a community television antenna to serve the island community.

City Planning Commissioner William H. Rafter said commissioners Tuesday looked favorably on an application by the cable firm for a revocable license to build an antenna on city-owned property on the southeastern tip of Corinthian Island above the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Commissioners told Robert Pace, representing the cable company, to return March 15 with the exact location of the proposed antenna pinpointed.

Rafter said Pace told the commission the atenna, located on a steep downslope below Belevue Avenue, will not block residential views.

Cable TV of Marin has waged a year-long battle to find an antennasite to serve Belvedere. The firm had located a site on Mount Ring in Tiburon but the Tiburon City Council in December blocked installation of the necessary transmission lines over city rights-of-way to Belvedere.

Rafter said Williams subdivided the property without permission from the planners and sold a strip of land to a neighbor for a greenbelt.

Williams argued unsuccessfully that it is to Belvedere's advantage to have a green area on the tip of the island.

Tiburon Doctor Running For Reed Schools Post

A Tiburon physician today filed candidacy papers for Gordon C. Wright's seat on the Reed School District board. Wright is the target of a recall election tentatively set for April 20.

Dr. John J. Osborn, of 2960 Paradise Drive, filed today in the Marin County Schools office, the first person to seek Wright's post. He is running, he said, because of his concern with "the erosion of quality education (in the district) in an atmosphere of distrust and hostility . . ."

Osborn, 53 years old and a 16-year resident of the district, is director of the intensive care unit at Presbyterian Hospital in San Francisco and is one of the developers of the heart-lung machine.

He and his wife Anne have seven children, one of whom still attends school in the district.

The candidate believes "good education can be carried out only in an atmosphere of cooperation and trust, which can and must be restored to the Reed District." He feels he can "help all elements in the community to understand each others' problems and to work together."

"We must restore the process where the board sets policy, administrators administer and teachers teach and where trustees show respect for the judgment and competence of staff and concerned citizens," Osborn said.

He feels the district must show fiscal responsibility, set goals and objectives, evaluate personnel and programs on a regular basis and work for "sensible change and innovation."

The candidate holds a BA degree from Princeton University and an M.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md. He has taught and done medical research at Stanford and New York universities.

During World War II he served as a captain with the Army Medical Corps.

Leaders of the campaign to oust Wright, chairman of the school board, filed a recall petition against him with the Marin County Elections Office Feb. 3. The petition, containing 1,626 valid signatures (1,140 signatures are needed) was verified by County Elections Officer Peter C. Meyer Feb. 5.

Four other school board candidates have filed papers for the April 20 ballot, the county schools office reported today.

By district, they were:

Novato Unified School District — Raleigh D. Floyd of 2057 Carolyn Way, Novato, an engineer.

Lagunitas — Wilma M. McVey of 50 Forest Drive, Forest Knolls, a housewife.

San Anselmo — John F. Hulpke of 20 Oak Knoll Drive, San Anselmo, listing himself as a business administrator-teacher.

Zoning Bar Voted For Apartments

Seeking closer controls in zoning, the Petaluma Planning Commission last night deleted apartments as permitted uses in professional-medical zones.

Assistant Planner Richard D. A. Anderson said the commission and staff felt that multi-family dwellings should become a conditional use in the professional-medical zones.

Anderson said the commission felt that apartments should not just routinely be permitted since they may not always be compatible with medical offices.

The Petaluma Planning Commission also:

HOSPITAL — Heard a report that Quantas Development Co. had withdrawn its request to rezone land behind McDowell School for a planned hospital. Anderson said the firm may refile after the six month moratorium on rezoning is completed.

CREEKS — Approved plans of the Sonoma County Water Agency to widen and extend Capri Creek and to extend the Shasta Avenue conduit.

REZONING — Delayed until the March 16 meeting the request of Valley Green Co. rezone land on South McDowell Boulevard for a subdivision and the request of Caster Mobilehomes Corp. to rezone land east of Highway 101 south of Corona Road for a mobile home park.

Air Force Flies Blood To Center

A blood sample from a 10-year-old San Rafael boy suffering from leukemia was flown to Houston, Tex., yesterday by a Hamilton Air Force Base pilot for a vital test.

The test was necessary before experimental treatment could be undertaken in an effort to save the boy's life, the Air Force reported.

The Air Force undertook the flight because the blood had to be delivered in Texas in six hours and a commercial airline trip would have taken seven hours, the Air Force reported.

Maj. Russell Weber of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron made the trip in three hours to Ellington Air Force Base, Tex., and the blood sample was taken to M.D. Anderson Hospital, part of the University of Texas.

Antisuicide Center Gets New Office

Directors of the Marin Suicide Prevention Center learned yesterday that the center now has a lease on quarters in a county building in San Rafael and can move in either tomorrow or Monday.

Keith C. Craig, president of the center's board, said he signed the lease Tuesday.

The center does not yet have a target date for installing telephone apparatus to receive crisis calls from potential suicides, he noted. The new organization needs more funds before it can go into full scale operation, he explained.

Meanwhile, volunteers will begin equipping the office and preparing files. Craig said donations of stationery, office machines and furniture are sought.

William G. Thompson of San Rafael yesterday was appointed volunteer director of operations for the office.

The board elected Craig president, to replace Mrs. Walter Lyons, who resigned earlier this month.

Board members and nearly two dozen volunteer members who attended yesterday's meeting learned that the center has applied for state funds. They discussed plans to recruit supporting members, who would not necessarily be active participants in suicide prevention operations, Craig reported. Membership in the nonprofit corporation is $10 a year, he said.

Board member Hugh Hardin reported that the center and the College of Marin may cooperate in training a second class of volunteer suicide prevention workers to augment the two dozen men and women already available for duty when the emergency telephones are installed.

A $6,711 Budget Hike Is Proposed

The Marin County Comprehensive Health Planning Council yesterday approved a proposed budget for fiscal 1971-72 totaling $37,711.

According to Ray K. Bolinger, president of the council, the budget, to be forwarded to the county, is made up primarily of salaries.

About $24,000 is slated for the council's health planner, his secretary and half-time clerical helper.

Bolinger said about $4,500 is for fringe benefits and the remainder for office operation.

This year's budget totaled about $31,000. The increase, Bolinger said, is for the part-time clerical help and raising costs of office operation.

The council also accepted the resignation of director Ernest N. Kettenhofen who resigned last month due to business pressures. The council approved appointment of Ben Dial to the director's seat vacated by Kettenhofen. Dial is a vice president with Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Marinites' LSD Trial Begins In Mendocino

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — Jury selection has begun in the case of four Marinites charged with felony drug offenses stemming from a $3 million LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June.

After both of Mendocino County's two superior court judges and a visiting judge were disqualified earlier this month, Judge Kenneth M. Eymann of Sonoma County was assigned to hear the case which opened Tuesday.

A total of six men and one woman are being tried on felony counts arising from the LSD raid.

Marinites charged are Craig Burns Champie, 20, of Fairfax; John Rene Rodigou, 23, and Michael B. Aylwin, 23, both of San Rafael, and Wayne Butler, 23, of Forest Knolls.

All are charged with conspiring to make LSD, manufacturing it, possessing it and having the drug for sale.

Innocent Plea To Marijuana

A jury trial was set for the week of March 1.

Minard was arrested Dec. 15 when Novato police stopped his car because of a broken tail light. Marijuana was found in the car and in Minard's pocket, police said.

$400,000 Suit In Timber Land Fuss

A $400,000 suit was filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court on behalf of the estate of Dr. Ethel Righetti against an Oregon firm which had contracted to cut timber on her 1,400-acre ranch on Bolinas Ridge.

The firm, Mathews, Humbert and Walker of Northbend, Ore., has ceased its timber operation on the property, according to San Francisco Attorney William H. Orrick Jr., who filed the suit for Marie R. Weaver and Milton R. Righetti, co-executors of Dr. Righetti's estate.

Dr. Righetti died last Feb. 28.

The suit charges that George Walker, Robert L. Mathews and Jerald R. Humbert, owners of the firm, failed to pay a $350,000 balance on a $450,000 contract to purchase marketable redwood and douglas fir on the ranch.

The suit also asks $50,000 for damages to the property; $5,401 for back taxes on the land, and $5,000 for legal fees incurred by the estate in connection with lawsuits stemming from the logging operation.

The estate also is suing West Coast Orient Co. for $60,401, — saying the company guaranteed the performance of the logging operation.

Dr. Righetti and the Oregon firm were the subject of a suit filed by Marin County which was settled in 1969 when an Alameda County Superior Court judge ruled the logging could continue if the loggers posted a $50,000 bond and set up silt measuring devices to protect creeks in the area.

Last year, the firm came under attack for unattended fires. The Marin County Board of Supervisors recommended that the firm's logging permit be revoked, and criminal charges of illegal burning were filed against the company.

A Death, Wounding In Larkspur

A woman died, apparently of a pill overdose, and a man was found bleeding from a serious throat wound in two separate incidents yesterday in a Larkspur trailer park, police said.

Officers said Patricia Louise Kiesel of space G-11 at the Marin Trailer Park, 2130 Redwood Highway, was found dead at about 7:50 p.m., apparently from an overdose of pills.

Five hours later, officers said, they responded to another call from the trailer park, this time finding William Wise Jr. of space G-8 bleeding profusely from a six-inch gash in the throat.

He was transported to Marin General Hospital where officials today declined to report his condition.

According to the Marin County Coroner's Office, Mrs. Kiesel's 12-year-old daughter, Sondra, discovered her mother unconscious in bed at 6:30 a.m.

The girl told officers she attempted to awaken her mother at 6:30 a.m., again at 7:15 a.m. and then at about 7:45 a.m. noticed the woman had stopped breathing. The daughter sought help from a neighbor, who phoned the fire department. Attempts to revive Mrs. Kiesel were unsuccessful.

Mrs. Kiesel was a native of Missouri and had lived in Marin for two years. She was employed as a bookkeeper in San Francisco.

Funeral will be Monday at Wacker-Helderly Mortuary in St. Louis, Mo., with burial at St. Paul's Church cemetery.

Officers said Wise, employed at Value Center Stores in San Francisco, was discovered by his employer after Wise fail to report to work.

He was found lying in a pool of blood in his bedroom. A knife was found nearby.

The South Vietnamese Command said government deaths totaled 478, the highest number since last June 6 at the peak of the Allied invasion of Cambodia, when 600 combat deaths were reported.

The number of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed was listed at 1,908, raising to 701,058 the number of Communist troops killed in the war.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese forces killed 25 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops at dusk Wednesday in Laos and were meeting only sporadic resistance in the drive.

The U.S. Command reported the loss of an Air Force F4 Phantom jet in the lower panhandle of Laos Tuesday. It was the 100th U.S. plane lost over Laos since last March 10. Both crewmen were missing.

U.S. spokesmen gave few details of the situation near fire base Scotch, 10 miles from the Laotian border, other than to say the fighting had subsided. Reports earlier said more than a company of reinforcements had been rushed to the battleground to the aid of an outnumbered platoon of GIs fighting a reinforced company of Communist troops attacking from all sides.

South Vietnamese spokesmen said the 16,000-man government force which swept into Laos 11 days ago was meeting only occasional resistance and had killed 25 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese near the town of Lao Bao.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese forces operating on Highway 7 more than 60 miles northeast of Phnom Penh killed at least 116 Communist troops today in two major actions.

troop withdrawals before May 1.

Nixon said the United States continues with the Paris talks primarily because it hopes to reach some agreement on the prisoners-of-war issue, but he added:

"We have to realize that as far as the negotiations affecting a political settlement for South Vietnam is concerned, time is running out for the North Vietnamese if they expext to negotiate with the United States. Because as our forces come out of South Vietnam, it means that the responsibility for the negotiations, increasingly, then becomes that of South Vietnam.

"I do not want to suggest that there are any more concessions coming from our side to North Vietnam. We are not going to make any more concessions. The time is for them next to act on the principles we have laid down."

property is valued at about $3 million.

Schoonmaker, operating in Sausalito since 1948, had 450 employees at one time, but this has dropped to 140. The company will operate in Sausalito until about July or August, said Schoonmaker. When the property is sold, Schoonmaker said, the company will move to an undetermined location in the Bay Area, not in Sausalito, to continue operations on a reduced scale. The company assembles electric generators and manufactures diesel engines and parts.

The company has been heavily engaged in defense contracts, and Schoonmaker has said substantial losses were suffered on Air Force contracts.

Last February, the company was low bidder on a $31 million contract from the Army for electrical generators. But the Army awarded the contract to the second low bidder, claiming Schoonmaker had not met specifications.

A federal court judge, however, ordered the Defense Department to award the contract to Schoonmaker after it was disclosed the Army had given the higher bidder private information.

The Defense Department appealed that order and the matter is in the courts, a situation Schoonmaker has said has proved costly.

nation's medical bill increased 11 per cent, from $63 billion to $70 billion and in the last 10 years has shot up by 170 per cent.

In the last decade, Nixon said, hospital costs have risen five times as fast as other prices.

Under the Nixon proposal, all employers would be required to guarantee that all workers and their families received health insurance that would cover hospital services, physician services both in and out of the hospital, full maternity care, baby care including immunizations, laboratory services and certain other medical expenses.

To protect against catastrophic costs, the benefits would have to include not less than $50,000 for each family member during the period of the contract.

Rec Center Work Approved

The Terra Linda Recreation and Park District board last night authorized letting of bids for revamping the office space and pool area entrance at the recreation center as well as purchasing new filters for the pool.

The entire project is estimated at $15,000, according to Zonwice Mulhaupt, general manager of the district.

Harold Reese, new board member appointed by the Board of Supervisors to a vacancy created by the resignation of Cecelia Martz, was sworn in last night, Mrs. Mulhaupt said.

Froehlke as its chief. It will set up the first policy on surveillance activities ever applied to the entire Defense Department to "further strengthen civilian control" over those functions.

Froehlke said one of his agency's duties would be to gather intelligence related to military participation in controlling civil disturbances.

It was the civil disturbance role—primarily assigned to the army—that caused the problems leading to the shakeup.

"The first culprit was the domestic situation in 1967 and 1968 (a time when the Army was called to duty in many riot situations and prepared itself to be called for others that never occured)," Foehlke said.

"The second culprit was that civilian officials ordered the military in. They weren't precise enough (in their instructions on what information should be gathered) and in most cases issued oral instead of written instructions."

"The third culprit was the military. Although reluctant at first to become involved in civilian affairs, it often overreacted when it got in."

HANK BANISHED FOREVER

Hank, the banished cat of Harry's Mart, pries in vain at the door forever closed to him by the county health department. Despite petitions bearing hundreds of signatures, health inspectors have ruled that "the law's the law", their hands are tied, and the venerable cat will not be allowed to spend his declining years on his favorite stool in the Fairfax neighborhood market.

Harbor Carriers Again Eyes Ferry Service Into Sausalito

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — Harbor Carriers, operator of commuter and excursion ferries to Tiburon, is about to try again to extend similar service to Sausalito, it was disclosed yesterday.

The company won a Public Utilities Commission certificate to serve Sausalito three years ago, but failed to get the city council to approve use of a dock between the Sausalito Yacht Club and the Trade Fair.

The company's prospects, however, appeared uncertain in light of the council's vote Tuesday to support a recommendation by the PUC's staff that the certificate be revoked for failure to provide the service. The council's resolution said that service by Harbor Carriers would duplicate that of the Golden Gate Bridge District.

Failure to provide the service was the focal point for yesterday's hearing by a PUC examiner on a staff investigation of Harbor Carriers. The investigation was ordered by the PUC last August in the face of passengers' complaints about Harbor Carriers operations.

The investigation was consolidated with a rehearing of the company's permit to schedule trips between Tiburon and Alcatraz Island. The City of Tiburon successfully petitioned for a rehearing, arguing it could not accommodate parking facilities for persons who would use the service.

In a related move, the PUC was informed by Harbor Carriers and Milton McDonough, operator of a ferry between Tiburon and Angel Island, that they had settled their three-year dispute over McDonough's claim that Harbor Carriers was providing competing regular service without a PUC permit.

McDonough had filed a complaint against Harbor Carriers with the PUC, but dropped it yesterday in light of their settlement. It stated that Harbor Carriers would stop providing regular local service and stop soliciting passengers in Tiburon for service to Angel Island.

John G. Lyons, attorney for Harbor Carriers, disclosed his client's new move to get a dock in Sausalito during his questioning of the city's planning director, H. Eric Borgwardt.

Borgwardt conceded that the council's resolution asking that the certificate be revoked had not been on the agenda Tuesday, and that Harbor Carriers had not been notified about the matter. The resolution was brought up Tuesday night by Mayor Alexander R. Imlay, Borgwardt said.

The planner said that the bridge district was amply providing for both commuter and tourist traffic. He said the city had a limited capacity for ferry passenger traffic.

Harbor Carriers' bid to get a dock in Sausalito could be its last under its existing PUC certificate, since the PUC staff recommended the company be given only 90 days more to start the service or have its certificate revoked. The 90-day count, however, would be from the date of the PUC's order, which itself could be 90 days from now, the staff said.

Lyons' ire over the unheralded action by the Sausalito City Council was overshadowed by his angry denunciation of the bridge district when its attorney introduced a statement outlining its ferry service to Sausalito.

Lyons branded the statement by Gen.Mgr. Dale W. Luehring "nothing but a left-handed attempt to influence this commission." He insisted that the district was trying to introduce "facts highly prejudicial to Harbor Carriers," asserting "it would be outrageous to have this material read into the record."

The bridge district's attorney, Ross E. Stromberg, suggested that Lyons was "reading too much into this document," and said it only was "simply a summary of our official schedule."

The hearing examiner, Arthur M. Mooney, agreed with Stromberg and assured Lyons that his objections had been "noted." Mooney also assured Lyons that Luehring's statement would not be considered as evidence, but "just a portion of the formal file."

The hearing was to continue today in the State Building.

Man Insists Bomb Stunt Proved Case

Michael Lee Humphrey, still insisting that Marin County Civic Center security is not so secure, was arraigned yesterday on a misdemeanor charge of obstructing public officers.

Humphrey, 32, of San Anselmo, was arrested Tuesday when he attempted to smuggle what appeared to be bomb components into the administration building.

He said the county has spent more than $400,000 on a security system that doesn't work.

"I agree there should be security, but the way they're going about it is ineffective," Humphrey said.

"$400,000 for security would be really groovy if it made this place secure, but it doesn't."

The self-employed maintenanee man said it was the weight of a book he carried, and not a metal detector, that tripped up his plan to confront the board of supervisors with proof of the building's insecurity.

The hollowed-out book contained modeling clay, resembling plastic explosive.

A brown paper bag in which he carried a clock in a carved out grapefruit also contained sliced pineapple wrapped in tinfoil.

If the clock had registered on the metal detector, he reasoned, deputies looking in the bag would have assumed it was the tinfoil that registered.

He said he was surprised he was caught, but still thought "a person bent on destruction can do it."

Humphrey was freed on $625 bail to return to Marin Municipal Court March 3 to enter a plea to the charge against him.

Oklahoma Park Chief And Patrolman Shot To Death

EUFAULA, Okla. (UPI)—The superintendent of Fountainhead State Park and an Oklahoma patrolman were shot to death and a park ranger critically wounded Wednesday, apparently in a struggle that developed while they were arresting two soldiers believed wanted by federal authorities.

The bodies of Park Superintendent Leo Newton and Highway Patrolman Bill J. Walker, 35, were found near the park's airstrip by Newton's son, Tim, 14. Park Ranger W.L. Pickens was sprawled a few feet away.

The highway patrol said more than 500 state, local and federal officers had joined the search for two suspects identified as William B. Franklin, 28, and Edwin Edgar Jones, 24, both of Mineral Wells, Tex. A patrol spokesman said Franklin was wanted as a deserter from Vietnam and Jones was AWOL from Ft. Hood, Tex.

Pickins underwent surgery at a Tulsa hospital.

Highway Patrol Chief Bill Mayberry rushed to the scene from his Oklahoma City headquarters. Roadblocks were thrown across every road in the park area within 20 minutes of the shooting and within an hour the borders of Texas and Arkansas were sealed, he said.

"The two boys, and we know who they are, had been stopped by the park superintendent and the ranger," Mayberry said.

Art Of Bonsai Classes Slated

A series of four classes on the art of Bonsai cultivation will be given at 7 p.m. Mondays beginning March 8 at the Marin Co-op in Corte Madera.

Instructor Kenneth Osaki of the Marin Nakayoshi Club, a Japanese cultural and social society, said the course will include selection of Bonsai trees, form and style, and the principles of training Bonsai.

Classes will be limited to 20 people chosen on a first-come basis. Reservations ean be made with Mrs. James C. Staley of 243 Golden Hind Passage in Corte Madera.

84 Strep Cases Top Disease List

Eight-four cases of streptococcus infections topped the list of communicable diseases recorded in Marin last week.

According to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, Marin County Health Officer, there were 69 cases of German measles, 22 cases of gonorrhea and one case of infectious hepatitis recorded.

Agency Has 40 Ready To Fill Jobs

The Marin City Employment Service has 40 qualified applicants seeking employment in a variety of jobs, director Nesbit Crutchfield reported.

He said the individuals, who have all been screened by the employment service, are "qualified and responsible men and women who very much want employment in semi-professionak, semi-skilled and non-skilled work."

Most of the applicants are high school graduates seeking jobs as construction helpers, janitors, domestics, clerks and general laborers, he said.

Crutchfield said the employment service was formed three weeks ago to help unemployed persons in Marin City find work. Unemployment in the community is currently about 33 per cent, according to the director.

Some of the Marin City applicants have transportation and could accept jobs in Richmond, Oakland or San Francisco.

Employers having positions to offer may contact Crutchfield at the employment service office which operates out of St. Andres Presbyterian Church weekdays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Cost of the service is funded by the church.

OIL SPILL RECREATED — Brown-black swirls of oil emerge through the Golden Gate into the Pacific Ocean portion (foreground) of the U.S. Army Engineers' Bay-Delta hydraulic model in Sausalito. The army recreated last month's oil spill in miniature, for the visit yesterday of William D. Ruckelshaus. Ruckelshaus is administrator of the newly created federal Environmental Protection Agency in Washington.

Promise Of Peripheral Canal Probe

A new federal environmental watchdog agency will conduct a thorough investigation of the Pheripheral Canal to determine its effect on the Sacramento Delta, the agency's head said yesterday.

William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the recently created Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), promised the inquiry after touring the Army Corps of Engineers San Francisco Bay-Delta hydraulic model in Sausalito.

Ruckelshaus, who paused briefly to answer reporters' questions after the tour before returning to San Francisco, promised a "full-scale investigation" of the canal, which has been criticized by conservationists as a threat to the Delta's rich marshlands.

"If it (the canal) is found dangerous," he said, "my agency has the power to stop it."

But he declined, in advance of the investigation, to give an opinion of the canal. Aides said he was made aware of the controversial nature of the Peripheral Canal only yesterday during his tour of the model.

Earlier, Ruckelshaus had witnessed a reenactment of the disastrous Jan. 18 oil spill resulting from a tanker collision outside the Golden Gate.

With the tall, heavy-set Ruckelhaus, a battalion of military officers and an assortment of reporters and photographers looking on, Bay-Delta model employees poured two beakers of crankcase oil into the murky waters of the model.

The first was dumped into the water just outside the Golden Gate as the tide swept into the bay. The second was poured in the vicinity of Angel Island as the tide crested.

Model officials explained crankcase oil approximates the viscosity and specific gravity of the 800,000 gallons of bunker oil spilled into the bay from the ruptured holds of the tanker Oregon Standard.

As the tide turned in the model, thick streamers of oil floated out the Golden Gate, rippling in brown-black swirls, and fanned out in the ocean off Point Bonita.

Most of the oil floated north, almost exactly in the same pattern observed in the real oil spill. After 10 minutes and two complete tidal movements, the Petroleum was even with muir beach. Tidal action then drove it ashore.

Brig. Gen. Frank A. Camm, Southern Pacific Division engineer, and Col. Charles R. Roberts, San Francisco district engineer, explained how the model helps the corps predict the dispersion of pollutants in the bay.

Ruckelshaus was shown how the corps tests the effect of the Peripheral Canal to determine whether its construction will promote salt water intrusion of the Sacramento Delta.

Results of the corps' testing are incomplete. When finished, they will be made available to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Psychiatrist Says Calley Had No 'Specific Intent' To Kill

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—A psychiatrist insisted today that Lt. William L. Calley Jr. had no "specific intent" to kill at My Lai, even though he gave two separate orders for a group of women, children and old men to be slaughtered.

Dr. David G. Crane of Indianapolis, Ind., a defense witness at the Calley murder court-martial, said on cross-examination, however, that "he intended the people to die—just as if he had pulled the trigger."

Calley, 27, of Miami, is charged with the premeditated murder of 102 Vietnamese civilians during an American infantry sweep of the hamlet nearly three years ago.

Crane was one of two defense psychiatrists called to show that Calley was so "psyched up" during the search-and-destroy mission that he was unable to premeditate murder.

The defense has conceded that he did kill at My Lai and that he did not regard the villagers there as human beings.

Dr. Crane had testified Wednesday that Calley lacked the mental capacity to "form a specific intent to kill."

Referring to previous prosecution testimony, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III, the chief prosecutor, posed a hypothetical question:

"Doctor, assume that Lt. Calley told Paul Meadlo with a group of civilians to 'Take care of these people' and then departed for a few minutes and returned and said, 'Why haven't you wasted 'em yet?'

"And Meadlo said, 'I didn't know you wanted me to,' and Calley said: 'I want them dead.'

"Would that affect your opinion on specific intent?"

"No," Crane replied. "He did not have the ability to form specific intent. He could generally intend those people to be killed. He intended the people to die.

"It was just as if he pulled the trigger. When he gave the order, that was tantamount to pulling the trigger because there would be no question in his mind but that the order would be carried out."

Crane said Calley was not capable of a complex decision during the operation—such as would be required in determining the legality of orders to kill everything in the village.

Daniel brought up testimony that Calley stopped one of his men in My Lai from "molesting a female," and asked: "Would that be a complex decision?"

"No, but I think it is a significant one," Crane replied.

Record Expenditure For Streets, Roads

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A record $665.87 million was spent by California's cities and counties during 1969-70 for construction and maintenance of streets and roads, Controller Houston I. Flournoy reported Tuesday.

The Controller said the figure represented an 11 per cent increase of $66.38 million over the previous year. A total of $421 million was spent by 404 cities while the counties spent $22.87 million.

San Geronimo Group Asks Septic Tank Policy Delay

The San Geronimo Valley Association, in the wake of resident protests, has voted to ask the Marin County Board of Supervisors to delay action on its proposed septic tank ordinance for further study.

Richard Poppe, association president, said the group acted Tuesday night after citizens raised a variety of objections to the proposed measure.

Poppe said residents were concerned that homes with septic tanks would require $20 annual occupancy permits, that tanks would have to be pumped out on a regular basis and that homes within 100 feet of streams wouldn't be allowed tanks.

Poppe said Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows and William Desmond, chief of environmental health for Marin, appeared before nearly 100 persons at the association session to explain the ordinance, scheduled for a vote by the board of supervisors on March 22.

Restrooms Approved For Field

The Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission has approved $1,000 for construction of rest rooms at the city baseball field and approved the plans for it.

Commission secretary Ernestine Healy said the expenditure was approved Tuesday with the stipulation that plumbing and concrete work be completed first. Remaining money will go towards bathroom fixtures and other work, Mrs. Healy said.

The Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission also:

LIGHTS — Approved a recommendation by Police Chief James R. Orr to install $100 in lighting on the south side of the pavilion.

MEETING— Changed the April meeting from April 20 to April 27 because the April 20 school board election will be held in the commission's meeting place, the women's club.

VANDALISM — Heard a report from Edgar Phillips, the street superintendent, that vandalism at the pavilion averages $100 a month.

FESTIVAL — Voted moral support to the Fairfax Festival, but declined to offer financial assistance.

PAVILION — Set up a committee of commissioners Joan Walla, Stanley W. Little and Joseph E. Martinez to determine what improvements the pavilion needs.

Consolidation Study Opposed By Chiefs

The Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen was told last night that the county's police chiefs are opposed to hiring a consultant to study consolidation of police departments or certain law enforcement services.

Dan Terzich, Mill Valley police chief, reported that the chiefs met yesterday morning and decided the money to be spent on the study would better be used to open a countywide crime laboratory.

"We have qualified law enforcement people here in Marin to study consolidation," the chief observed.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday endorsed the concept of hiring a criminal justice coordinator to make the study, withholding final approval until budget time.

The cost for one year would be $25,000, county officials said, with the federal government paying $15,000 and the county the rest. Half of the county share would be in the form of services and supplies.

In other matters, the mayors and councilmen, meeting at Sabella's in Mill Valley, were told by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, that he shortly would introduce a bill requiring furnishing of zoning and land use informations on real estate to buyers.

Behr said he also was preparing various pieces of legislation that would tax emissions from factory smokestacks; create a state environmental protection agency similar to the one of the federal level; create a three-year moratorium before placing home improvements on the assessment rolls in order to help the slumping construction trades; and to require conversion of public and private auto fleets to propane or natural gas fuel.

The senator said he "strongly and urgently" favored resubmission of Proposition 18 to the voters. The measure, defeated in the November election, would have enabled diversion of gas tax money to mass transit.

Endorsing the concept of federal-state-local revenue sharing, Behr noted that the federal government at present keeps almost 90 per cent of the income tax revenue it collects.

The mayors and councilmen will meet again March 31 in Ross.

The Inequality Of Women Is Explored By Novato Women

By DOROTHY NEWELL

A woman who cheered as a child for McKinley as he ran for President against William Jennings Bryan and the president of the Marin County Chapter of the National Organization for Women as she discussing the inequality of women today were features of the program on the women's liberation movement at a luncheon of the United Presbyterian Women of the Presbyterian Church of Novato yesterday.

Speakers on the panel, all members of the Presbyterian church and the Novato residents, were Mrs. Alta McConnel, housewife and a former high school teacher; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Novato attorney; Mrs. Bunnye Rupp, executive secretary of the Association of California Hospital Districts; and Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, president of the Marin chapter of NOW.

Mrs. McConnel began the discussion as she told of being the child of the only Republican in the school district when McKinley won over Bryan as President of the United States. She recalled voting in 1920 after the women were given the right to vote and chuckling to herself in the voting booth and saying, "I don't know how to vote." The vote was only one thing for women's rights she said.

She was asked as she went in to the teaching field during World War I whether it was to be a career or a year or two of teaching and then marriage. She was among only three or four in the class that responded they wanted to make a career of teaching. Mrs. McConnel said, "Mrs. Emma Willard was told that advance math was too hard on the brains," (of a woman) and Mrs. Smith stated later that Emma Willard "being denied text books with which to teach solid geometry, taught with the aid of pyramids and cones carved out of turnips and potatoes."

Dorothy Young told of her experiences working with attorneys in a law office as the only woman. After she passed the California Bar. Male attorneys were provided secretaries, but she was expected to do her own typing and secretarial work.

"Men attorneys think women can only handle domestic relations, probate and workmen's compensation laws, or they are placed in research and never get to court or see clients," she said.

However, since she started her private practice 10 years ago Mrs. Young said she hasn't run into that type of discrimination.

Bunnye Ruppe, a wife, mother and executive secretary, said with greater freedom there is greater responsibility — both men and women have limited freedom.

"There are ground rules" she said, and a husband and wife have an original contract. She went on to explain during a question and answer period that any marriage is a contract, where the husband and wife have certain rules they live by. Bunnye, a woman among many men in her organization, says she feels women are more emotional and deal with matters subjectively rather than objectively, therefore many are not as capable for top positions.

She talked about women arriving in this country in 1608, when the first European women arrived here to be sold by their own consent to settlers as wives, to the present time when NOW nationally and locally will work to try to pass the Equal Rights Amendment, again in 1971.

She gave as an example what women are up against in this country. For 47 years an Equal Rights Amendment has been brought before congress only to lose out. She said it states that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. The 14th amendment has never been interpreted by the Supreme Court to cover women in this regard.

NOW was organized in 1966 and the Marin Chapter began in 1970. The organization allows men members, but it may be noted though that men hold no official positions of leadership, she said.

Among the NOW statement of purpose quoted by Mrs. Smith was: "NOW is dedicated to the proposition that women, first and foremost, are human beings, who, like all other people in our society, must have the chance to develop their fullest human potential."

"We are in the midst of a cultural revolution," Mrs. Smith said. With a life span lengthened to nearly 75 years it is no longer either necessary or possible for women to devote the greater part of their lives to child-rearing, she continued. Only 37 years of their lives are involved in childhood, education, adolescents, marriage, childbearing and child raising.

"Ours is not a struggle against men but against male supremacy. Freedom for women could mean male liberation as well," she said.

NOW speaks out in behalf of our own equality, freedom and human dignity — not in pleas for special privilege or in enmity toward men — but in an active, self respecting partnership with men," she continued. "We women are beginning to redefine ourselves. We are learning to like and respect ourselves and each other. It's a revolutionary movement, no doubt about it," she concluded.

Mrs. McConnel concluded the meeting by saying, "The girls must have the choice of being a spinster, a homemaker or being a homemaker combined with the life of a profession, but they must feel they have the freedom of choice."

Seven Day Milk

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Under normal refrigerator temperatures of 30 to 45 degrees, milk should keep fresh an average of seven days. So says Ethel Diedrichsen, of the University of Nebraska Extension Service. She advises that containers should be stored closed.

Enfant Terrible Breaks His Silence

FRENCH FASHION designer Yves Saint Laurent claims critics who called his spring fashion collection hideous just did not understand that it had a revolutionary spirit. Says the boy wonder of Paris, "I did not think in a profession as free as fashion that one could meet so many people so narrow-minded and reactionary, petty people paralyzed by taboos."

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) —Yves Saint Laurent says the critics who called his World War II floozy look for spring the truly hideous fashion of the century are a pack of "petty . . . narrow-minded reactionaries."

To the wispy, bespectacled boy wonder of Paris, his critics just did not understand that his spring fashion collection of Jan. 28 had "a revolutionary spirit" that did not kill off high fashion as they said but "on the contrary, brought it out of a rut."

In an exclusive interview with UPI, the "enfant terrible" of high fashion broke his silence on the scandal he stirred up when his manniquins paraded like 1940 streetwalkers in football shoulders and tight dresses. One critic cried "hideous" and a U.S. news magazine renamed him "Yves St. Debacle."

"I DID not think in a profession as free as fashion that one could meet so many people so narrow-minded and reactionary, petty people paralyzed by taboos," said Saint Laurent.

"But I also am very stimulated by this scandal because I know that which shocks is new. And basically it was not the details that were important in my collection—the (Ginger Rogers) coiffures or platform-soled shoes—but the revolutionary spirit that upset people.

"It breaks traditional so-called good taste, and if one regards it with eyes used to a certain illusion of traditional good taste, it certainly can shock.

"Fashion is the reflection of our time and if it does not express the atmosphere of its time it means nothing. My aim never was to shock or amuse. I made this collection in a spirit of gaiety and freedom to express what I thought to be our times.

"Haute couture is bogged down in a boring tradition of so-called good taste and refinement, and it has become a museum, a refuge for people who do not dare to look life in the face and who are reassured by tradition."

SAINT LAURENT admitted his puffed sleeves and striped mannish suits "perhaps did not please a certain press or American buyers. But it pleased youth and that is what counts for me. It pleased people who understand. One must try to make fashion interesting to youth and to people who make our epoch and not stay locked up in a tradition made for some people living in the 19th century. Certain buyers and journalists will be further shocked this spring when they see women wearing what they judged as 'hideous'."

The designer added he did not want to compare himself to great artists, but he recalled that when Edouard Manet painted the nude portrait "Olympia" people cried scandal. And when Igor Stravinsky conducted the modern "Rites of Spring" listeners were revolted. It was just the same, he said, when the directress of another fashion salon told him after viewing his collection she "felt insulted."

The bearded Saint Laurent insisted his tightly swathed hips and cutout bodices were not trollopy at all, but merely revived "a true female body."

"FOR YEARS the eye was used to a boyish girl without breasts, waist or hips. I never thought the appearance of a true woman would provoke such a scandal." mused Saint Laurent.

Although critics complained Saint Laurent's World War II chubby fox coats and turbans reflected a ghastly fashion era, the designer defends the '40's styles as "very feminine. Very modern."

Did Saint Laurent and other couturiers stage an inglorious retreat by baring the knees again after putting women into midis and maxis last fall? To Saint Laurent "this hemline question is stupid." He insisted it was the new "spirit of fashion freedom" for any hemline "which is saving high fashion."

SO IS PARIS high fashion dying as critics say?

"It is a laboratory and as such its future is assured. But it would be a mistake to try to keep it in its old golden frame, as a museum destined to dress only a few privileged women," Saint Laurent said.

"Certainly haute couture is no more as it was 30 or 50 years ago but is the world the same? Fashion now is international. Ideas can be born everywhere, but I believe Paris will remain the marvelous catalyst. Paris is an old grandmother who still has a trick up her sleeve."

To critics who urged him to forget the '40's look, Saint Laurent announced his future collections will continue in the same spirit "because I know I am right." Furthermore, he added slyly, his new style undoubtedly will show up "in the collections of others."

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

When She Walks All Over You Don't Come Crawling Back

DEAR HELEN:

I went with this girl for a year and four months and saw her almost every day. For ten of those months we really loved and understood one another, and then she started to step all over me.

She said I was being too good to her and it was my fault that she took advantage of me. Then she said she wanted to have a good time and not get serious, so she flirts with all the other guys and hardly gives me a second look.

I haven't taken her out in three weeks and it's about killing me. I've tried dating other girls, but I only have one on my mind. And she's dating other boys.

Should I crawl back and ask for a date, or let her come to me? — CONFUSED AND WAITING

DEAR C and W:

Don't crawl back unless you enjoy being stepped on. Really, you can do better — and you may even agree with me in six months. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I am faced with two choices: 1. Write to you, or 2. Go bananas.

I am Jealous. That's an underestimation. I have been going steadily with my boy friend for two years and we've fought over this stupidity of mine so much I'm almost afraid to go out in public with him.

My jealousy is an unreasonable, close-minded and hateful thing that is usually unfounded. If Joe even looks at any other girl, I get pains in my stomach and clam up. Then I cry and threaten — and later I'm so-o-o ashamed.

We're deeply in love and in friendship that we couldn't stand to break up. I don't think I need a headshrinker, just some sound advice. Please help. — G. E.

DEAR G.:

What you need is a good hard look at yourself. Somewhere along the line you've either been spoiled into possessiveness or deprived of pride. Either way, you feel secure only when you're not sharing Joe with anyone else.

And that's a form of selfishness. You can conquer it if you analyze the reasons. I'd guess you feel inadequate because you've never learned your own worth. Get proud. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Nowadays more and more kids are beginning to believe God is where it's at — but where is that? Not in church, it seems. I'd like to go to church to hear love and goodness, and that things will be all right if I believe in Him. But instead —

For three Sundays now we've been getting sex education. I think it's up to the parents who put us in this world to tell us how they did it. It's not the church's job. Especially when it's made to sound kind of awful.

Before that we discussed crime and drugs and pollution and segregation and pornography — everything but the Bible. Helen, I'd like to attend church to find some peace, and instead I come away more scared than ever. I'd like to sing the good old songs and feel happy being with happy people who don't find fault with half the other people in the congregation.

Would it be a sin to look for God on a hilltop instead of where He often isn't at — in church? — STILL SEARCHING, AGE 15

DEAR S.S.:

It's no sin to look for God wherever He's at — and a hilltop is one of the best places. You might ask Him to come and visit your church. — H.

Says Sea Won't Feed Enough

By PAT BALMES

There is no hope that we can feed the world's exploding population from the sea, according to Gerald Talbot, previous director of Tiburon's Marine Laboratory.

Representing the United States Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Talbot spoke at the United Presbyterian Women's luncheon meeting at Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon yesterday on "Food from the Sea — Fact or Fiction?"

"People think all we have to do is farm the sea and science will solve everything. They postulate that the sea, three-fourths of the world's surface with its added dimension of depth, will produce enough to feed the world's population which is doubling every 35 years. But they are not clear about what is economically possible," says the scientist.

The world might be able to survive a doubling or two if its population is willing to eat herring, squid, octopus and minute crabs, Talbot said. By expanding fishing and eating this less desirable menu, people could increase seafood from three per cent to 12 per cent of the world's food supply. Presently these seafoods are used for fishmeal, oils and, in foreign countries, margarine.

"EVEN IF this increase were tenfold, it couldn't meet the demands of the projected population explosion," he says.

The latest available figures put the world's catch at 63 million metric tons in 1969, says Talbot. The maximum possible catch is guessed at by experts who measure the plankton nutrients in fishing area. They think fish presently in the sea could weigh 240 million metric tons. Half must be left in the sea yearly to reproduce, according to Talbot.

"Thus 120 million metric tons is the maximum future catch we could hope for, including the strange but nutritious sea life. But the small crustacea and fishes would be too small and scattered to be efficiently harvested, so 100 million metric tons yearly is a realistic projection. We are catching more than half of this now!" warns Talbot.

Fish farming, which has been practiced for a long time but never produced a large percentage of food, is economically impossible on a large scale. Because of the high cost of hand labor, only expensive foods like oysters, crabs and shrimp are raised. Fish farming can only be carried on in bays and estuaries along the continental shelf. These areas are in danger of pollution. Half of the possible 100 million metric tons may soon be poisoned. You can't fish farm in polluted areas, he explains.

"The bureau has been fighting to get restrictions against DDT," says Talbot. Pointing out that small fines for polluting don't bother big companies, he said that people must demand heavy enforcement of anti-pollution laws.

HE CITED the example of a Southern California company which was dumping 600 pounds of DDT daily into the Pacific in spite of a cease and desist order. They kept it up until they were brought into court, he said.

"It's terrible that things can go on this way; that somebody has to put the squeeze on a big company. Russia is having exactly the same pollution problems in the Black Sea. But the government is able to take effective steps much quicker, he said.

Pessimistic about increasing food production on land, Talbot said the United States has had very little food to give away during the last 10 years. Unless the Imperial Valley is washed of salt and alkalies a large part of it will be out of production in 10 years. Most fertile land on earth is already under cultivation, he said.

Irrigation projects like the Indus River dams and the Aswan dam have increased the land under cultivation, but the extra food produced by the dams could not feed all the children born in the areas while the dams were being built, according to Talbot.

"THIS POPULATION doubling is the fastest where food is the shortest. Something has got to give in the next 15 or 20 years or there is likely to be a famine. It seems inhuman not to feed starving children. But it seems more inhuman to feed 500,000 starving people in Pakistan whose children in 20 years will grow up and multiply to a million people that will starve!" says Talbot.

In 1958 Talbot was sent by the United Nations to help the Pakistanis increase their supply of fish by reconstructing fishways destroyed in the building of the dams. The fish use these ladders to ascend the dams to spawn. There 500,000 people were dying of starvation and another million suffering from malnutrition, he said.

To add essential amino acids to their inadequate diet of rice and wheat the United States built portable fish stores, small cold-storage units, where people could come to buy fish, he said. Strange to their taste, the people refused to eat the fish.

"We couldn't even give it away," Talbot finished.

County Help Urged For Open House

The Marin Mental Health Advisory Board last night proposed that staff members from the Community Mental Health Center be assigned to work full-time at Open House.

The board was thinking in terms of three staff members being assigned to the private drug addiction treatment center in San Rafael, according to the board secretary, Adelaid Green.

Board members felt that through Open House, some persons can be reached in an anti-drug abuse program who would not come to the "establishment," Mrs. Green said.

The board's proposal will be passed on to the Marin County Board of Supervisors and the Marin Hospital District board.

The board also recommended that the staff at the mental health center for inpatient and adult outpatient services be integrated to obtain greater flexibility.

Members also learned that no additional money will be available in state and county budgets for new mental health programs in the county.

Guilty Plea To Reduced Charge

Don Joh Mish, 31, of San Rafael, has pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to a reduced misdemeanor charge of battery. He was to be sentenced today.

Mish was originally charged with felony assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a knife attack on an acquaintance at her Corte Madera apartment.

Bullet Hits Window

A bullet of undetermined caliber was fired through a living room window yesterday at the home of Carlo L. Berrini, 201 Ross Street, San Rafael, according to police. Berrini told police he was in the kitchen at the time, 5 p.m.

Lawyer Due $1,300 For Magee Case

Sausalito Attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr. will be paid $1,300 for his services in behalf of San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee.

Bjorklund, who was appointed to represent Magee, was relieved of the assignment at his own request Feb. 8, giving as his reason Magee's refusal to cooperate.

In a petition for payment, Bjorklund said he had worked 35 hours and 10 minutes on Magee's case between Dec. 28 and Jan. 28.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court, who ordered Bjorklund paid yesterday, said the $1,300 figure was based on the usual $35 or $40 hourly rate paid to court appointed attorneys.

In a statement attached to his petition, Bjorklund itemized the time spent interviewing Magee, reviewing the transcript of the grand jury indictment, in telephone conversations, court appearance and preparation of legal documents.

Magee is charged, along with Angela Y. Davis, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with an Aug. 7 escape attempt at the Marin Hall of Justice.

Cycle Stolen

Rex McCapes Jr., 228 Vallejo Street, Petaluma, told police that his red Honda motorcycle was stolen yesterday while parked at Petaluma Senior High School. It had license number 8A8360.

Panelists Split Over Publishing Names Of Youth Offenders

By DAVID DIETZ

A group of Marin youth representatives and police juvenile officers split narrowly today over whether the names of young people accused of major crimes should be published in newspapers.

Under particular attack from critics was the policy of the Independent-Journal to publish the names of teen-agers under 18 who are said to have committed felonious acts such as burglary, robbery or car theft.

Generally endorsing the newspaper's policy today on Radio KTIM's "Sounding Board" program were Lt. Albert Howenstein of the San Anselmo police and Detective Michael M. Mannick of the Novato police. Critical were Charles E. Newman, Corte Madera juvenile officer, and Charles Smith, youth coordinator of the Marin County Youth Commission, and a commissioner, Laurie Packard.

The supporters said publication of the names of juveniles accused of major offenses brought about public awareness of social problems and aided in control of community behavior, while the detractors said young people were unduly shamed and alienated by the practice.

Mannick saw conflict in youth's clamor for more rights and responsibilities and its demand for protection from public exposure in the event of arrest.

While applauding youth demands for a bigger role in society, Mannick said, "With every right, however, there is a corresponding obligation, and with every freedom, there is a corresponding duty."

He said youths should "stand to face the consequences of their acts," adding: "The public has a right to know that perpetrators of felonious acts are not nondescript juveniles but are individuals — and individuals have names."

Howenstein felt newspapers should use discretion in publishing juvenile names, but Newman found no benefit at all in the practice. "It's neither a deterrent nor news," he said.

"Rehabilitation is the name of the game," Newman observed, "and that's what we work for." Noting that juvenile law did not regard offenses committed by juveniles as criminal acts but more in the context of civil offenses, he asked: "Then why are they treated that way (as crimes) in the newspapers?"

Smith said the youth commission has gone on record in opposition to the I-J policy. He said the practice is prejudicial because law prohibits publication of the outcome of juvenile hearings.

He called bringing attention to arrested juveniles a "puritan-ethic holdover" and likened such publicity to the 18th century practice of "putting people in stocks in the public square."

Miss Packard said the practice brings "condemnation by peers" and felt it caused youth to believe society is "more concerned with shaming them than helping them."

"The emphasis," she said, "should be on rehabilitation rather than on punishment."

One listener to the program who telephoned a question to the group remarked that the I-J's practice had brought mounting bitterness against the newspaper and another considered it "cheap publicity."

The program, moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer, may be heard on tape at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Another Sign Is Rejected

A sign for Tiburon vintners, 72 Main Street, has been denied by the Tiburon Board of Design Review because the building already has too many signs.

Planning director Wayne E. Moody said he told the board on Tuesday that the building already has a total of 59 square feet of signs where city ordinance allows only seven square feet.

Although the new sign would replace an existing one, Moody said board members did not want to encourage any new signs on the structure.

Dazzling Debut Casts A Spell

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

SAN FRANCISCO — Maestro Josef Krips, a master of the works of Mozart and Mahler, blended the two into a tranquilizing evening last night with a brilliant assist by soprano Elly Ameling in her debut with the San Francisco Symphony.

Miss Ameling, who scored a triumph at the Stanford Summer Festival in 1969, displayed her dazzling technique in Mozart's "Exsultate, Jubilate" K. 165, accompanied by a small chamber orchestra. Her voice, which spans two octaves, has a velvet quality in the lower register which is seldom heard on the Opera House stage. And wht is so amazing about her tonality is the ease in which she can transfer into crystal-clear high notes — in the range of a high C — with ever so little effort.

The work is of a jubilant nature, with the closing motet text consisting of the single world "alleluia" in which the guest displayed pure vocal agility.

Miss Ameling was also featured in the major work of the evening, Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G Major. Again she displayed fine lyric quality. The "word" movement, which is the finale, is based on an old Bavarian folk song which lends a certain somber mark to a work that is predominately gay and light as compared with the solemnity found in both the Symphony No. 8 and 9.

Krips worked the ensemble extremely hard in the first three movements of the Mahler, obtaining some of finest sounds from a sometimes lax French horn section which has been noted for its weakness for several seasons. Especially rewarding were the small solo passages by concertmaster Stuart Canin, who alternated between two violins in the second and third movements.

The lighter Mahler was an excellent mark of programming and blended perfectly with the graceful characteristics of the evening's opener, Mozart's Symphony No. 35 in D Major, K. 385 (The Haffner).

Performed with limited personnel, Krips moulded a refined performance from the ensemble. It was especially evident in the finale — the presto — which begins rather slowly with nimble like sonority from the strings. However the melody quickens and the conclusion is a rousing one as compared with the Mahler which ends in the faintest trace of melody from the harp.

The program will be repeated again at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Opera House, the second of four subscription series under the baton of Krips.

Last Bach-To-Mozart Concert This Sunday

The third and final pair of Bach-to-Mozart concerts in the Homestead Valley Improvement Association's Candlelight Series will be presented Sunday at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley.

At 2:30 p.m. the program for children will feature introductions to the flute, oboe, bassoon, clarinet and French horn by the musicians playing those instruments and using appropriate music.

Composers represented will be Handel, Debussy, Tchaikovsky, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Dowland, Stravinsky and Carl Nielsen.

Musicians performing will be Walter Subke, flute; Raymond Duste, oboe; Donald Carroll, clarinet; Jeremy Merrill, French horn; and Robin Elliott, bassoon.

The program for the adult Candlelight Concert at 8 p.m. will include: Adagio and Rondo for Glass Harmonica, K. 617, Mozart; "The Nightingale," for soprano, flute, strings and continuo, Handel; Trio for Flute, Oboe and Harpsichord, Gordon Jacob; Serenade, Op. 10, Ernst Von Dohnanyi; and the aria "Zerfliesse, Mein Herze, in Fluten Der Zaehren" from St. John's Passion" and Cantata No. 51, "Jauchzet Gott in Allen Landen", Bach.

Musicians performing will be Gwen Curatilo, soprano; soprano; Raymond Duste, oboe; Walter Subke, flute; Edward Haug, trumpet; George Nagata and Donna Salarpi, violins; Asbjorn Finess, viola; Teressa Adams, cello; and Donald Pippin, harpsichord.

The final Candlelight Concert will be a program presented by flutist Michael Debost and pianist Christian Ivaldi on March 28.

Way West To Host Dance

The Way West, a worldwide, nondemnominational group involved in Biblical research, will sponsor a dance featuring three bands at the Church in Ignacio from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Saturday.

OUT OF JAIL AFTER 18 DAYS

Unshaven, but sporting jaunty smiles and leis presented by waiting families and friends, three San Francisco labor leaders leave Marin County Jail. Jack Goldberger (left), president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921, and Leon Olsen (center) and Donald Abrams, president and vice president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, this morning completed their 18-day jail sentences for contempt of court in violating an injunction limiting picketing and forbidding violence by the unions in connection with the ITU strike against the Independent-Journal. The strike began Jan. 7, 1970. The union leaders announced they were to hold a press conference later today in San Francisco.

PX Probe Reveals Mystery Man

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A former army investigator testified today that senior military officers thwarted his efforts to investigate reports of corruption in post exchanges in South Korea that later cropped up in Vietnam, involving the same promoter.

Augustin J. Manfredi, a retired Army chief warrant officer who was an investigator for the Army's Criminal Investigations Division (CID), told a Senate Investigations subcommittee the incident "was the most frustrating experience of my life."

He said he worked for two months on an investigation of business promoter William J. Crum in Korea in the late 1950s, but then was ordered to end his probe and submit a "whitewash" report.

"I have often asked myself just who was this man William Crum that he could command so much attention," Manfredi said." I have often wondered who was he to have so much influence and weight to throw around?"

Crum's name was mentioned prominently Wednesday as the subcommittee opened fresh hearings into alleged improprieties in the operation of PX's and similar facilities in Vietnam.

It was alleged in testimony by committee investigators that Crum had shifted his operations from Korea to Vietnam partially as a result of the CID investigation into his Korean activities.

Manfredi said Crum's operations in Korea involved smuggling, bribes, kickbacks, and gratuities to high-ranking military personnel and said that despite widespread knowledge of his activities, Crum was able to set up similar operations in Vietnam.

The Army's former highest ranking enlisted man and seven other persons have been indicted on charges of conspiring to defraud enlisted men's clubs in Vietnam through bribery and kickbacks.

A special federal grand jury returned the indictments Wednesday at Los Angeles against Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge, who once held the title of sergeant major of the Army.

The favors, Senate investigators said, included a rent-free Saigon villa and heavy Chinese silks.

The 37-page Los Angeles indictment accused Wooldridge and his associates of conspiring to monopolize sales of thousands of dollars worth of foodstuffs, bar supplies, gifts and other items at inflated prices from a company some of them had formed. The company was identified as Marmed, Inc., incorporated at Fullerton, Calif.

Teens Try Bank Job With A Bike

NEW MADISON, Ohio (UPI) —A 15-year-old girl who allegedly held up a bank with an empty pistol and her 17-year-old boyfriend who manned a getaway bicycle were being held today in the robbery of the Farmers State Bank.

Barbara Flusher and Darrell Noggle, both of Greenville, were held in the Darke County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond on charges of armed robbery of a financial institution.

Police said Miss Flusher, wearing a ski mask, staged the robbery while Noggle waited outside Wednesday.

The girl allegedly ran from the bank with $5,000, but patrons of a nearby restaurant grabbed and disarmed her.

Restaurant owner Eugene Simpson said Noggle then arrived to rescue the girl armed with another gun. The youth agreed to surrender the gun if they would free her.

"We said we would," Simpson said, "and he gave us the gun.

"Boy, he was sure surprised. He thought we really would let her go."

Burl Ives Granted Divorce From Wife

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A decree of divorce was granted Wednesday ending the 25-year marriage of actor-singer Burl Ives, 62, and his former business manager, Helen Peck Ives, 54.

The couple had been separated for the past 15 years. Ives was ordered to pay $2,000 monthly alimony.

Mrs. Meir, Cabinet Confer On Newest Cairo Peace Plan

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Premier Golda Meir conferred with her cabinet for two hours today on Egypt's reply to the peace initiative of United Nations envoy Gunnar V. Jarring. Political sources said Israel was under heavy U.S. pressure to follow Egypt's "positive" response.

Israeli officials declined to discuss details of the cabinet deliberations in Jerusalem today. The cabinet spokesman, Michael Arnon, said ministers heard a report from Foreign Minister Abba S. Eban. Asked to comment on the Jarring talks, Arnon said: "I don't answer questions on Jarring moves."

A one sentence official statement said Eban reported on the latest developments in Jarring's search for Middle East peace and that the discussion would continue at the next cabinet meeting Sunday.

Jarring was reported to have proposed that Israel withdraw its troops from Egypt's Sinai Peninsula bordering the Suez Canal and that an international peace-keeping force be posted at Sharm el Sheikh to safeguard Israeli shipping rights through the Strait of Tiran to the port of Eilat on the Gulf of Aqaba.

The Egyptian spokesman referred to alleged statements by Eban that Israel would not return to 1967 border lines without a peace agreementand by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan that he preferred "Sharm el Sheikh without peace to peace without Sharm el Sheikh."

The uncertainty which followed the Israeli cabinet meeting today indicated that ministers had not yet reached a decision on the Jarring proposals.

Israeli newspaper correspondents in dispatches today from Washington and New York said the Jarring initiatives had placed Israel in "a diplomatic bind" and put the Jewish state "on the defensive in the latest round of highpowered horse trading."

Diplomatic sources in Jerusalem said Israel was under pressure from the United States to be more flexible in its approach to the Jarring talks and adopt a more positive attitude.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Public Hearings Slated On Budget

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee plans to conduct 11 public hearings throughout most of California including one in Marin on April 2 on navigation and ocean development, on Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed $6.7 billion state budget.

"It is time we give the people an opportunity to tell us what they think of how their money is being spent," Chairman Willie Brown Jr. said Wednesday in announcing the hearings.

The San Francisco Democrat criticized the usual state capitol budgetary hearing process as a "closed circuit production involving only legislators and an assortment of Sacramento bureaucrats."

Republicans have denounced the statewide hearings as a traveling "carnival" attempt to discredit Reagan's spending plan. Democrats contend they want to learn the budget's potential "impact" on local government revenues.

Brown announced that six subcommittees will start out-of-town hearings March 5 in San Francisco and wind up April 2 in Marin County. He said they will work Fridays and Saturdays.

The agenda includes these hearing topics, although specific locations will be announced later:

March 5-6, state employe salaries and teacher retirement and department of consumer affairs, San Francisco; Air Resources Board, San Fernando Valley.

March 12, public school aid, junior college construction, impact on property tax, Orange County; same topics March 13 in Fresno; California Council on Criminal Justice, San Diego.

CASELOADS

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The Reagan administration is uncooperative in providing welfare caseload figures and costs, a legislative budget adviser told lawmakers Wednesday.

Thomas Dooley, an assistant to Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, said his office is "having great difficulty" understanding caseload information supplied by the State department of Social Welfare.

Post's office is a politically independent agency which acts as the legislature's watchdog over state fiscal matters and gives advice on complicated financial issues. More often than not, the legislative analyst is at odds with governors.

Dooley appeared at a meeting of the Assembly Welfare Committee called to examine the status of the long-simmering issue of whether California is in conformity with federal law governing aid to needy children. The case is pending in the state supreme court.

PESTICIDES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The arsenal of chemicals farmers use to kill insect pests can actually aggravate the problem and cause an "increase in reproductive capacity" of the bugs, according to a University of California scientist.
tist.

Entomologist Carl B. Huffaker of Berkeley and other researchers at the UC-sponsored symposium on farm chemicals Wednesday said the substances keep growers on a "pesticide treadmill" by failing four ways in their jobs:

—They can help the bugs reproduce faster.

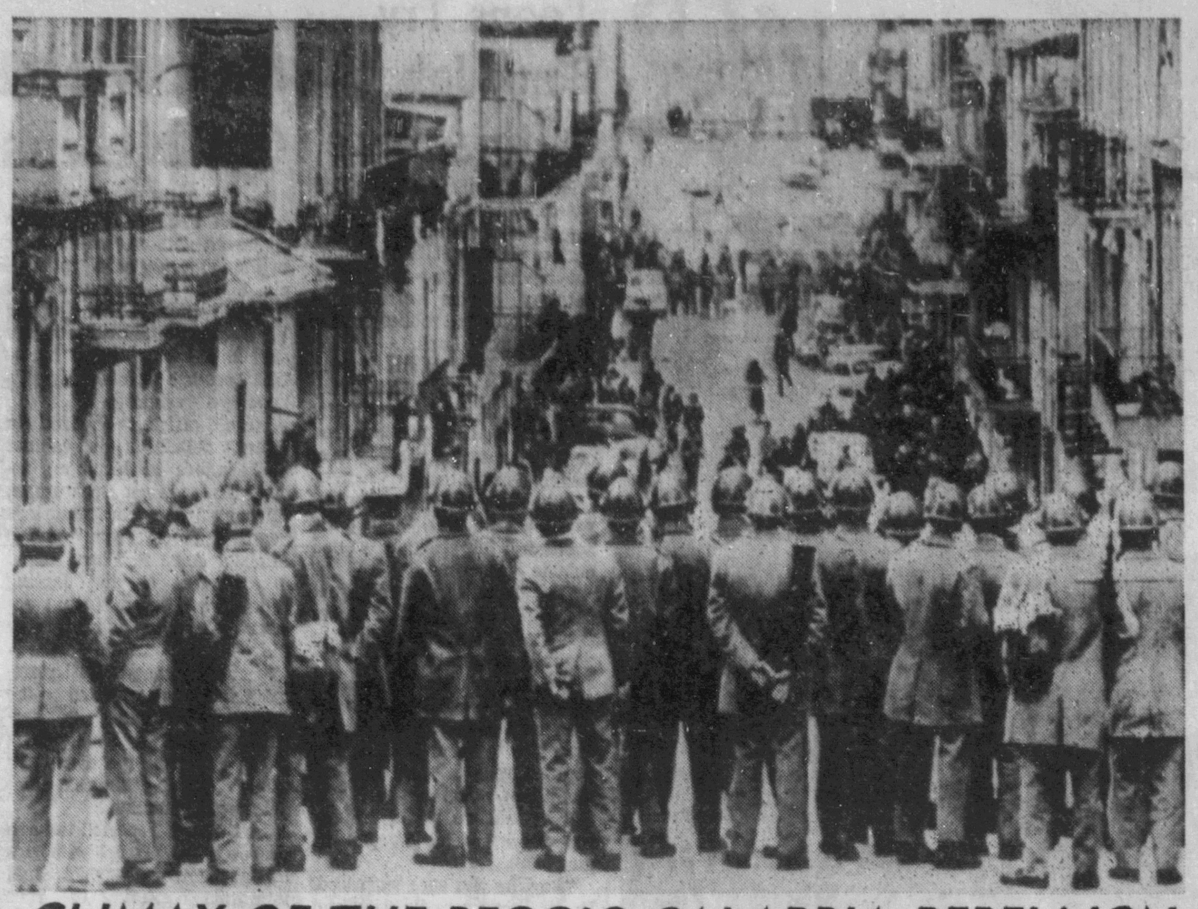
—They can bring on infestations of "previously innocuous or minor pests."

—The pests develop resistance to the chemicals.

Biologist Robert van den Bosch of UC Berkeley said that "extensive experimentation strongly indicates" that the problem of the bollworm and other pests "in San Joaquin Valley cotton is largely insecticide induced."



CLIMAX OF THE REGGIO CALABRIA REBELLION

A force of 15,000 Italian police moved into the rebellious Santa Caterina district of Reggio Calabria today to end a six-month series of riots and protests in which six men have died and hundreds injured. During the height of the protests yesterday, a cordon of policemen on top of a hill faced down an approaching group of rioters. The dissidents were protesting the naming of a rival town as the new capital of the region located at the toe of the Italian boot.

Burton Claims 'Lies' On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Was Gov. Ronald Reagan "lying" when he said state law forced him to cut back Medi-Cal services to the poor?

"The governor's a liar—l-i-a-r —a liar," Democratic Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco charged Wednesday.

Richard L. Camilli, deputy director of the State Department of Health Care Services, countered that Reagan told the truth when he said he was "mandated" by a 1968 Act to reduce health care services in December.

But Republican Assemblyman Gordon W. Duffy, the Act's author, said he wasn't so sure.

"I would have to review the Act in detail and I haven't had an opportunity," insisted the Hanford Republican, chairman of a committee which just completed an exhaustive study of Medi-Cal's fiscal problems.

The "liar" charge —an unusually strong one even for frequently warring politicians —came at a news conference Burton called to explain his bill restoring services cut by Reagan. The measure is set for Assembly floor debate Monday.

Burton, chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee, became upset when a newsman cited Reagan's frequent statement he trimmed the program as "mandated" by law to head off a projected $140 million deficit.

"He did it on his own hook," Burton shouted. "When the governor says he was mandated to do it he is a liar because I refuse to believe he is a fool."

When the Reagan administration announced the cuts in payments for "providers" — such as doctors —and in recipient services, it said it was acting under a statute which stated it "may" trim back if there is "reason to believe that the total cost of the program will exceed available funds."

Burton, a lawyer, contended that because the law read "may" instead of "shall" Reagan really didn't have to make the cuts.

At a news conference three weeks ago, Reagan said "these 'horrifying' cuts that I have made in Medi-Cal were mandated on me by the legislature... I have no choice in that matter."

Antiwar Initiative On Berkeley Ballot Denied

BERKELEY (UPI) —Both a superior court judge and Berkeley's city council have rejected demands by youthful demonstrators that an anti-war initiative be put on the ballot for the April 6 municipal election.

Councilmen, whose meeting was briefly interrupted by youthful shouting, voted 5-2 Wednesday night against putting to a vote a declaration that city policy calls for "peace and solidarity between the people of Berkeley and the people of Vietnam."

The measure also would require the city attorney to provide legal aid to Berkeley men who want to avoid military service.

Judge Lyle E. Cooke, earlier in the day, also turned down a plea for a write to put the declaration on the ballot, but he did hold back his order 48 hours in order to permit an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Rick Brown, a candidate for city council, told councilmen they were "denying the right of the people to use a legal political process."

Overnight Family Visits Scheduled

Overnight visits by the families of San Quentin inmates will be allowed within several months, Associate Warden James W. L. Park announced yesterday.

Park said only minimum security prisoners will be eligible for the visits from wives, parents and children because the program will be housed in a low security area.

He said the prison guest house and an employee's residence with accommodations for a total of six to eight couples have been selected for the visits.

Other details, including the starting date, remain to be worked out, Park said.

He said Warden Louis J. Nelson decided to start the conjugal visits at the suggestion of Raymond Procunier, state director of corrections.

The director of the prison system had been impressed with the success of a pilot program at Tehachapi Prison near Bakersfield, Park said.

"I think you could say that the experience at Tehachapi Prison has had a significant effect in helping families work out their relationships problems," Park said.

Forty per cent of the visits at Tehachapi have been by parents, Park said.

Maloney To State Panel On Ecology

Douglas J. Maloney, Marin County counsel, and Ignacio A. Vella, Sonoma County supervisor, have been named to a newly created committee to advise the state attorney general on environmental problems.

Att. Gen. Evelle J. Younger announced creation of the new committee earlier this week. He said its purpose will be to identify threats to the environment so that official action can be taken by his department.

"The Attorney General," he noted, "has certain common-law powers to enable him to do almost anything in the public interest."

Task force subcommittees will study air pollution, water pollution, land use and open space, pesticides and solid waste disposal, he said.

Initial membership of the task force also includes representatives of the Sierra Club, the Bay Area Pollution Control District, the Environmental Protection Agency, Regional Water Quality Control Board, Bay Conservation and Development Commission and Save San Francisco Bay Association.

Nixon Seeks Law On Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon has asked Congress to pass legislation that would allow him to head off a threatened nationwide rail strike March 1.

Nixon sent a report to Congress Wednesday asking for power to impose a contract settlement or allow only a limited strike or lockout.

Last Dec. 10 Congress passed a law barring a strike until March 1. Since that time three of the four unions involved in the dispute with the nation's railroads have agreed to new contracts, but a fourth, the 90,000-member United Transportation Union, has not signed.

Pantsuits Are Not Welcome In One Court

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Pantsuits are very much in vogue, acceptable at the White House and exclusive restaurants. But they are not welcome in the courtroom of Municipal Judge Wilbur G. Dettmar.

"Either you want to be a woman or you want to be a man," Dettmar told attorney Marguerite M. Buckley. "You can take your choice, but not in my courtroom."

Dettmar continued the case Wednesday and told Miss Buckley to go home and change clothes. He later resigned the case to another courtroom.

Bureaucracies Fatten; Teaching Staffs Shrink

Independent-Journal reporter Pat Angle, in her "I-J Reporter's Notebook" last Friday, noted that although Sausalito School District has a shrinking pupil population, it does not have a correspondingly shrinking administrative setup. She figured that administrative costs total $260 per pupil in the preliminary budget for next school year.

Although the Sausalito district is an extreme case, it is not untypical. School districts — like other bureaucracies — tend to expand administration, paper-shuffling, and other generally non-productive operations, out of proportion to expansion in the place where most of the work for which they are intended gets done. That place, in the school districts, is the classroom.

THE MARIN COUNTY superintendent of schools each year publishes a directory which lists, district-by-district, the employees in the county's public schools, from superintendents down through coordinators, principals, teachers, secretaries, janitors and bus drivers. A comparison of listings in the 1965 edition and this year's shows increased central office staffs to be the rule, while in many cases the number of classroom teachers has actually declined.

Sausalito had 14 in its central office in 1965, and has 28 this year — a 100 per cent increase. The number of teachers in its classrooms, however, declined from 39 in 1965 to 33 this year — a 15.4 per cent decrease, despite smaller class loads, because of declining attendance.

But it was not alone.

MILL VALLEY School District's central office personnel increased 88 per cent in the same period, from 18 to 34, while classroom teachers dropped 6.3 per cent, from 159 to 149.

Fairfax School District more than doubled its central office staff, from six to 15, while adding one teacher to bring the total to 40. The one-school Ross district increased the central office personnel from four to seven (75 per cent) while reducing classroom teachers from 29 to 27 (a 6.9 per cent drop). Tamalpais High School District's central staff grew 76 per cent, from 33 to 58, while the number of teachers increased only 3.1 per cent, from 318 to 328.

Unfortunately, two of the biggest districts — San Rafael and Novato — no longer furnish listings for the county directory.

Lagunitas and Larkspur districts have fewer teachers than five years ago, but more people in their central offices. The reverse is true in Reed and San Anselmo districts, where central office staffs have been cut while teachers were added.

CALLS FOR GREATER school financing customarily cite the need for smaller classes, better teacher-pupil ratios. But the figures indicate that the increased money tends to go elsewhere than to the classroom.

It is, of course, a corollary of "Parkinson's Law": The bureaucracy fattens upon itself.

One way to keep school costs down without impairing the quality of instruction would be to reverse this trend. School district trustees (many of whom will be new after the April 20 elections) and interested citizens might give this some attention as work on next year's school budgets proceeds.

'Reform' Of Seniority Difficult To Detect

By FRANX ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Well, they reformed the seniority system, didn't they? So let's take a look at the lineup of bright, young new faces among the committee chairmen of the 92nd Congress.

There is Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., newly elected chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He is 80, and previously was chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

In the House, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., succeeded to the office of armed services chairman. Hebert is 69.

Replacing Ellender as chairman of agriculture is Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., who is 57. Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn., new chairman of House public works, is 59.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., 82, chairman of House judiciary for 20 years, has been elected for two years more. So has Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., 80, rules committee chairman in the two previous congresses.

REP. GEORGE MILLER, D-Calif., continues as chairman of the House space committee. Miller is 80. His Senate opposite number remains Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., who is 75.

Chairman of the House Banking Committee is Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., who is 77. Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., continues as chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, and is 71.

House government operations has a new chairman, Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., who is 67. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., remains as chairman of Senate government operations, at age 74.

SO IT GOES. In fact, except where a predecessor died or wasn't re-elected to Congress, there are no new committee chairmen in Congress. And those who are new were selected in strict accord with the seniority system.

So what was the antiseniority noise all about?

It was about some minor reforms that later may prove significant. What they proved this time is that even given a choice, most members of Congress still favor selecting their legislative leaders on the basis of how long they have served.

FOR THE FIRST time, House Democrats and Republicans separately voted themselves the right to review and vote on all nominations as chairman (or in case of the Republicans, ranking minority member).

The Democrats then challenged one nomination, that of Rep. John L. McMillan, D-S.C., chairman of the District of Columbia Committee. They had a secret vote on McMillan. He won re-election to the post he has held for 22 years. The vote was 126 to 96. McMillan is 72.

(Senate Republicans did make a rule to allow only one ranking committee spot per member. That spreads the seniority system around, anyway. House Democrats imposed a similar limitation on subcommittee chairmanships, also bringing more members into the action.)

As for the House and Senate leadership teams, they never have been selected on the basis of seniority. But the House this year replaced retired Speaker John W. McCormack, who was 79, with Rep. Carl Albert, who is 62. On the other hand, Senate Democrats tossed out Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., as their whip, in favor of Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. Kennedy is 38. Byrd is 53.

Of course some gains were made on the seniority front. Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., for instance, resigned at 73 as secretary of the Republican Conference, to make way for a younger man. Republicans promptly picked to replace him Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., who is only 70.

Pictures Don't Do 'Em Justice

I have been a Paul Peterzell Watcher since Sausalito Council days. He has become more handsome as the years go by and a real inspiration to a fatty like me because he not only took it off, he kept it off.

Sometimes I attend meetings in the city where his is the only other face from Marin. If I knew that Paul would cover the meeting I could stay home because he always does an excellent job of reporting what happened.

I like the old picture of Paul laughing because most of what he hears from the office seekers deserves to be laughed at and he knows it. This new picture is not as libelous as Mary Leydecker's — she is a beautiful girl but unless we knew that it would be hard to imagine from that picture.

I hope you keep Paul covering politics forever because that's where the action is.

Vietnamese Prove We're Not Needed

I was impressed to see the South Vietnamese Army in the invasion of Cambodia. They are even more impressive in their invasion of Laos. Imagine being able to carry out offensive actions of major size in two different countries simultaneously?

I believe the South Vietnamese Army has shown its complete military competence. Thus I can see no reason why it cannot defend its own homeland right now without the need for a single American soldier on its soil.

More About Dutch Role In Early U.S.

My old Frisian heart jumped for joy after reading your ("Editor's Notebook") article in the Jan. 30 issue. Whoever led you to that part of The Netherlands did a good deed and gave you the correct information. Most people skip that province because it's not on the usual schedule and apart from sailing on the lakes there is nothing to be seen which might interest the tourist except perhaps some very beautiful local costumes in a few towns. And the dike, of course.

It is also very extraordinary that you mentioned the house on the Keisersgracht in Amsterdam where John Adams lived — and this writer too.

Contrary to what you wrote ... Friesland IS a land of milk. The cows have udders of unbelievable size and the milk production is one of the highest. At least in my youth when I had to visit and stay with some 150 relatives there.

As to financing of the young U.S.A. which put the infant federal union on its feet: Hamilton borrowed from Holland $1,200,000 on Nov. 12, 1790, at 5 per cent; $1,000,000 on Feb. 15, 1791, at 5 per cent; $2,400,000 in September, 1791, at 5 per cent; $1,200,000 in December, 1791, at 4 per cent. I believe that the bank was Hope and Co. in Amsterdam.

Do you know that the first salute to the American flag by a foreign nation took place at the small island of St. Estatius when Fort Oranje there welcomed an American frigate (I think) on Nov. 16, 1776? This island is now a part of the Netherlands Antilles and issued a commemorative stamp of that fact on Nov. 16, 1961. Being a collector I have of course that stamp in my collection...

Learn Sacredness Of Human Life

You are to be commended for your editorial of Feb. 2, "Perhaps It's Time We Examined the Recipe". One of the worst aspects of the "sex education" programs you mentioned is that the groups which instigated them have consistently refused to realize or take responsibility for the inevitable effects, i.e., more abortions, more illegitimacy, a soaring VD rate. And there is more to come - a bill has been introduced in the Florida Legislature for euthanasia - so-called "mercy killing of the aged".

Our society is indeed in serious trouble if our children, the hope of the future, are not made to realize the sacredness of life; not just for miserably oil-soaked birds, or the vanishing whales or other endangered species, but the sacredness and dignity of HUMAN life and human relationships.

Words On Oil Spill Efforts Appreciated

On behalf of Standard Oil Co. of California, I am writing to express our sincere appreciation for the Independent-Journal's editorial of Jan. 28, which is certainly complimentary of our efforts to safeguard the public interest following our recent tanker collision and subsequent oil spill.

At a time when we had been under considerable public criticism and some adverse press reports, it is heartening to find such an expression which has something to say in our behalf.

Architects' Fees Based On Complexity

Your editorial of Feb. 5 concerning professional fees for architectural services was extremely ill informed and consequently grossly unfair to the profession. As both an architect and a resident of Marin County, I would like to correct your errors of fact and offer some alternative ways of looking at the question of fees.

Architects do not uniformly charge an eight per cent fee or any other set percentage of the construction cost ... The reason that eight per cent is generally associated with public school construction is that this percentage is related to the complexity, services required and typical cost range for this type of project... The American Institute of Architects publishes standard agreements based upon a stipulated sum as well as the actual cost of services plus a fixed fee.

You have suggested as a method of saving costs to secure architectural services by competitive bidding with the project being awarded to the firm offering to accept the lowest fee. I wonder if you would wish to select your physician, dentist or lawyer on this basis...

Approximately a third of the architect's fees are paid by him for the services of structural, mechanical, electrical and civil engineers plus other special consultants which the project may require. If his fee increases as building costs rise so do his expenses. None of us are exempt from the problems of inflation and consequent soaring costs for all of the goods and services which we must purchase...

New Promise For Russians Elusive As Predecessors

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

For the long-suffering Russia citizen the promise of more consumer goods is an oft-told tale.

From 1928 to the present the Soviet Union has had nine so-called five-year plans, all looking toward the same goals —development of industry and a solution to the agricultural problem, with most of them at least giving lip service to mounting demands for consumer goods.

Stalin instituted the first five-year plan. It was to develop industry and bring an end to NEP, the "new economic policy" set up by Lenin in 1921 to overcome economic paralysis and sabotage by the peasants.

Under the 1926 plan, Stalin began his war against the peasant. Millions were killed and others deported in a mass tragedy comparable to Hitler's later extermination of the Jews.

ONE FIVE-YEAR plan lasted only about two and a half years. Another ran seven. All were on a grand scale.

Nikita Khrushchev opened up the virgin lands to the east as a solution to the Soviet Union's agricultural problems, and reaped dust storms because he acted without regard for weather or soil conditions.

He also promised the long-suffering Russian consumer his living standard would equal the United States' by 1970.

At the end of March, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin is scheduled to place before the 24th party congress the new five-year plan for 1971-75 whose details now are being presented to the Russian people.

FOR THE FIRST time, light industry, that portion of industry devoted primarily to development of consumer goods, is given priority in the percentages.

The figures are misleading since heavy industry comprises 75 per cent of all Soviet industry and will continue to dominate the overall economy.

The goals seem relatively modest and attainable, but with exceptions that could lead to new disappointments.

The plan, which foresees a 44 to 48 per cent increase in production of consumer goods, is to reach its goals, according to the Soviet news agency Tass, through a "high pace" of development of production, the rising of its efficiency, scientific and technical progress and accelerated growth of labor productivity."

Reduced to simpler language, this means rapid growth of computer techniques in industry, increased efficiency in labor and management and success in such vital projects as development of new industry in western Siberia and completion of a new oil pipeline from western Siberian fields. Working against achievement are these:

—Reluctance of the Soviet military to share computer secrets with Russian industry, forcing the latter to depend upon outside and sometimes inferior soucrces.

—A reluctance of the Russian worker to leave his cherry orchards in the Ukraine for rigors of Siberia.

—A fear inside management that the computer will do away with jobs.

The negative response of Russian workers to pleas for increased productivity when the shortage of consumer goods leaves them nothing to buy with their increased wages.

In 1970, these industries were among those falling short of production goals: electric, oil, gas, coal, steel, trucks, cars, tractors, television sets, refrigerators.

Dick And Spiro Have It Easy Compared To George And Abe

(John S. Knight in Detroit Free Press)

In one man's opinion, the shifting of George Washington's birthday and other memorable dates in history is for the birds.

However, the Washington-Lincoln birthday observance could be a source of some comfort to President Nixon and Vice President Agnew, our two leaders currently enduring the darts and arrows of their critics and adversaries.

By comparison with the vicious attacks upon our greatest presidents, Dick and Spiro have fared rather well.

PRESIDENT WASHINGTON was the prime target for Franklin Bache's Aurora, Callendar of the Richmond Examiner and Thomas Paine. To Bache, as recounted in James E. Pollard's "The Presidents and the Press," Washington was "treacherous, mischievous, inefficient and guilty of the farce of disinterestedness."

Bache further accused Washington of "stately journeying through the American continent in search of personal incense, of ostentatious professions of piety, of pusillanimous neglect, of little passions, ingratitude, want of merit, insignificance and spurious fame."

The New York Argus, Boston Chronicle, The Kentucky Herald and The Caroline Gazette were among the chief chorusers of complaint. The tenor of their feelings is found in this quotation: "If you could for a short time put off your suit of buckram and condescend to that state of humility in which you hear the real sentiments of your fellow citizens, you could save the wreack of character now crumbling to pieces."

Unlike Spiro Agnew, there is little in the record to indicate that Washington was anything but contemptuous of these attacks, which he preferred to ignore. Our first President did complain that his critics treated him "no better than a common pickpocket."

THE LINCOLN story is even more remarkable for the savagery of his enemies. Here is a sampling of the ridicule, insults and falsehoods to which President Lincoln was subjected by the press, pulpit and politicians as recounted by the American Legion magazine:

"The President has usurped the power of Congress. He has involved us in an unnecessary war. He has fumbled this war. It is a bloody and costly failure."

"Not a spark of genius has he; not an element for leadership. Not one particle of heroic enthusiasm."

The martyred Lincoln was called "Lincoln, the baboon, the imbecile, the wet rag, the Kentucky mule." Wendell Phillips described Lincoln as "a huckster in politics, a first-rate second-rate man." A Springfield neighbor said of Lincoln: "He is the craftiest and most dishonest man that ever disgraced an office in America."

LINCOLN'S personal appearance was the butt of their jibes and venom. Cartoons exaggerating his gangling, stoop-shouldered frame, long, wrinkled face, abnormally long limbs and tight, ill-fitting suits were common.

Following the now-famous Gettysburg Address, the Chicago Times observed: "We pass over the silly remarks of the President; for the credit of the nation, we are willing that the veil of oblivion shall be dropped over them."

Even Edwin Stanton, later to become Lincoln's secretary of war, once called him "the original gorilla, the Illinois ape and a low, cunning clown."

While Gen. George B. McClellan commanded the Army of the Potomac, he wrote his wife that Lincoln "is nothing more than a well-meaning buffoon."

Lincoln's last law partner, William H. Herndon, proceeded to note that the President's mother was illegitimate, which unfortunately was true, and that Lincoln himself was a bastard, which he was not.

NO OTHER president endured the abuse and slander which beset Abraham Lincoln. Today, we have laws of libel and slander to protect the innocent.

Yet, as the American Legion magazine has said: "Lincoln has long been beyond the power of detractors to do him harm. In 1962, a poll of 75 historians voted him the greatest of presidents. The next four in order were George Washington, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Jefferson."

Nixon Finally Buys The Plan: Wind Down War Via China

WASHINGTON — Whenever something new happens in the war in Indochina, I always seek out my dear friend Joseph Wallstop, the dean of the hawk columnists.

Late last fall as the war was winding down Joe had become more and more depressed, so I didn't know what mood I'd find him in. Happily, when I went down to his war room located in the basement of his house, I found him dancing a jig.

"JOE, I SAID, "you're your old self again."

"They've finally listened to me," Joe said gleefully. "I've wanted to invade Laos for four years."

"That's wonderful, Joe," I said. "It must be great to see a dream come true."

"I didn't think President Nixon had the guts," Joe said. "But, thank God, he has finally bought my plan. Hanoi will be on the ropes in a matter of weeks."

"I THOUGHT you told everyone Hanoi was on the ropes after the Tet offensive."

"They were on the ropes," Joe said. "But they didn't know it. I still maintain the Tet offensive was the biggest allied victory of the war."

"Bigger than the invasion of Cambodia?" I said.

"Cambodia was different. In Cambodia, I wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries that were supplying the Reds in South Vietnam."

"But if you wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries, why did you have to go into Laos?"

"Because, you idiot, Hanoi is hurting, so they're sending everything down the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Once I interdict the Ho Chi Minh Trail, I'll have the Commies on the ropes again."

"Unless they think of something else," I said.

"COME OVER HERE," Joe said. He took me over to a very large table which had a relief map of Southeast Asia on it. He had flags all over it: green for allied troops, red for Communist troops and blue for American aircraft. He even had a miniature Sixth Fleet which he could push around the table.

He put on his campaign hat and said: "This is what I want to do: I want to bomb everything in Cambodia and Laos. That may force Hanoi to send their stuff through Thailand."

"Why, it's the old interdiction ploy," I said.

"Exactly. This will give me an excuse to invade Thailand. Once I'm in Thailand, I'll give General Abrams time to shape up the South Vietmanese army so they can invade North Vietnam."

JOE MOVED the green flags across the DMZ.

"You mean you're going to invade North Vietnam?"

"What choice do I have?" Joe replied. "Once I clean out the sanctuaries in North Vietnam, Hanoi will be on the ropes."

"So they'll sue for peace?" I said excitedly.

"No, they won't," he said disgustedly. "They'll ask the Chinese to intervene."

"JOE," I SAID nervously. "You're moving the green flags up to the Chinese border. You're not thinking of sending the South Vietnamese into China?"

"Why not?" said Joe. "That's where all the supplies are coming from."

A red phone in the corner rang urgently and Joe picked it up. "Yes, Mr. President. You're doing fine. Just fine. Once you secure the Ho Chi Minh Trail, call me back and I'll tell you what to do next."

Board Approves Requests Of $1 Million In Grants

The Marin County Board of Education has authorized its staff to forward applications requesting more than $1 million in federal grants for development of three new programs.

According to C. Sidney Smith, coordinator of curriculum, the board approved the requests Tuesday.

The first asks for $542,000 over a five-year period for a model kindergarten class to be used for in-service training of teachers.

The second application, Smith said, asks for $486,000 for a three-year training program for school administrators. The program will concentrate on new budgeting systems expected to be mandatory by the state in several years.

The third application asks for $42,000 for development of a sequential curriculum for preschool deaf children. The program will be developed by teachers and will be administered by the Marin County Schools Office if approved.

The board also heard a report from Joseph Denhart, director of the preschool program, on programs at the Novato Children's Center, Head Start and preschool programs.

The board supported a resolution sponsored by the Tamalpais High School District Board asking the state to exclude Marin from next year's mandatory unification election.

Bill Is Aimed At Teacher Retirement

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill intended to hoist the state Teachers' Retirement System out of a potential $5.5 billion hole was proposed today by Assemblyman E. Richard Barnes, R-San Diego.

Barnes, chairman of the Retirement Committee, noted the measure is similar to an unsuccessful plan introduced last year.

He said it eventually would require teachers and local school districts to pay the entire cost of the pension system. But the proposal contained no method of financing the revision.

Barnes said he hoped the money would be provided through enactment of tax reform legislation or that it could be tied into the omnibus school finance bill adopted by the legislature each year.

Barnes said that if every eligible teacher now in the program should immediately request the benefits, the system would face a mammoth $5.5 billion deficit.

Currently, the state makes up the difference in the annual shortage from what teachers and school districts contribute and what the retirement system actually costs.

The program is in debt because the contributions of teachers and school districts fall far short of meeting the pensions paid out each year.

In 1970-71, the districts contributed an estimated $65 million raised through property taxation. The state made up the estimated deficit of $91 million.

Barnes said if the program is left unchanged, the state will pay $116.3 million for the system in 1971-73 and $634.8 million by 1989-90.

Barnes said teachers now pay into the program an average 7.4 per cent of their wages. The school districts contribute a maximum 3 per cent of the total payroll.

The new Barnes proposal would require both teachers and school districts to contribute 8 per cent.

The state would pay a flat $135 million annually for the next 30 years to cover teachers now retired. At the end of 30 years, the state payments would stop, based on the assumption that by that time few of the teachers now retired would still be alive.

Under the Barnes bill persons already retired would receive a cost of living adjustment retroactive to 1965—the last time such an increase was granted.

Proposed Outfall Levels Attacked By Sewer Panel

The Richardson Bay Sanitary District board has objected to proposed strict new discharge requirements contemplated by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

Secretary Barbara Bartis reported the board on Tuesday asked the regional board for more time to comment on the porposed requirements. The regional board had requested Richardson Bay's comments by Feb. 25.

Directors also asked the Marin Municipal Water District to back Richardson Bay in its request to the regional board for more time. Mrs. Bartis said the water district is overseeing formation of an improvement district which would study ways to achieve the outfall levels sought by the regional board.

In other business, the board approved plans and specifications and called for bids on sewer main replacement along Belvedere Drive in Strawberry.

Lloyd's Files Suit Against Penn Central

Lloyd's asked U.S. District Court here to rescind a $10 million insurance policy protecting officers of the Penn Central from suits holding them accountable for financial losses to the railroad caused by their wrongdoing.

Lloyd's claimed it was misled by statements made by David C. Bevan, one of 71 railroad officers and directors covered by the policy. Bevan was ousted as the $132,000-a-year finance chairman of the Penn Central about two weeks before the railroad filed for reorganization.

Thailand Steps Up Patrolling

By Toronto Telegram News Service

HONG KONG — With warfare spreading in the neighboring lands of Cambodia and Laos, the government of Thailand is stepping up its counter-insurgency campaigns.

This month, the first units of the 12,000-strong Thai troops serving in South Vietnam are due to return home. Some of the men will be moved to remote border provinces to help in the fight against Communist guerrillas.

About 1,600 of the guerrillas are roaming through northern Thailand, another 1,500 are concentrated in the northeast near the Laotian border, and there are at least 1,400 well-trained men in remote areas of the Malay peninsula near Thailand's border with Malaysia.

About 300 Burmese rebels, as well as 400 hard-core Thai guerrillas, are operating from mountain and village bases in five provinces bordering Burma.

Most of the Communists are engaged in harassing Thai troops and police, as well as in recruiting and propaganda activities.

The battles and ambushes between government forces and guerrilla units are never large-scale, but quite regularly soldiers, rebels and civilians are killed in different parts of the country.

The bolder guerrillas will raid remote villages, and hold propaganda meetings before government forces can reach the area.

Many villages have set up self-defence posts and protection units. Often, the poorly-armed villagers are no match against the tough guerrilla bands who attack with modern Chinese rifles and Soviet machine-guns.

Last month, the governor of Nakhon Phanom province on the border of Laos asked for the wholesale transfer of police in one Communist-infiltrated district. The Governor, Major-General Yonh Na Nakhon, admitted that the police had oppressed villagers and had stolen their livestock.

As North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units step up activities near Thailand's borders, more weapons are reaching the rebels.

Thai Interior Minister General Praphas Charusathien says that arms are smuggled into the country from Laos, and are then shipped in fishing boats to Communist guerrillas in southern Thailand.

Thailand already has sealed off its land border with Cambodia to prevent Communist infiltration. In the Thai-Malaysian border region, land and naval patrols are being intensified in an attempt to stem the arms smuggling.

The government is recruiting an additional 4,000 police, and most of them will be sent south to fight Communists as well as 500 Moselm guerrillas belonging to the National Liberation Front of the Pattani Republic, a small but fanatic group who want to secede from Thailand.

The insurgency in Thailand is a sickness the government is trying to cure by improving the social and economic conditions of the country's 33,000,000 people.

And although the government can never dismiss the possibility of Communist incursions from Laos and Cambodia, the situation in Thailand is by no means critical.

Thailand last year decided against any heavy involvement in the Cambodian conflict, and instead is concentrating on putting its own house in order. It will take time, for the Communists are well-entrenched in some of the more remote areas.

But Thailand is far wealthier than Vietnam, Cambodia or Laos. Its towns and cities are booming and growing. And as Communist rebels operate most successfully in an impoverished nation, the present insurgency can achieve little more than to give the military regime in Bangkok additional headaches.

Father of Nevada's Gaming Law Reflects

RENO, Nev. (UPI)—Nevada's glittering gambling industry celebrates its 40th anniversary this year, but the man who started it all lives quietly and almost forgotten on a remote ranch.

Phil Metschan Tobin, 69, was a freshman assemblyman in 1931 when he introduced the bill in the Nevada legislature to make gambling legal.

It not only turned out well for many individuals, it put the state treasury in the black. Tobin, however, never made a dime from a business that earned about $600 million last year.

Tobin faded from politics after two subsequent terms in the state Senate and has shown little interest in development of the legalized gambling business. In fact he has never seen the Las Vegas strip which accounts for more than half of the state's gross gambling receipts.

Tobin has been a rancher all his life, as attested to by his leathery face and rough hands. He works at the Paiute Meadows Ranch on the Nevada-Oregon border where there are no telephones or television. He goes into town —113 miles away in Winnemucca —only occasionally. During the winter, he visits relatives in Reno, California and Oregon.

Tobin recalled the events of 40 years ago as if it were yesterday.

"The damn state was broke. We were in the midst of the depression," he said.

When he came to the legislature, he had no intention of introducing a gambling bill. He said a colleague had such a bill but was "afraid to introduce it because of the reaction of his wife." Tobin agreed to do it.

"I had two other reasons. First, illegal gambling was prevalent. Everyone had a blanket and a deck of cards or dice and it was getting out of hand. Some of these tinhorn cops were collecting 50 bucks a month for allowing it.

"Secondly, the state needed revenue. This way we could pick up the money from the license fees for the games."

"I'll never forget one committee meeting. About 200 preachers and women, mostly from Reno, were crowded into the room. As I walked in one lady pointed me out and remarked to her companion, 'and he looks like such a nice young man.'"

"I guess they must have thought I was the devil."

The measure eventually passed the legislature and Gov. Fred Balzar signed it into law March 19, 1931. The same year, the legislature approved the then-liberal divorce law requiring six weeks residence for a decree. Together, they helped carry Nevada through the depression, but it wasn't until World War II, with the development of the Las Vegas Strip, that legal gambling really began to blossom.

Tobin had one chance to get into the business "but I was too busy hustlin' cows at the time," he said. He said legal gambling "doesn't hurt the moral climate a bit."

"At least kids can't gamble now," he added. "Hell's fire, before, as long as a youngster had a coin he could play the slot machines because they were not illegal and there was nothing the law could do. At the high school in Winnemucca, the boys used to make slugs to fit the slots."

Tobin himself doesn't gamble much. "You know you can't win," he said.

Playboy Prince In Haiti

By TORONTO TELEGRAM NEWS SERVICE

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The age of the playboy prince is not dead.

But now, as if in answer to this region's age-old obsession with exotic contrast, Jean-Claude Duvalier is being groomed to assume power.

Jean-Claude, a bulky 19-year-old who is known to his closest friends as "Baskethead," is the only son of Haiti's aging and ailing dictator, Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier.

Having survived at least two heart attacks and half-a-dozen uprisings, Papa Doc decided last November to put his governmental affairs — including the matter of succession — in order.

When Jean-Claude took his father's place at the annual Army Day parade to accept the salute and hand out medals, Duvalier's wretchedly poor and oppressed subjects began to get the drift of his thinking.

Then followed a declaration in the semi-official daily Le Nouveau Monde that "President Duvalier has chosen his son Jean-Claude to continue his work of reparation."

And within days, government officials had begun feverishly amending parts of the 1964 Duvalierist constitution to lower the minimum age for a president from 40 to 20.

Even as such irritating legal trivia were being ironed out, the moon-faced, 200-pound Jean-Claude appeared to be in rehearsal.

The young man no longer moves around freely. Even when attending the law school in which he was hastily enrolled last October, he is flanked by units of the heavily-armed and deadly Ton Ton Macoutes, the secret police.

He already has taken official inspection trips to government projects and has received the military honors reserved for the chief of state.

Up to late 1970, his main interests had been his six late-model cars and his girls.

Jean-Claude's rule, when it comes, stands to perpetuate the ruthless suppression which has characterized Papa Doc's 13-year rule over the three million inhabitants of the world's oldest black republic.

The lad is a lot like Ramfis Trujillo, the late son of the late dictator of the Dominican Republic, Raphael Trujillo.

Trujillo made Ramfis a full colonel at age nine, but as the boy ripened he became more interested — like Jean-Claude —in his movie-star sweethearts, his yachts, cars and planes.

Ramfis personally directed the investigation, the torture and the killing of almost all those implicated in his father's assassination.

Jean-Claude, local legend has it, used a palace officer as a target during pistol practice when he was 13 and shot him fatally.

Assuming it does occur, Jean-Claude's accession to the presidency could also prove to be a short-lived, final fling in the chronicles of playboy princes.

The situation in Haiti after Papa Doc Duvalier will be far messier and events could move far more swiftly than in the Dominican Republic which, after Trojillo, had to be cleaned up by an invasion force of U.S. marines.

A behind-the-scene power struggle is already in progress.

Papa Doc's ambitious daughter, Marie-Denise, wants her husband, former Lieutenant-Colonel Max Dominique, named as successor. Duvalier first exiled Marie-Denise in 1967, then shot 19 army officer friends of Dominique's when he thought they were plotting to overthrow him.

The Dominiques returned to Haiti from Paris late last December.

Palace security chief Luckner Cambronne — who controls the 600-strong palace guard, some 500 other elite troops, and the Ton Ton Macoutes — is another potential rival. He's been waiting in the wings as Duvalier's "most loyal and trusted servant" for years.

So has former Finance Minister Clovis Desinor, who was abruptly dismissed from his post last October when Duvalier learned that Washington would like to see Desinor take over the reins of government.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Heart Attack Risk Factors: Smoking, Tension, Cholesterol

For 10 years cardiac researchers have worked hard to determine what predisposed a person to a heart attack. They knew the cause was hardening of the coronary arteries, but why did the walls of these vessels thicken and interfere with circulation to the heart muscle? This question never has been answered to the satisfaction of all concerned.

CARDIOLOGISTS did find out that most people who had a heart attack often smoked heavily, had high blood pressure, or too much cholesterol or other lipids (fats) in the blood serum. In fact, these three factors occurred so often (alone or in combination) that they were labeled major risk factors. Since the offenders can be modified, avoided, or corrected, there was a possibility that atherosclerosis could be delayed or even prevented.

Progress has been made, in that the results of studies in centers here and elsewhere covering thousands of people showed that, in general, the outcome is better among those who correct or eradicate the heart attack risk factors:

THE RESEARCHERS were also able to associate other risk factors with the hardening process. Heredity entered the picture and some people had a long family history of heart attacks, often before age 50. These people cannot get a new set of grandparents but forewarned is forearmed. Obesity is a trait known to encourage heart trouble. Many fatties develop hypertension and elevated cholesterol levels. These factors and not the excess weight may be responsible.

For years diabetes has been recognized as a risk factor in premature hardening of the arteries. However, the condition can be controled with diet, insulin, and the avoidance of obesity. Sedentary living seems to increase the risk of a heart attack although the evidence is not convincing. Exercise, of course, has proved beneficial in improving the circulation.

Tension resulting from emotional crises, personal life situations, and unusual fatigue may also precipitate heart attacks, especially when the individual has arteriosclerosis.

PHONEMIC DEAFNESS

S. N. writes: I have a hearing aid and can hear TV, movies, and the stereo, but don't understand the words. My doctor says my hearing nerves are dead. Can anything be done for me?

REPLY

If your hearing nerve is dead, learning to read lips will help. In a condition called phonemic regression, words are heard, but not understood. It is considered an aging process.

HER ARM ACHES

Mrs. G. writes: When I do anything with my right arm, it aches from the armpit to the hand. What could be causing this pain?

REPLY

Neuritis, arthritis, bursitis or poor circulation should be considered first.

CANCER OF THE BLOOD

B. H. writes: What are the symptoms of cancer of the blood?

REPLY

If you refer to leukemia, the symptoms are pallor, weakness, fever, bleeding tendencies, and enlargement of the glands of the neck, armpits and groin.

SHRINKS WITH AGE

R. C. P. writes: Does everyone shrink with age?

REPLY

Yes, provided they live long enough.

Thai Village Is Terrorized; Four Are Slain

BANGKOK (UPI)—About 25 armed and masked men Tuesday terrorized a village of 50 families, shot and killed four people and kidnaped three others, according to reports reaching here today.

The raid on the Klong Prakot village in north Thailand also resulted in the theft of $10,000 worth of valuables, police said.

Piecing together the story, authorities said the raiders surrounded the village and opened fire, some with M16 rifles.

Four people were cut down by gunfire as the villagers scattered in all directions, police said. The gunmen ransacked every house in the village.

Sheet Of Ice Destroys Barn

BENJAMIN, Utah (UPI)—Oldtimers brag about winters so severe that gale winds emptied lakes by blowing away the ice cover.

To sheep farmer Glen Ludlow, that's mild. His barn, situated about 100 yards uphill from Utah Lake, was leveled by a sheet of lake ice 9 inches thick and 400 feet long pushed from the shoreline by winds up to 50 miles per hour.

The ice crunched through the side of the barn early Wednesday and piled up inside to a depth of 12 feet. Ludlow estimated damage at $15,000.

Sub Is Sighted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon says a Soviet nuclear submarine has been sighted in Cuban waters, and a Soviet guided missile carrier is operating off the west coast of Florida.

Some Money Found Near Golf Course

Attention, whoever lost several thousand dollars in the hills above Mill Valley's golf course — the Mill Valley police department is anxious to talk to you.

The girl, whom Sisk declined to identify, passed part of the money around to friends at the school but surrendered what was left of it to police after school employees told them of the incident.

Sisk said about $1,600 of the cash has been recovered and "we know where the rest of it is" — among friends of the girl.

Probe Explodes After Launch

VANDENBERG AFB, Calif. (UPI)—A Thor-Agena booster combination missile carrying a classified satellite exploded in a ball of flames Wednesday about 40 seconds after launch from this military aerospace center.

The Air Force said there were no injuries. The debris from the 70-foot long missile landed about a quarter mile from the launch site in an uninhabited area.

The missile was launched by an Air Force-industry team and a military spokesman would only say the "purpose of flight was to place a satellite in orbit."

Commercial Catches On As Hit Song

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A ballad written as a ditty for a television commercial for a bank is supplanting "Oh Promise Me" at weddings.

Paul Williams, 30, the lyricist for "We've Only Just Begun," said he received more than 50 requests to use the song at nuptials before sheet music for it even was published.

Several hundred high school and colleges have asked permission to use the words as the theme for their yearbooks.

Williams and his partner, Roger Nichols, wrote the song more than a year ago when an advertising agency, Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, needed music for a commercial for Crocker-Citizens National Bank.

"It's really a tasty commercial," Williams said. "It has been winning a lot of awards. It's low-key, a soft-sell. You have to see it several times before you realize it has anything to do with a bank."

The commercial features a short film of a wedding, with the first two verses of "We've Only Just Begun" played in the background. As the newlyweds leave on their honeymoon, the words, "You've got a long way to go. We'd like to help you get there," flash across the screen, and then the name of the bank.

"We wrote the third verse for their second commercial," Williams said. "That one shows a man leaving for his first day on a new job and his wife seeing him off. We wrote a bridge between the verses and had the song.

"Mark Lindsay recorded it on an album, then the Carpenters came out with the single, which has sold about two million copies so far."

"I was an actor," he said, "but I don't know if I gave up acting or it gave me up."

He was filming "The Chase" with Marlon Brando when he began fiddling with the guitar of a fellow cast member, and wrote his first song.

He has had hits with "Out in the Country" sung by Three Dog Night, "The Drifter" by Steve Lawrence, and "Someday Man" by the Monkees. "We've Only Just Begun" has been recorded by Dionne Warwick, Lawrence Welk, Glen Campbell, Jerry Vale and Claudine Longet, among others.

"Before this song my publishers called me a writer of standards that never were hits," Williams said.

He believes "We've Only Just Begun" will become a classic "because it says something meaningful to people, regardless of time."

"I try to write about the positive side of life. God knows there's enough negativism," William said.

"I'm a rank sentimentalist and I like my songs to have a message, but I believe a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down.

"I like to think of myself as the old Tin Pan Alley type, with a cigar in my mouth," he laughed.

Proposed Law Would Ban Sale, Use Of Pesticides

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill prohibiting the sale or use of DDT and other "hard" pesticides in California and levying a fine of up to $6,000 per day on manufacturers was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Leo Ryan, D-Burlingame.

The state Department of Agriculture, by regulation, already has banned the use of DDT in homes, gardens and on most crops except where there is no suitable substitute. Tomatoes are probably the crop still most extensively sprayed with DDT.

The department has not prohibited the use of other "hard" pesticides, known as chlorinated hydrocarbons.

However, before a farmer may use a chlorinated hydrocarbon on his crops he must have the permission of the county agricultural commissioner.

Ryan's bill would ban the use of all chlorinated hydrocarbons in California unless there was no other adequate substitute available.

His bill would make use of the pesticides by farmers and others a misdemeanor. Manufacturers who sell the "hard" pesticides in California would be subject to a $6,000-per-day fine. Manufacturers also could be fined if the pesticide leaked or spilled into state waters, land or the air.

"A great deal of damage has already been done by the persistent nature of DDT and other hard pesticides, but if we can put a stop to its use anywhere in the state now we might be able to eventually reverse the destructive process set into action before we knew how dangerous these chemicals could be," said Ryan.

Work On Boulevard Is Sought

The Lynwood Park Improvement Association is going to request the City of Novato to undertake maintenance and repair work on South Novato Boulevard, the main traffic arterial in South Novato.

Association members agreed Tuesday night that work is needed on the heavily traveled road, reported Gloria Burnett, secretary.

They also agreed to seek changes in the road system in the Lynwood area to reduce traffic and hazards, she said.

The association proposed a cul de sac for the east end of Sunset Parkway and a cul de sac on Leafwood Drive on the north side of Sunset Parkway.

Mrs. Burnett explained that Leafwood Drive now extends across Sunset Parkway, and residents feel it should not serve as a through roadway.

Also proposed was a cul de sac at the south end of Leafwood Drive, south of Sunset Parkway.

Increased Threat Of Palestinian Air Hijacks Seen

ZURICH (UPI)—Swiss federal authorities have warned police and airline officials in Zurich, Bern, Basle and Geneva of increased danger of aircraft hijackings by Palestinian guerrillas.

The warning, based on information from the French embassy in Amman, said the threat comes from George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), which could try to restore its weakened ranks and influence by dramatic hijackings like those it carried out last September.

The Amman embassy said the worldwide outcry against the hijackings last fall has led the other Palestinian organizations to apply pressure on the PFLP to cease the tactic.

Pot Charge Is Reduced

A hearing on defense motions was set for March 9.

PUBLIC DEFENDER'S OFFICE

Indigent Fees Supported

By MARY LEYDECKER

A change in state law that would permit the public defender's office to collect small fees from indigents is being supported by Marin County supervisors although the man serving as public defender is doubtful about such a measure.

Acting Public Defender Harold J. Truett said yesterday that forcing defendants to pay even a small part of their defense costs might cause some to "Abandon their right to counsel."

"I can hear some of them saying to the judge, 'You forced me to have an attorney. Now you're forcing me to pay for it;" Truett said.

He also speculated that the cost of determining how much individuals should pay and collecting it might amount to more than the money that would be taken in.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, however, disagreed with Truett. Maloney, who has drafted a bill which Marin supervisors hope will be introduced in the state Legislature, said that such a system is now used effectively in juvenile court.

County supervisors, concerned about the rising cost of the public defender's office — which this year has a budget of $233,044 — have urged that persons who can pay some of the cost be forced to do so.

Truett said that his office has no fixed guidelines for determining which persons are entitled to free legal defense by his staff of nine attorneys.

"We get guidelines from the local bar association," he explained. "We are told that at present a person charged with a felony must have $300 just to get started with the case with a private attorney.

A misdemeanor charge would mean a retainer of $150," he added.

These costs, he said, would be only for preliminary stages of a case and would not cover the cost of a trial.

If Truett's staff determines that an individual cannot afford a private attorney, he is declared eligible for the public defender. "If a person owns real estate, we automatically decide he can raise money to pay an attorney," he said.

"We look at each case individually," Truett continued. "One man earning $100 a week whose wife works and who has no children would not be eligible for our services," he said. "While another earning the same amount with a wife at home with five children, might be considered eligible."

Those who urge that fees ranging from $5 to $25 be charged persons who could afford to pay small amounts say that even these amounts would help offset the cost of the public defender's office.

They say that those termed "indigents" by the courts because they can't afford private attorneys can often afford some part of their defense costs.

Truett is doubtful, however, saying, "Some of these people work one month and not the next. Collecting would be difficult."

Furthermore he foresees that taking up valuable time of judges in fixing charges might cost a lot more money than would be collected.

Not so, said Maloney.

"In juvenile court, the county revenue officer makes the decision of how much parents should pay for the services of the public defender for their children. If there is any dispute, the judge makes the final decision," he explained.

Maloney and County Administrator Alan Bruce are also eyeing a possibility for cutting costs for private attorneys that are court-appointed to represent indigents.

This practice comes about because in many cases which involve more than one defendant, "a conflict of interest" between the defendants is declared, and each must, under the law, have his own attorney.

During the current fiscal year, $60,000 has been appropriated for appointed attorneys in marin courts.

Bruce and Maloney's plan, also envisioned by officials in other counties, is for public defenders in Bay Area counties to switch around so that the appointment of outside attorneys may be avoided as much as possible.

Bill To Revamp Road Fund Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill revamping the system for distributing state transportation funds and making available $25 million for local projects was introduced Tuesday by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco.

Foran said his bill abolishes the 11 separate funds currently used for the state's transportation expenses and revenues. Instead, only one fund would be used.

An immediate result of the plan, he said, would be to free a one-time $25 million cash payment to local government and $7 million for state road construction.

Youth Held In Burglary Probe

A 15-year-old Larkspur youth has been cited to juvenile authorities on suspicion of burglarizing Madera Foods in Corte Madera.

Officers said Ross Malcom Yates of 374 Wilson Way, Larkspur, was cited after he was found Friday hiding in the market's stockroom. Two other youths suspected of entering the store at 508 Tamalpais Drive escaped on foot, officers said.

Six bottles of wine and an undetermined amount of other goods were reported missing after the 8:23 p.m. incident.

Yates was booked into Marin Juvenile Hall.

JIM GILMARTIN

An Open Letter To Bob Hope

AN OPEN LETTER to Mr. Bob Hope, c/o Palm Springs, California:

Dear Bobby Bird:

First, I would like to congratulate you for the tremendous success of your annual Bob Hope Golf Tournament staged in Palm Springs last weekend.

As I have been No. 1 fan of Arnold Palmer for years, his victory thrilled me to pieces. Charge!

Yet, there were two other highlights which I thoroughly enjoyed over the television.

Of course, your post-tourney performance was a classic. I refer to the interview you had with those three girls. I thought I'd die when you asked the first girl her age and when she replied "21," you said something like, "Heck,I have balls older than that . . . (long pause) . . . er, golf balls, that is."

That was really cute, Bobby Bird.

Then there was Vice-President Spiro Agnew's unforgettable tee shots. I mean the ones where on two shots he hit three spectators with what we golf fans call "shanks."

It just came to me, Bobby Bird, that in light of the Veep's Shank Shots, why don't you change the name of your theme song to "Shanks For The Memories." I think Spiral would appreciate it.

And in closing, Bobby Bird, the fact that you are such a good friend of Mr. Agnew's, may I suggest that you use your influence on a brainstorm of mine.

I mean, this plan I have to end the war in Southeast Asia. Why don't you send Mr. Agnew to the Saigon Golf and Country Club with a bag full of golf clubs. By the 15th hole, the way he plays, he'd wipe the hell out of the Viet Cong.

Well, it was only a thought.

Again, Mr. Hope, my thanks to you for presenting such an exciting tournament.

Sincerely,
Shamus "Shanks" Gilmartin

THE MEADOW CLUB can expect its beautiful golf links to be even more immaculately manicured in the near future.

The private Fairfax club's golf superintendent, Donald J. Baker, has attended the 42nd International Turfgrass Conference in Denver, Colo.

From what I'm told, this conference arms superintendents with new knowledge and techniques to help them provide the ever-growing golf world with the finest golf turf. Highlighting the program were 35 outstanding speakers who included some of the top agronomists, research scientists and golf course supes in the world.

I just had to use that sentence because I like to impress you with fancy words like agronomists. That's why every time I go to the races I go directly to the turf club with all those rich agronomists.)

CLOB JOB — Charlie Flynn (14) of Marin is getting clobbered by Wayne Kemp of Contra Costa in this first half action of last night's game, although no foul was ruled on the play. No. 42 is Floyd Allen of Contra Costa and No. 24 for Marin is Joe Smith. Marin won, 83-79.

Marin Wins Thriller In Final Seconds

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Charlie Flynn, who lifts the fortunes of College of Marin's Tars just by being in the lineup, stole the ball and then the show with 24 seconds left last night to give the Tars an 83-79, Camino Norte Conference basketball victory over Contra Costa Junior College in Kentfield.

The largest crowd of the season, nearly 1,000, was cautious, confident, frightened and finally exalted as the Tars beat the Comets of San Pablo for the first time ever in a CNC game. Both teams are now 8-3 in conference play, tied for second place behind De Anza of Cupertino.

Marin, which lost to Contra Costa, 91-62 in their only other meeting this year, blew a 16-point halftime lead and was trailing by one when Flynn took all the pressure on his own shoulders. Fouled before he could score a layup following his clutch steal, which interrupted a stall Contra Costa thought would end the game, the former Redwood High School star made the first free throw in a one-and-one situation, to tie the score at 79 apiece.

He missed the second shot, but Ed Herrnberger, himself a first rate hero of the night, corraled the rebound, and shoveled the ball back to Flynn. Again he was fouled. This time he missed the first of a one-and-one set, but gained a reprieve when the Comets committed a lane violation. Charlie crossed himself, and sank the next two shots, the winning points. Herrnberger, who led all scorers with 23 points, subsequently sank two more charity shots with 10 seconds left for insurance.

The story of the game prior to the final magical seconds could be translated into the time Flynn spent in the lineup. When he came off the bench midway through the first half, the lead had changed hands a half dozen times, and the score stood even at 24 all.

Obviously infected with Flynn's spirit, the Tars proceeded to belt the Comets senseless for the next nine minutes. Center Roosevelt Green, thwarted completely by Contra Costa pivot man Floyd Allen last month in San Pablo, handled his adversary easily and boomed in 12 points before the intermission. And guard Joe Smith, also looking to erase the memory of a poor performance

Boston Crushes Sagging Warriors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) --It could be the San Francisco Warriors are trying to get all the bad games out of their systems before the NBA playoffs.

But coach Al Attles fears if they continue to play like they have in the last two games, the playoffs also may be out of reach.

Coming off a 45-point loss to Seattle, the Warriors ran into hot-shooting Boston at the Oakland Coliseum-Arena Wednesday night and played dead to the tune of 129-99. At one point, the Celtics held a commanding 44-point lead at 113-69 with 7:19 remaining.

The loss left San Francisco at 34-32 with a 4 1-2 game bulge over third place Seattle in the NBA's Pacific Division. Only the first two teams in each division make the playoffs.

Boston outscored the Warriors 70-35 in the second and third periods while firing a sizzling 57 per cent from the field. San Francisco, meanwhile, managed only 11 baskets and a 23 per cent accuracy over that span, including a measly 14 points in the third quarter.

Dave Cowens, Boston's 6-9 rookie center from Florida State, outplayed Warrior center Nate Thurmond by scoring 20 points and pulling down 14 rebounds. Thurmond managed only 15 points.

John Havlicek bucketed 28 points and Jo Jo White added 24 to lead the Celtics. Guard Jeff Mullins' 19 points topped the Warriors.

One bright spot for the Warriors was the shooting of rookie guard Levi Fontaine. He scored all of his 16 points in the final 8:08 of play.

San Francisco will try to snap out of its slump against the San Diego Rockets at the Cow Palace Friday night. On Saturday, The Milwaukee Bucks, only NBA team the Warriors have failed to beat this season, make their final appearance of the season in the Bay Area, also at the Cow Palace.

All Teams Get Fat On Seals

Latest to take advantage of the lackadaisical play of the Californians is the Minnesota North Stars who hung a 3-2 loss on the Seals Wednesday night before 13,473 at the Metropolitan Sports Center.

Last year, the North Stars were unable to beat the Seals at the Sports Center in nearby Bloomington. But this season Minnesota has won all three games there with the Seals and sports a 1-4 mark against the westerners with one game remaining in Oakland.

Despite losing all four games on the recent road trip, the Seals will return home to their first complete sellout of the season Friday night. That's when Bobby Orr, Phil Esposito, John Bucyk and all the rest of those high-flying Boston Bruins come to town. Chris Worthy played the entire game in goal for the Seals and kicked away 31 Minnesota shots. But three got by him and that was enough.

The line of Bill Goldsworthy-Danny Grant-Jude Drouin got the scores off Worthy who was starting only his third game of the season. Two of the goals were by Goldsworthy.

California enjoyed a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period on Ernie Hicke's 18th lamplighter of the season. Then after the North Stars scored three goals, Teddy Hampson notched his 10th of the campaign with 3:06 remaining on feeds from Doug Roberts and Gerry Ehman.

The Seals have lost 28 of the 33 games they've played on the road so far this season. If it's any consolation, 14 of their remaining 20 games will be at home where they enjoy a 13-11-1 record.

A RAIDER WITH PROBLEMS

Wells Is Sentenced To 60 Days

OAKLAND (UPI) —Warren Wells, the brilliant outside receiver of the Oakland Raiders, will go to jail for 60 days in order to undergo a battery of psychological tests.

Superior Court Judge Leonard Dieden Wednesday ordered Wells to jail after he pleaded no contest to a Nov. 14 hit-run charge.

Wells, 28, was put on probation last year after he pleaded guilty to the attempted rape of a 32-year-old woman. His probation required that he not drink and avoid places where liquor is served.

Highway Patrolmen testified that Wells failed sobriety tests after two traffic arrests last month and Oakland police officer Wayne McPhee testified that Wells was under the influence of alcohol when arrested on the hit-run charge.

The case will again come before the superior court April 19 and the decision then will be made as to Wells' future, based partly on the findings during the next 60 days.

Judge Dieden rejected a defense request that Wells be sent to the Langley Porter Clinic in San Francisco for psychiatric treatment and instead ordered him to the Santa Rita rehabilitation center east of Oakland.

Testifying at the hearing was Dr. James D. Jones, professor of psychology at Texas Southern and dean of students at the school when Wells was there. Dr. Jones said that Wells has an extremely low tolerance for alcohol and that he has serious psychiatric and emotional problems.

Wells is the main support for his family in Houston, Dr. Jones said, and is not strong enough to make the necessary decisions.

On Monday, Wells paid $125 for the hit-run charge and he also is out on $1,000 bail from Jefferson County in Texas, where he was arrested on a high-grade misdemeanor charge when a rifle was found lying on the floor of his car.

'Slow Recovery'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Heavyweight Oscar Bonavena was reported to be "recovering slowly" from a hand injury suffered in training for a scheduled bout with former champion Floyd Patterson.

WILL ABIDE BY DECISION

Haywood Watches From Sidelines

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)— Owner Sam Schulman of the Seattle Supersonics claimed today a court ruling benching star forward Spencer Haywood was a partial victory for the club.

"It was far more favorable than appears on the surface," said Schulman in a telephone interview from New York City where he was preparing for today's meeting of team owners in the National Basketball Association.

"We expected a worse decision. What the court apparently is telling us is to settle our own differences or settle them in court."

The 6-foot-9 Haywood, acquired Dec. 30 by Seattle from the Denver Rockets of the rival American Basketball Association, did not suit up for Wednesday night's game against Portland and probably won't see any more action the rest of the season.

A panel of three federal judges in San Francisco Tuesday dissolved an injunction that had prevented other NBA teams from interfering with Haywood while he played with the Sonics.

Schulman said the most important decision in the case could come Monday from U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson in Los Angeles.

The federal judge will consider a summary judgment regarding whether the league's four-year clause applies to Haywood.

"If the decision is in our favor," Shulman said, "Spencer will belong to Seattle. That would be it, except that Spencer's Denver contract still must be declared invalid."

If he doesn't rule on the matter Monday, the case will be tried March 2.

NBA Commissioner Watler Kennedy officially "disapproved" Haywood's playing contract Wednesday.

As authorized by the appeals court, Kennedy said that any further use of him "will be considered a willful violation by Seattle of the provisions of the constitution and by-laws of the NBA."

Schulman said, "We will abide by the decision as it now stands and will not do anything to jeopardize our position."

Mrs. Laver Not Missing Any More Matches

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mary Laver figures she literally can't afford to miss any of her husband's matches in the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic.

Mrs. Laver, the wife of tennis star Rod Laver, watched her husband win nine straight matches at $10,000 in the Classic from Jan. 2 to Feb. 6—but then decided to take a skiing vacation in Aspen, Colo., when Laver played in the Philadelphia International Classic.

Mrs. Laver flew back to New York Wednesday night and Rod won his 10th classic match.

She now plans to go to New Haven, Conn., Friday night to see Laver's match against Roy Emerson. She likes to cash those $10,000 checks.

Slugger Carl Yastrzemski Is Now Baseball's Richest

By United Press International

Boston's Carl Yastrzemski became the highest paid player in the American League and possibly all of baseball Wednesday and Mel Stottlemyre retained his status as the highest paid New York Yankee.

Yastrzemski signed a three-year contract for an estimated $150,000 per year and Stottlemyre followed suit by accepting a slight raise, to an estimated $70,000 from the Yanks despite a disappointing 15-13 record last year.

"I'm very happy with the contract and wouldn't have signed for three years unless I got what I wanted," said Yastrzemski, who missed his bid for a fourth American League batting championship last year when California's Alex Johnson edged him by .0003 of a point.

In other signings, the Los Angeles Dodgers announced that outfielder Manny Mota and pitcher Jim Flynn agreed to terms leaving only four players including shortstop Maury Wills among the unsigned.

The Kansas City Royals announced that veteran pitchers Dave Morehead and Wally Bunker had come to terms and pitcher Casey Cox signed with the Washington Senators.

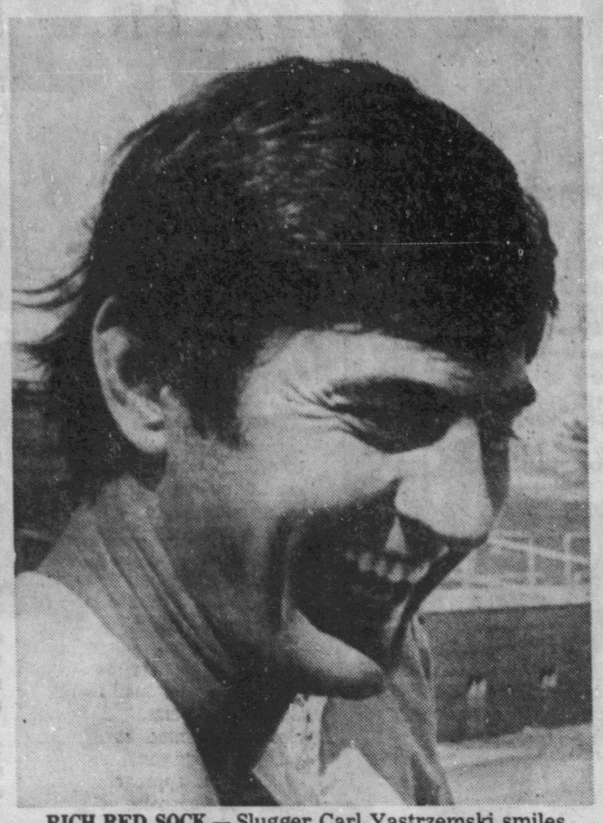
In a minor trade, the San Diego Padres sent infielder Van Kelly to the Atlanta Braves' Richmond, Va., farm club for pitcher Chuck Westerhouse.

A pair of familiar pitching names were also in the news from the spring training headquarters.

Veteran Pedro Ramos, the 35-year-old right-hander who pitched with five major league clubs in 15 seasons, signed a contract with Atlanta and will report to the Richmond affiliate.

And Denny McLain drew praise from his new manager Ted Williams of the Washington Senators.

McLain was the first Senator to pitch batting practice and Williams commented, "No one asked him to pitch but he's anxious to get started and that's good. I just hope he doesn't get carried away and do too much too soon."



RICH RED SOCK — Slugger Carl Yastrzemski smiles after signing a contract yesterday that made him the highest paid player in baseball. He received a three-year contract estimated at $150,000 per year, although details of the pact were not disclosed.

Laver — Another $10,000

Emerson was more than just another interested spectator Wednesday night when Laver polished off Dennis Ralston 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 in the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic. That's 10 straight and $100,000 for Laver in the winner-take-all $10,000 classic matches.

The man who'll try to stop Laver from making it 11 straight and a sweep before the Feb. 22 semi-finals is Emerson. Already a straight set loser to Laver on Jan. 16, Emerson will face Laver for the second time in New Haven, Conn. on Friday.

Emerson knows he has a formidable task. "The last two months he's been playing the best tennis of his career," Emerson said. "He's at the top of his game."

And Emerson knows when Laver is at his best. There was a time when Emerson was considered the best player in tennis. But that changed in 1962 when Laver won his first grand slam, beating Emerson in the finals of three of the four tournaments.

Laver has been the man to beat in tennis ever since—and he hasn't been beaten that often.

Ralston was given a shot at it since he'd beaten Laver in their last two matches in the U.S. Open at Forest Hills and the Pacific Championships.

Ralston started out well, winning the first set as he broke Laver in the sixth game. But he said the turning point came in the second game of the second set when he felt a linesman blew a call. Ralston was obviously upset and it looked like he threw a ball in the lineman's direction but Ralston claimed he didn't.

"I couldn't believe it," he said. "I had one ball in my hand and I threw it to the back fence. I thought I'm really going to get nailed for throwing a ball at a linesman. But I didn't throw the ball at him."

The ball boy quietly retrieved the lob throw that missed the lineman and there was no further protest but Ralston said he felt it, "changed the whole match." He added, "I lost my concentration, it's my own fault. I felt I was close to breaking the match wide open and I felt it get away."

Ralston wound up double faulting on game point as Laver broke him for the first time in the match. Laver then held his service on four straight points including two aces and he was ahead 3-0 in the second set and he went on to win three straight sets.

Laver admitted that he thought his shot on the controversial call "might have been a little wide" even though the linesman called it good.

But Laver felt he was playing well even when he was behind in the first set.

"I never felt I lost my momentum," he said.

THIS DAY IN SPORTS

Key Match: Nastase Vs. Gorman

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI)—Ilie Nastase, beaten twice by Americans when Rumania challenged for the Davis Cup in 1969, must defeat a new generation of American Davis Cuppers to win the United States Men's indoor open tennis championships here.

Nastase, the defending champion and top foreign seed, takes on third-seeded American, Tom Gorman of Seattle, a member of the U.S. Davis Cup team, in the featured quarter final round tonight.

Nastase won his third round match Wednesday night, 6-4, 64, over Richard Russell of Jamaica. Gorman routed England's Gerald Battrick, 6-2, 60.

Graebner won, 7-5, 6-1, over Marty Mulligan, the native Australian who now plays Davis Cup for Italy.

Fillol, who is unseeded, outclassed Juan Gisbert of Spain, 6-2, 6-2 to make the quarter finals.

Other quarter finalists who will see action Friday night are the top ranked American, Cliff Rickey of San Angelo, Texas; Thomas Koch of Brazil, the fourth foreign seed; and Vladimir Zenik of Czechoslovakia. They all won their third round matches last night.

Also qualifying for the quarter finals was Peter Curtis of England. He advanced when Jim Osborne, the four-ranked American from Bountiful, Utah, fell and broke his wrist last night.

The championship in the $50,000 open will be decided Sunday.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Freddie Mills, 146, McAllister, Okla., outpointed Jim Caffey, 146½, Youngstown, Ohio.

Carpenter Card Assistant; Eagles Sign No. 1 Choice

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Lew Carpenter, a 10-year National Football League player and a seven-year coach, today was named an assistant to new head coach Bob Hollway of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Carpenter, with the Washington Redskins the last two years, will work with Cardinal receivers and the defense. He will report to St. Louis on Monday.

His selection follows Wednesday's announcement that Hollway has let go of two of former coach Charley Winner's assistants, Red Miller and Ken Blue.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Eagles head coach Jerry Williams said present plans call for using first draft choice Richard Harris as a defensive end.

Harris, a lineman from Grambling College, signed a four year contract Wednesday with the National Football League club.

The Eagles said Harris was given an undisclosed amount of a bonus for signing but the contract did not include a no-cut clause.

SPORTS SHORTS

Billiards

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Former world champion Frank McGown of New York ran 143 balls to defeat Jim Rempe of Scranton, Pa., 150-9 for his fourth straight victory to take the straight pool lead Wednesday in the $40,000 world 3-in-1 pocket billiard championships.

Also undefeated with three victories was defending champion Irving Crane, five times world champion from Rochester, N.Y. Crane scored over Jimmy Moore, Albuquerque, N.M., 150-65.

Basketball

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa State Athletic Director Clay Stapleton and a three-member committee today began heir search for a new head basketball coach to replace Glen Anderson whose contract was terminated.

Anderson, 41, was asked Wednesday by the university's athletic council to step down as head coach at the end of the season but to stay at the university in some other capacity.

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (UPI —Bowling Green State University basketball coach Bob Conibear, facing a second losing season in his three years here, will resign after the final game this year.

"In all fairness to the basketball program at Bowling Green, I feel it is best to step down at the end of the current season," Conibear said Wednesday.

NBA ROUNDUP

Haywoodless Sonics Win

Maybe the Seattle SuperSonics really don't need Spencer Haywood that much.

Haywood, the controversial star who caused a storm of protest when he jumped the Denver Rockets of the rival American Basketball Association to sign with the NBA Sonics, Wednesday was benched by a court ruling. NBA teams protested Haywood's signing since his class at the University of Detroit has not yet graduated.

Dick Snyder picked up the slack Wednesday night, however, scoring 25 points to rally the Sonics to a 130-126 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers. Portland, which won five of its six previous games, led 120-119 later in the game when Snyder hit a free throw and a field goal to put Seattle ahead to stay.

In other NBA action, Milwaukee downed Philadelphia 119-114, Boston crushed San Francisco 129-99, Phoenix swamped Cincinnati 133-117, Chicago beat Cleveland 109-104 and Buffalo edged past Baltimore 118-114.

Lew Alcindor scored 41 points as the Bucks rallied to beat Philadelphia. The 76ers led 108-106 with four minutes remaining when Jon McGlocklin hit on a layup and Bobby Dandridge converted a three-point play to boost the Bucks in front.

Clem Haskins' 29 points helped Phoenix record its biggest scoring output of the season in the Suns' triumph over Cincinnati. Charlie Paulk led the Royals with 27 points.

Tom Boerwinkle and Chet Walker scored [illegible] Chicago points over the last 3 1-2 minutes as the Bulls beat Cleveland to move within a half-game of second place Detroit in the Midwest Division. Bob Love's 30 points were high for Chicago while rookie John Johnson also had 30 for the Cavaliers.

Jockey Injured IN GGF Mishap

Rosenkranz, with apprentice Danny Isbell in the saddle, romped to a three-length victory over Shakazu in the featured race. Upper Balcony finished third in the field of nine allowance sprinters.

Rosenkranz paid $3.40 as the public favorite while covering the six furlongs in 1.09 4-5.

TUCSON OPEN

Trevino Tries For No. 3

Trevino was the top money-man of the year in 1970 but in the six tournaments to date this year has fared poorly. He withdrew from two of them because of illness in his family. He may make his big comeback on the par 36-36—72 Tucson National Golf Course. A third straight win would be without precedent and the odds, of course, are against it.

Shaw, the 28-year-old Oregonian, has won two of the six 1971 tournaments—the Crosby Clambake and the Hawaiian Open. Hs top money-winning total is $72,933, more than $12,000 better than the No. 2 man, Miller Barber who has $60,090.

winners chose to pass up this $110,000 tournament which runs through Sunday in the normal course of 72 holes.

Palmer moved into the No. 3 money-spot with $56,162 when he beat Ray Floyd on the first extra hole of a sudden-death playoff to take the Bob Hope Desert Classic last Sunday.

Barber and Floyd are here along with Lunn, winner of the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, first event of the year, and George Archer who won the Andy Williams San Diego Open. Barber won the Phoenix Open.

Boros, who has gone over the 50-mark agewise, can not be counted out of contention and seems to thrive in this hot, desert climate.

The course is a picturesque one—an oasis against a brown backdrop of barren-looking mountains. It has four water holes but its fairways are wide and accommodating. The longhitters love it here.

Palmer is resting this week to prepare for the National PGA championship in Florida. This is the only major title that has eluded him. His Palm Springs win broke a 14-month drought and at 41 he figures he won't have many more good chances for the PGA.

A Segregated Hall Of Fame

Really, sometimes I think Baseball as an industry is run by the Krupp Family. On second thought, cannon-makers have more heart.

You know what they've done now? They've segregated the Hall of Fame!

I ask you!

They have taken Baseball's shrine, Cooperstown, and turned it into a "Sorry, I can't serve you here — but if you'll step around to the back" place.

THEY HAVE told Satchel Paige they're going to let him in but he's to bring his House of David uniform with him. He's back to the Chattanooga Black Lookouts, the bus league. He's barnstorming again. He's in the comedy wing. He's on the Baltimore Elite Giants. The Indianapolis Clowns. He's an end man. Mr. Bones. He gets in the Stepin Fetchit Room, I guess.

Great gobbles of sheep shears! Who's in charge here, Senator Claghorn? Who in the world got the bright idea to dust off and put back the "Colored Only" sign in this day and age? Where have these guys BEEN?!

TELL ME it's a practical joke. Allen Funt is going out any minute and break up and say "Smile, you're on 'Candid Camera!'" There's no other rational explanation.

The situation is this: "Baseball's" Hall of Fame is actually run by, and its rules laid down by, a board of directors. While it includes baseball men such as the chairman of the board, former baseball commissioner Ford Frick, as well as Bob Carpenter of the Phils, league presidents Joe Cronin and Chub Feeney, the present commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox and former league president Warren Giles and William Harridge, it also includes sewing machine heirs, foundation presidents — monied residents of upper New York State. It is a private organization which has Baseball's sanction but is not governed by Baseball. One Paul Kerr is president. Stephen C. Clark, Dr. James Bordley III, Edward Stack and Howard C. Talbot are officers of the company. It is a tourist attraction — 3,000 people a day go through it in summer, 200,000 a year.

IT ARUGES that its rules are inflexible. Let us see.

For admission, an ACTIVE player must have been out of the game five years and get 75% of the vote of the baseball writers.

But, there is a "Veteran's Committee" which consists of a dozen men (players like Bill Terry, Frankie Frisch, executives like Giles, J. Roy Stockton and so on) and they can elect WHOM THEY WISH from a roster of players, managers, executives, umpires and, presumably, ushers and traveling secretaries, provided it has been 20 years since they left the game for players and five years since retirement for execs. This year, the Veterans Committee whisked SEVEN men into the Hall of Fame, one executive and six players. They are as full-fledged members as Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb. They get to eat with the family.

FIVE YEARS ago, this committee amended its own rules to admit Casey Stengel by lowering the five-year retirement to six months, provided the honoree was 65 years of age or older.

Impaneling a 10-man committee, 80 per cent of which is comprised of black players, writers and broadcasters to select (at the rate of one-a-year) great players from the old Negro leagues for a special section of the Hall is a clumsy, self-defeating attempt to right a wrong by compounding it. Every school boy knows Satchel Paige belongs in the Hall of Fame. So does every Hall of Famer.

A man who twice struck out 22 major leaguers in a game, who won 12 games in relief (and saved 10 others) for the old St. Louis Browns, who may have been the worst team ever to play the game, when he was at least 46 years old should not be in the back of this bus. No one ever pitched or batted against Satch was consulted in this move, you may be sure — not Joe DiMaggio, Dizzy Dean or Bob Feller, none of whom is ashamed to say he was the greatest.

BUT THIS notion of Jim Crow in Baseball's Heaven is appalling in its own right. I can't think of a more terrible idea. To have kept Satchel Paige from playing in the white leagues for 24 years and then bar him from the pearly gates on the grounds he didn't play the required 10 years is a shocking bit of insolent cynicism, a disservice to America.

What is this — 1840? Either let him in the front of the Hall — or move the damn thing to Mississippi.

DuPree-Rondon Title Fight

NEW YORK UPI — Jimmy DuPree of Jersey City, N.J., will meet Vicente Rondon of Venezuela on Feb. 27 at Caracas for the World Boxing Association's version of the light heavyweight championship.

in the East Bay, found range on his lefthanded jumpers, and he too got 12 before the half. Both Green and Smith finished with 19.

With Flynn out of there, the Tars saw their lead dwindle to 10 early in the second half, but the firecracker guard came in to steady the ship, and the margin zoomed to 15. Only when he came out for a rest, with five minutes to go, did the Comets begin their final drive.

Mike Lee and Wayne Kempt, dazzling outside shooters who finished with 19 and 17 points apiece, got red-hot, and that combined with the inside scoring of Allen succeeded in cutting Marin's seemingly comfortable lead from 13 to nothing in just four minutes. It was Allen, who during the entire second half took wholesale advantage of Green because the latter had four fouls, who dumped in a hook with a minute left to put the Comets ahead at 79-78.

The Tars, like a drowning man whose life passes before his eyes, were watching their chances for a post season playoff spot slip away when Flynn came off the bench once more, and rescued them.

International Field In Maine Ski Event

KINGFIELD, Maine (UPI)— Downhill races shifted from Switzerland for lack of snow had more than enough and the threat of even more today for the scheduled preliminary events to World Cup skiing at Sugarloaf Mountain.

An international field of over 100 men and women representing 14 nations wound up two days of trial runs Wednesday with only one major casualty, Canada's Doug Temple, who suffered a back fracture.

Officials who earlier had installed two fishnet barriers on the upper reaches of the famed narrow gauge trail hastily replaced them with 15-foot high rope fences after several men and women complained.

The European events, downhill runs from the Arlberg Kandahar for both women and men, were slated for this morning and noon respectively, followed by the downhill runs of the regular World Cup series on Friday. Giant slalom runs were listed tentatively for Saturday and Sunday.

Sugarloaf promoters predicted up to 15,000 spectators would attend the races, but early indications were that they'd have to commute 50 miles or more

Packer Assistant

Phillies Announce Signing Of Selma

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Philadelphia Phillies announced today the signing of Dick Selma, their top relief pitcher last season with 153 strikeouts and a 2.75 ERA.

Selma, 27, in his first season with the Phillies, tied a team record of 22 saves set by Jim Konstanty in 1950.

He had a 8-9 record last season in 73 games.

THE SKI SCENE

Courtesy Code A Fine Thing

By CHARLIE COAÑE

As you ski your way down a gentle slope taking in the awe and splendor of it all, surely you've experienced a skier who whizzes past you with little concern and even less control. In fact, sometimes you may feel like taking your pole and banging the "hot dog" skier on the side of his head!

Well, someone has come up with a National Skier's Courtesy Code and I believe it merits a discussion here.

"1. All skiers shall ski under control. Control shall mean in such a manner that a skier can avoid other skiers or objects." This says it all in a nutshell. Many times a fast skier will be zipping through an area of slower skiers. He should avoid the slower skier!

"2. When skiing downhill and overtaking another skier, the overtaking skier shall avoid the skier below him." But don't close your mind to anything going on above you.

"3. Skiers approaching each other on opposite traverses pass to the right." This is not practiced too often and hard to remember when you're aiming right at another skier.

"4. Skiers shall not stop in a location which will obstruct a trail or stop where they are not visible from above or impede the normal passage of other skiers when loading or unloading." You'll see this violation all day long.

"5. A skier entering a trail or slope from a side or intersecting a trail shall first check for approaching downhill skiers." Unless, of course, you wish to be clobbered.

"6. A standing skier shall check for approaching downhill skiers before starting." Unless, of course, you wish to be clobbered.

"7. When walking or climbing in a ski area, shis should be worn and the climber or walker shall keep to the side of the trail or slope." Signs will help remind you of this.

"8. All skiers shall wear safety straps or other devices to prevent runaway skis." Areas will not let you on a lift without them. A runaway ski is a lethal weapon. If this happens, a common practice is for all who see the runaway to yell, "ski", to warn those skiers in its path.

"9. Skiers shall keep off closed trails and posted areas and shall observe all traffic signs and other regulations as prescribed by the ski area."

Those are the nine rules of the road, and courtesy on the slopes, as on the highway, is contagious.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Bowling has something in common with many other sports that involve the arm — baseball, golf, football, and numerous others. All require a good follow-through. As you deliver the ball, make your arm continue in the upswing after the ball has gone. Don't quit. Follow-through is one of the key factors in getting what the pros call "forward roll," and that is what brings strikes.

Knowing How Suits Will Break May Save A Foolish Mistake

Sometimes you can locate all of the missing cards after just one trick has been played. Knowing how the suits will break may save you from a foolish mistake.

IN HAND

West opened the queen of spades, East discarded the ten of clubs, and South won with the king of spades. Paying no attention to the bidding or the first trick, South led a diamond to dummy's king, returned to his hand with a heart, and led a diamond to dummy's queen.

East won with the ace of diamonds and returned the ten of hearts, hoping to persuade declarer that West had the jack of hearts. South won and led a club to dummy's ace, relying on a 3-3 break in diamonds.

REVEALING DISCARD

East's discard at the first trick showed the entire hand. East could have only five clubs and could not have a five-card side suit since he would have bid that suit instead of clubs. Therefore, East surely had four hearts, four diamonds and five clubs. Moreover, East surely had the ace of diamonds and the king-queen of clubs for his sketchy opening bid.

Since the diamonds cannot break well, South's best play is to lead a low diamond and play dummy's eight at the second trick. East wins and returns the king of clubs, holding the trick.

ANOTHER TRICK

East continues with the queen of clubs and wins that trick also. Now there is no further defense. If East leads a third club, South wins in his own hand and leads a diamond to force out the ace. The ace of clubs is a re-entry to dummy, and declarer makes his game with two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and at least one club.

There is at least one other way to make the contract, but South must not rely on a favorable break in diamondsm

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠ - Q J 10 9 7 5 3
♥ - 6 4 3 2

♣ - None.
What do you say?

ANSWER: If not vulnerable, bid three spades. If vulneable, pass.

Freedom Galore For UAL Staff

CHICAGO (UPI)—United Airlines is offering its employes vacations whenever they want. For as long as they want. With a free flight anywhere in the United States, including Hawaii.

The only requirement, the airline said Tuesday, is that the employe obtain his supervisor's permission and that he be gone for at least five days.

United said it hopes the unpaid vacation will avert further layoffs. The airline announced recently more than 600 stewardesses and pilots will be laid off by July 1.

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, Feb. 18, the 49th day of 1971

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1969 Arab terrorists attacked an Israeli airliner at the airport in Zurich, Switzerland. Six persons were wounded.

A thought for today: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow said, "Give what you have. To someone, it may be better than you dare think."

Promoters Looking For A Young Queen

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The promoters of the Grand National Junior Livestock Exposition and Horse Show said today they are looking for a young lady to be the queen of the show scheduled for March 30-April 7.

Glass Demand Up; Hold On To L-O-F

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Do you think Libbey-Owens-Ford will recover? I have a 12-point loss on my shares. — M.S.

A. Roughly 45 per cent of Libbey-Owens-Ford's sales are to the automotive industry, 95 per cent of which is to General Motors. In fact, company supplies about 75 per cent of GM's glass requirements. Because of this heavy reliance on GM, which suffered a 10-week strike, consolidated net sales for all of 1970 rose only 9.6 per cent, while earnings dropped 54 per cent. Although final quarter results represented on improvement over the third period deficit, sales and profits were still severely hampered.

The general business decline and costs of introducing major technological change in glass operations also restricted profitability. Despite this rather unimpressive picture, outlook for 1971 is quite optimistic. Libbey-Owens is benefiting from its conversion to float-glass production; higher volume sales to resurgent GM; and a slight boost in 1971 prices for automotive glass.

Moreover, continuing strong demand for glass and stepped-up capital outlays should further aid results. Quarterly dividend of 50 cents was recently declared. Stock has excellent rebound potential and should be retained.

Q. Two years ago I purchased 100 shares of Republic Corp. at $85 a share. It is now around $10. Would you advise sale? — H.C. & E.P.

A. Your shares, bought prior to a 3-for-2 split, have an adjusted cost of $56.67 per share for the 150 shares you now hold. As a result of reorganization, broadly diversified Republic Corp. has disposed of operations, which in fiscal 1970 contributed $24 million to gross. Other divisions to be disposed of gross about $20 million annually.

Dependence on the aerospace industry has been reduced and remaining operations are more closely integrated. Deferred product development costs and other expenses were unusually large in fiscal 1970, resulting in a drop in earnings to 54 cents a share, down from $1.78 the year earlier. Shares may be held for further recovery in a strong market atmosphere.

Can Makers Join Recycling Effort

SAN FRANCISCO — (BW) — Four of the nation's leading can producers yesterday joined with the California Anti-Litter League in announcing the establishment of a Bay Area Recycling Information Center and a major reclamation program to begin March 1 in Northern California.

The establishment of the Bay Area Recycling Information Center was lauded by Norvell Gillespie, executive director of the California Anti-Litter League.

"We are proud to join with these major producers in setting up what is believed to be the first recycling information center in the United States.

"It is our hope that the center will serve to coordinate information about the more than 100 recycling centers which already exist in the Bay Area and to encourage more materials back into the recycling process.

"The new center will provide data on how and where all cans, bottles, paper, etc., may be brought for recycling. The California Anti-Litter League believes that the establishment of the information center is a vital step — taken by industry — to facilitate the effective and speedy reclamation of solid waste materials."

Information regarding the location of recycling centers may be obtained by calling 781-8086 in San Francisco, or asking the operator for Enterprise 1-9110 if calling from the other counties in the Bay Area, or by writing to Bay Area Recycling Information Center, Suite 2101, 100 Bush St., San Francisco, Calif. 94104.

Gillespie said that a brochure which includes tips on preparing items for recycling and a directory of all recycling collection centers in San Francisco and the Bay Area counties of Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, San Mateo and Santa Clara, is being offered free of charge by writing to the Bay Area Recycling Information Center.

The can manufacturers also announced the opening of 12 more can recycling plants in Northern California. Companies participating in the program are: American Can Co., Continental Can Co., National Can Corp. and the Heeken Can Co.

A spokesman for the four companies said, "We are deeply concerned about the rapidly growing problems of solid waste accumulation and the general pollution of our environment.

"Because of this concern the major U.S. can producers are donating their services for the collection of all types of cans — steel, aluminum, tin plate and bi-metal. These include food cans, beverage cans or any other type of metal container.

"The scrap cans will be shipped at company expense to various locations where they will be separated, processed and transported back to the primary metals industries."

Proceeds from the sale of the scrap will be donated to the California Anti-Litter League in support of its anti-litter and recycling efforts.

Steel Output Up 1.6% For Week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Steel production rose by 1.6 per cent last week to 2,664,000 tons from 2,622,000 tons the week before, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported.

Production in the week ended Feb. 13 was equal to 109.2 on the institutes new index (average weekly production in 1967 equals 100, or 2,439,701 tons) compared with 107.5 for the previous week.

Production from the start of the year through Feb. 13 totaled 16,167,000 tons, compared with 16,001,000 tons at the same point in 1970.

Consumer Goods Spending Gets Soviet Boost

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union will double its spending on consumer goods production during the next five years, the country's deputy planning chairman said.

Nikolai Mirotvortsev, the deputy, said the Soviet Union would invest $9.7 billion in light industrial production for 1971-1975. The 1966-1970 figure was $4.8 billion, he said.

Mirotvortsev said the flagging food, meat and dairy industries would be perked up with $10.7 billion; the investment figure in 1966-1970 was $6.6 billion.

"Production of consumer goods for the first time in the history of our Soviet economy will exceed by its average annual tempo of increase any previous five-year period," he said

Wrigley Co. Hikes Chewing Gum Price

CHICAGO (UPI) — The William Wrigley Jr. Co. has raised the wholesale price of its chewing gum for only the second time in 53 years.

Overbought NYSE Slips Still Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) —The stock market moved lower in brisk trading through the first two hours Thursday.

Newton Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton & Co., said so far it looks like a normal period of consolidation in a market that has been overbought for several weeks.

William Nelson, director of research for Moody's Investors Service, noted that the confidence factor is still strong on Wall Street even though there are no signs yet that the economy is recovering. He added, however, that the market could be vulnerable to a major selloff if the next batch of numbers on the economy do not live up to the administration's hopes and predictions.

Shortly before noon, declines outscored advances by more than a two-to-one margin. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was off 0.33 at 97.87.

Prices also backed down in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange. Of the 1,000 issues traded, 538 declined, while 206 gained.

Among the most active AMEX issues were AIM Companies fractionally higher on 20,000 shares, Mite Corp. also slightly higher on 19,00 shares, and Buttes Gas & Oil up slightly on 16,000 shares.

Frontier Denies It's Near Broke

DENVER (UPI) — Spokesman for Frontier Airlines said a recent federal study showing the nation's nine regional air carriers "close to bankruptcy" did not apply to Frontier.

The Department of Transportation study showed that the nine carriers, including Frontier, had a combined loss of $33.3 million in the 12 months ending Sept. 30.

Frontier reported a net loss of $2.78 million for 1970, compared with an $11.9 million deficit in all of 1969. Spokesmen for Frontier said increased subsidies plus a variety of operating economies and $7.9 million in extraordinary income had improved the airline's capital position substantially.

Housing Boom In 1971 Seen

PORTLAND (UPI) — The president of the U.S. Savings & Loan League predicts this year will be "very good" for housing.

"The market definitely is there," Lewis S. Eaton said in a statement. "The vacancy ratio is the lowest in years."

Eaton, who is president of the Fresno Savings & Loan Association in California, said "The money is there, also. Savings and loan associations, as well as banks, have been getting money in record amounts."

January's Building Activity Gets Year Off To Fast Start

It is encouraging to have a new year start off with a flurry of building activity — and January did just that.

Total building permits for the month valued out at $3,337,284 — a gain of 75.6 per cent over the first month showing of $1,900,951 last year. It was even better than December's $2,268,683, according to the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Business Bureau. Most of it was residential construction.

Activity in San Rafael and its environs totaled $1,596,846, also mostly residential. Novato came up with $590,293 — 86-per cent residential and miscellaneous permits. Larkspur's $305,360 was mainly residential. Mill Valley permits were $268,845, mostly residential and miscellaneous. The Belvedere-Tiburon peninsula checked off $231,293 — all residential and miscellaneous permits.

Sausalito's $79,854 was all commercial and miscellaneous, as was Corte Madera's $71,516. San Anselmo had $57,347, principally residential; Fairfax $8,000 (no residential); and Ross $3,500, all miscellaneous. West Marin and other incorporated areas accounted for $78,725, nothing commercial.

HOUSE OF SOTHBY

'I Waggled The Catalogue And Purchased A Rembrandt'

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

LONDON (UPI)—Almost anyone can buy a Rembrandt. I did.

It happened more or less by accident.

For years I had read about the multi-million dollar sales at 34 New Bond Street, home of the 226-year-old auction house of Sotheby and Co. In a newspaper I read they were to auction more than 100 old master etchings, engravings and woodcuts.

A 36-cent catalogue listed the goods, works by Goya, Rembrandt, Canaletto and other names associated with the folks who run to Rolls-Royce, Tiffanys, executive jets and mink coats. I decided to see the other half in action.

The doorman at Sotheby's recognized the familiars, the art dealers from New York, Paris, Munich, Florence and London, and showed the way in for the sirs and madams.

The rest of us—the tourist with camera, the auction nut and the curious—also got a smile. In the little dramas at Sotheby, the spear carriers mix equally with the stars.

The goods for auction included a tiny, battered Rembrandt etching. An old Sotheby hand told me "one might get it for 40 pounds ($96) unless the dealers are hungry." Why not try, I thought.

Adrian Eeles, a Sotheby's director and the man charged with authenticating old master prints, did the auctioneering. None of that tobacco sale lingo. Very precise. Very clear. Like a supreme court session. No one smokes. Experience tells Eeles when someone is using a finger to bid $240 or merely to scratch a nose.

The sale began.

The dealers had made notes on their catalogues, what they wanted and what they could bid. These businessmen and women sell at home in their galleries what they buy here, and they sell it often double or triple price.

Mr. New York bid by waggling a ballpoint pen. The Paris dealer signalled by raising his chin about an inch. Mr. Munich, his right hand on the table, raised the palm about an inch to show his bid. Florence pointed a finger. London nodded his head.

The tiny Rembrandt came up. A young attendant in blue smock held it between two fingers. An auction addict bid two pounds ($6.60). It sold for $439.20.

The world's old master market is booming. In search of safe profitable investments and in hunt of some tax benefits, more persons than ever before are buying. Works of Rembrandt and other famous masters are zooming in prices yearly.

With the tiny etching sold, I thought my chance had gone. I had not even bid. I watched a big Rembrandt go for more than double the expected $2,400 estimate.

The dealers fought like pirana —their teeth showing in the finger wagging, head nodding, palm raising. Between two big Rembrandts, a post-card sized etching came up.

It was an authentic Rembrandt, cited by the experts, from the master's first and only etching block, one of the last from that block with several tiny lines minutely blurred, a bit stained by age, in need of some expert restoring but a prize. After the sale, a professional expert judged it "an extremely good buy." In the auction room I thought, why not try?

The addicts had their fun up to $24. The dealers took over. Paris bid $43.20. London nodded $48. New York waggled his pen for $60.

I shook my catalogue—"30 pounds ($72). The gentleman in the rear," said the auctioneer. It is not displeasing to be called a gentleman in Sotheby's auction rooms.

Paris bid $84. Florence raised it to $96. I am no gambler. I will never own a Rolls-Royce. But this was a Rembrandt and a good one. I waggled my catalogue for $108.

New York bid $120. Someone up front offered something like $125.60. London smiled—perhaps the amateurs were done—and bid $132. I thought of my checkbook and decided on one last try. I waggled the catalogue—$144.

London glared at me.

Legal Air Cleared On 18-21 Vote Registering

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —An Attorney General's opinion said today that persons between 18 and 21 may register to vote only at their legal residences which "normally" are their parents' homes.

Deputy Attorney General Clayton P. Roche said, "We presume that the county counsel framed his question in the context of minor students because of the location of a campus of the University of California in Santa Barbara County."

State law, Roche said, listed these criteria for legal residence:

—"It is the place where one remains when not called elsewhere for labor or other special or temporary purpose and to which he returns in seasons of repose.

—"There can only be one residence.

—"A residence cannot be lost until another is gained.

—"The residence of the father during his life and, after his death, the residence of the mother while she remains unmarried, is the residence of the unmarried minor child, provided that when the parents are separated, the residence of the parent with whom an unmarried minor child maintains his place of abode is the residence of such unmarried minor child.

—"The residence of the husband is the residence of the wife provided that a married woman who is separated from her husband may establish her own residence.

—"The residence of an unmarried minor who has a parent living cannot be changed by his own act.

Second Time Around For Popularity In Male Wigs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wig makers claim that more and more men are wearing hair pieces of all sorts, including the far-out and the way-down.

Male inhibitions, the wig people say, have been lowered to the point where "he" can be as bushy as "she," and they even predict a national cranial coverup.

If indeed wigs become as popular as the manufacturers hope, it will be their second time around. The wearing of wigs by both sexes dates from the earliest recorded times, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, but the male wig as we know it today was a French inspiration.

Louis XIV, who as a youth had abundant hair, chose to wear a wig about 1670 when he was in his 40s. Within a few years, one historian noted, "all civilized men in Western Europe felt compelled to do the same."

The English went along with the style, even when fashion dictated the "full-bottomed" wig for men. It may have been just darling but it was hot and cumbrous.

Soon the "campaign" wig was invented along with the riding wig, bag wig and a plaited tail wig tied with bows at the top and bottom.

By the 1740s bob wigs were replacing the long, curled king. Wigs kept getting smaller and smaller and finally ceased to be indispensable. Gentlemen began powdering their own hair, strangely, as if it were a wig.

At about the same time wigs got mixed up in politics. They had been used to denote class and profession. Both the French and American revolutions brought about the abolition of many social customs, including class distinction as indicated by such things as hair styles.

Although wigs began to die out during the reign of George III, the practice held on long afterward among professional men. The most solid bitter enders were doctors, soldiers and clergymen—allied, presumably, with a group of assorted bigwigs.

Finally, by the end of the 18th Century, practically all men had abandoned wigs of all sorts and had returned to where they were before it all began—short hair.

Big Salary Jump For Some Jobs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Wage earners in office and plant occupations in the San Francisco Bay Area received a greater increase in salaries during the past year than in any one year period since 1966.

Office clerical workers had a 5.7 per cent increase in wages between Oct. 1969 and Oct. 1970, according to the U. S. Department of Labor.

In the same period, skilled maintenance workers earned 7.1 per cent more and unskilled plant workers had a pay increase of 8.1 per cent.

Case Referred To Juvenile Court

Millikan, who is charged with possession of marijuana and misdemeanor counts of resisting arrest and disturbing the peace, allegedly bit a San Rafael policeman when he was being booked Dec. 4 at the Hall of Justice.

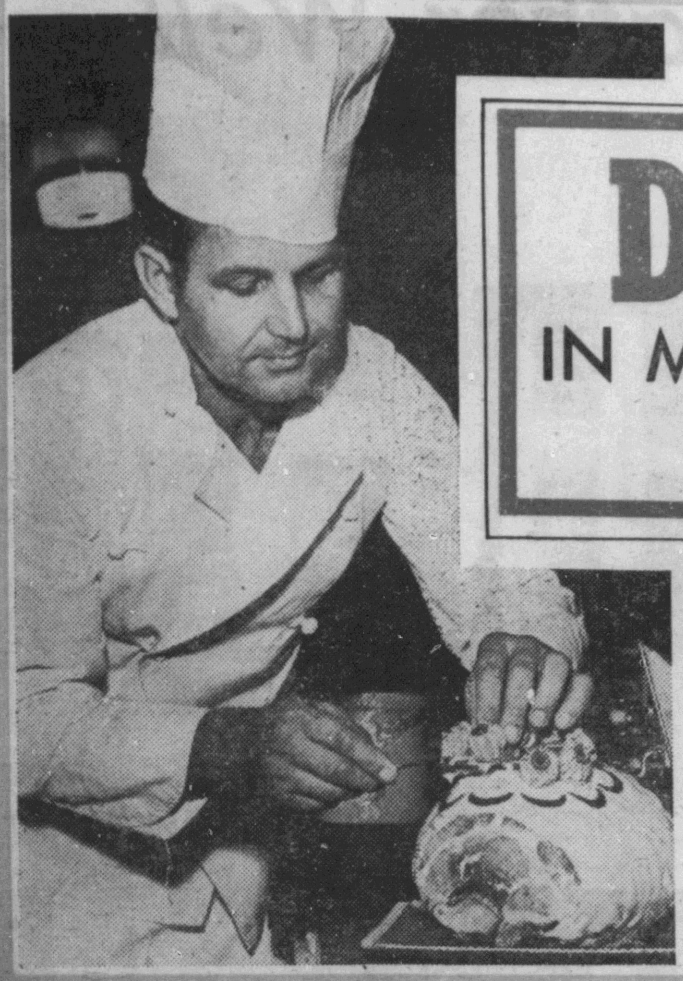
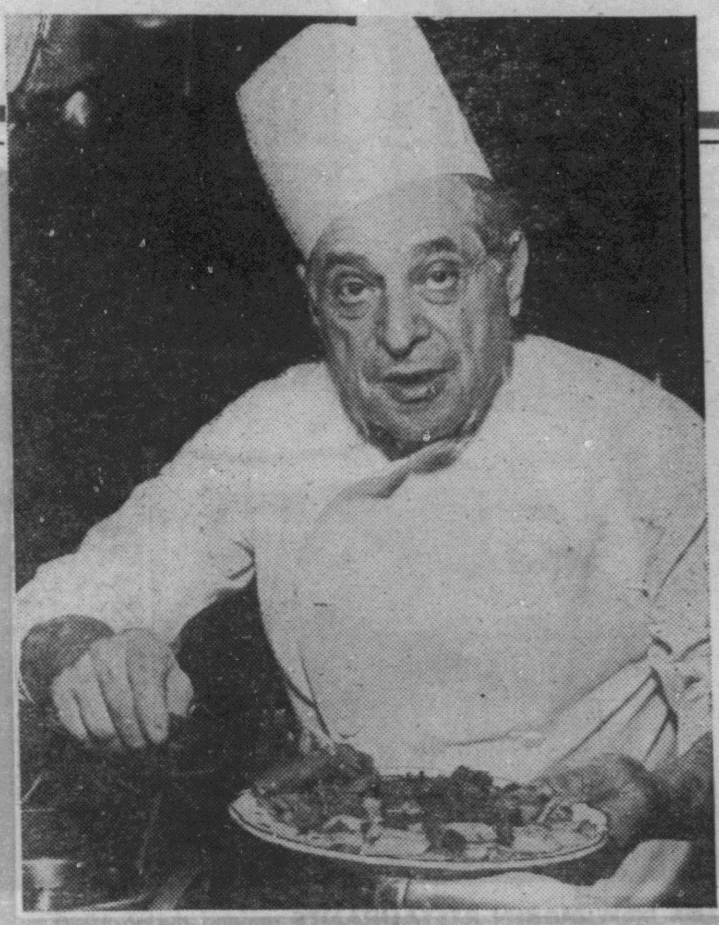
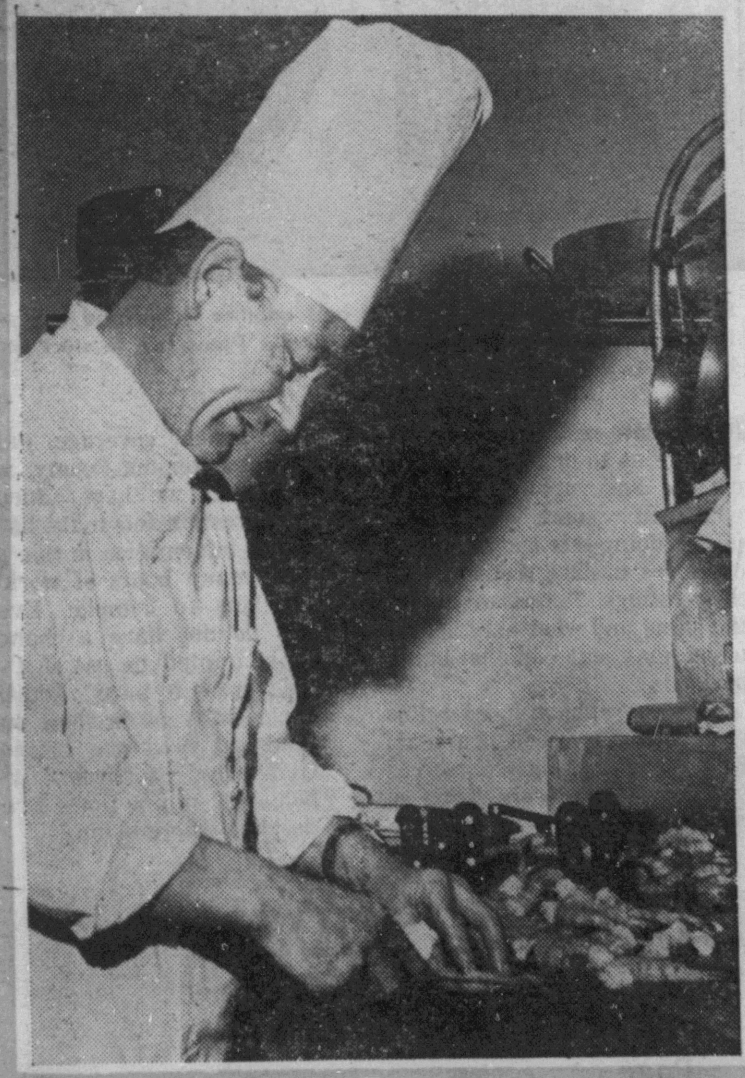
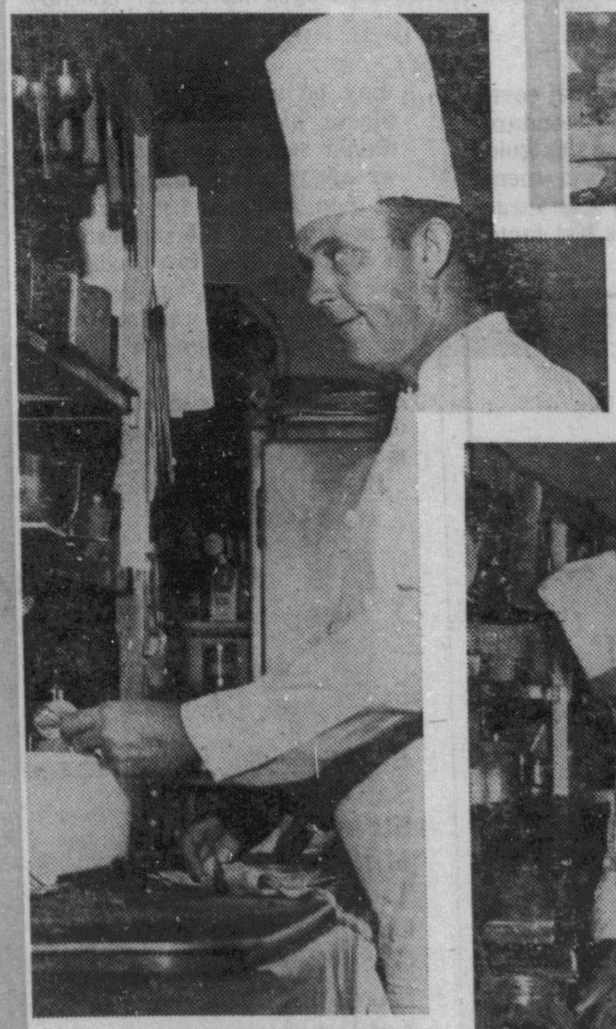
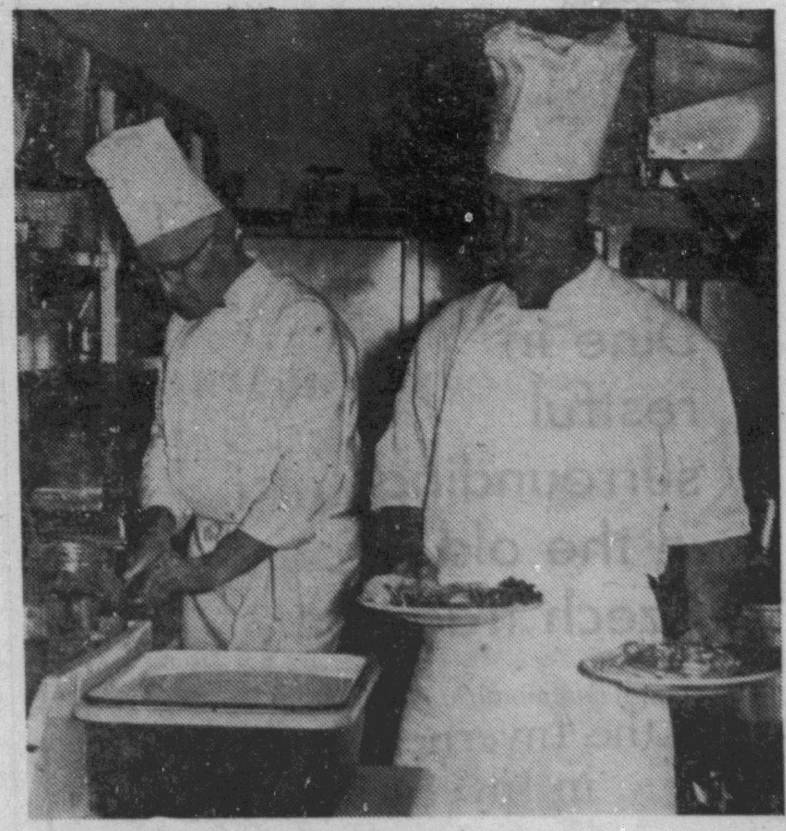
DINING & WINING
IN MARIN AND SONOMA COUNTIES

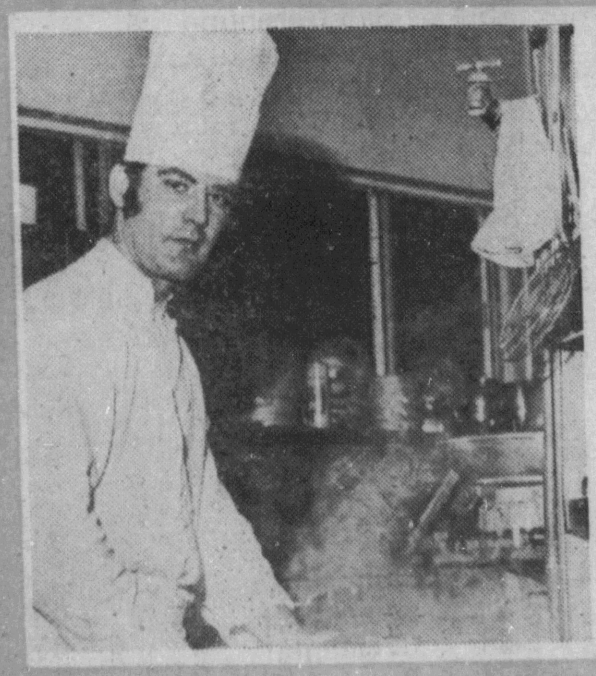












N. Bay Restaurants Weather Well

By HARRY CRAFT

It is fine testimony to Marin and Sonoma County restaurants and to the loyalty of their customers who visited them during the past year, which saw a heavy toll of eating establishments in many areas, that those in the North Bay weathered it farily well.

True, only a few, if any, showed a record year, and there were some closings and several cutbacks in service. But most of the places listed in last year's Dining and Wining Guide are still in this one — although you will find some under different ownership, new names or both.

Actually, this year's guide — our 10th — has more listings than ever before. The closings have been more than balanced by new openings and we have added others which seem to fall within the scope of our coverage. There are now almost three times as many listings here as there were in our 1962 edition.

Meal prices have gone up somewhat during the past year, though a surprising number of restaurants show no increases or have made only nominal adjustments commensurate with the increased cost of food — about the same as reflected in the average household.

Thus the average $3.50 dinner of a year ago is probably now about $3.75. A $5.50 dinner has perhaps moved up to $5.95 or $6. No restaurateur finds any joy in making these adjustments. But he is caught in the middle between serving at a profit and keeping his customers. Frequently he absorbs increases in overhead and lowers his percentage of profit.

There has been no change of policy as to our scope of coverage. The qualifying standards for an appearance in this guide are in type of service, menu, whether or not a restaurant serves dinners. This last factor may be a variable one. Some places have had to minimize dinner service temporarily and we are reluctant to remove one of them from our list if there is a possibility of it being restored if all but one or two conditions are met. Also, it has been our general policy to continue with a corrected listing for a now defunct restaurant for at least one year in order to keep reader-customers informed of its passing.

Beyond this, we make no effort to rate restaurants comparatively as to degree of quality of food and service. We have examined some restaurant guides doing this and often find ourselves in disagreement with their ratings. Tastes are not all the same and what may appeal to one may leave another unimpressed.

The geographical index below is the same as it was last year. We have not extended ourselves farther afield. Before doing so we shall endeavor to intensify our present coverage, particularly in Sonoma County, where this year we have added six more restaurants to the list.

The information in this guide took many hours of work and checking to compile. Even if you do not have a chance to make immediate use of it — do not throw it away. Additional copies may be in short supply until our next one 12 months from now. Meanwhile it can help you many times over in deciding where to dine.

ONE OF THE NEW MARIN RESTAURANTS opened during 1970 was Alvarado Inn at Ignacio. New owners took the former Rancho Rafael, gave it a different look and another name and now serve lunches and dinners throughout the week. Plans are to start serving breakfasts this spring.

Whiskey: Did Irish Invent It?

The Irish believe that St. Patrick himself was the first distiller of whiskey.

At least they are sure someone on the Emerald Isle produced "the water of life."

In medieval times, whiskey was like a liqueur, laced with heather flowers, herbs and spices and colored with saffron, according to wine expert Philip Harding.

Getting back to the Irish — they insist they passed along their knowledge to the Scots and from them it went to the English.

Who Cares Who Invented Cioppino? Just Eat It

Probably no one really knows where "cioppino" got its name or when it was created.

That it was invented by the Italians is fairly certain. Some people believe it was done in San Francisco.

Restaurants and cooks have different recipes. One calls for three kinds of shellfish; others for a combination of fish and shellfish and even entirely of one kind of fish.

Tiburon Vintners, Windsor Winery — Two County Firm

Marin and Sonoma counties share a variety of common interests — in restaurants, geographical proximity and in business.

One of the latter is the case of Tiburon Vintners, Inc. in southern Marin and its affiliated organization, Windsor Vineyards, between Santa Rosa and Healdsburg in Sonoma County.

Tiburon Vintners grows grapes, and produces, markets and sells wines under the Windsor label directly to consumers throughout California. The company's stock has been publicly held since last October. Rodney D. Strong, chairman and chief executive officer, and Peter S. Friedman, president and chief operating officer, are the major stockholders.

The company dates from 1960 when Strong opened a bonded wine cellar, with wine tasting and sales room, in a turn-of-the-century house on Main Street in Tiburon. His parents had been in the wine business in Germany and from them he had acquired and nurtured an avid interest in grape growing and wine making. He devoted his spare moments to furthering his knowledge of viticulture and enology in Europe's great wine producing regions.

The Tiburon wine cellar became a means of turning an avocation into a vocation. He selected premium wines from California producers, bottled them in Tiburon and affixed the Tiburon Vintners label.

In 1962 Strong was approached by a friend who, with some others, had become owners of a vineyard and historic winery at Windsor. It was inactive and Strong was invited to put it into production. There was no hestiation, and the Windsor Vineyards label was born.

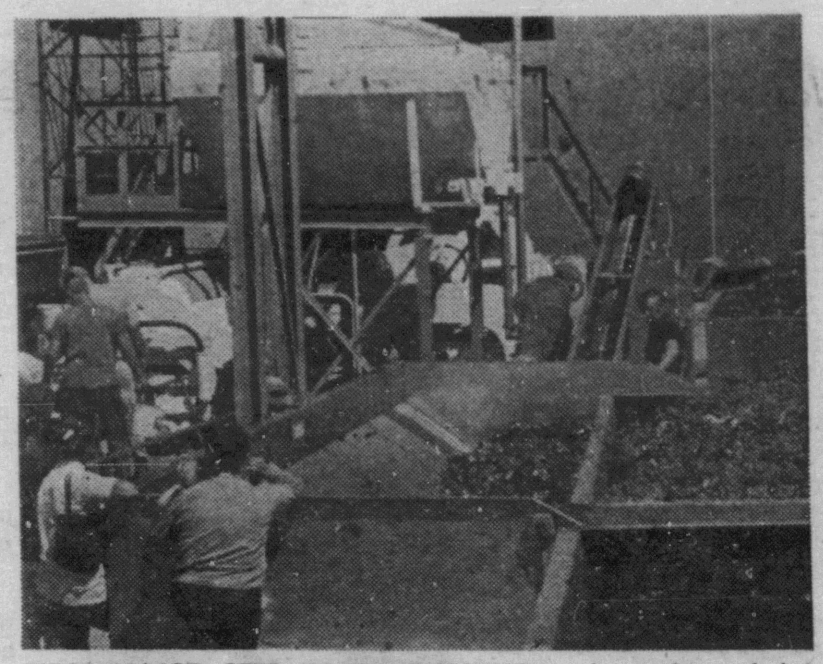
At the end of 1963 production was in full swing and the tasting room at Tiburon was too small to remain the sole outlet for Windsor wines. The decision was made to continue selling direct to the consumer, but new consumers within California would be reached by direct response advertising.

Strong was joined by Friedman, a New York advertising executive, in 1964 as a partner and shortly thereafter Tiburon Vintners became a corporation.

Production and sales were increasing and in order to obtain additional vineyard acreage, Strong and Friedman sold stock, following this up with more equity financing in order to construct an entirely new winery embodying the latest-technological advancements in wine production. Construction was begun in 1969 on Windsor property, a short distance from the original winery which remained in production.

The new building, now completed and in production, was built at a cost of more than $1 million and encompasses 28,000 square feet. A land acquisition program has resulted in eight separate vineyards comprising more than 1,000 acres. These vineyards do not produce the lush yields associated with most California grape growing. Instead, in the light clay and thin and rather gravelly soil, the wines produce fewer grapes with a high acidity and moderate sugar content so highly desired for premium table wines.

The vineyards are located in Sonoma's Alexander Valley, Trenton, Forestville and near Healdsburg. Grapes grown on the property are Pinot Noir, Cabernet Sauvignon, Johannisberger Riesling and Chardonnay. And California's unique Zinfandel grapes are grown on the original Windsor properties.



FIRST MAJOR STEP IN WINEMAKING is the crushing of the grapes. This photograph of the Windsor Vineyards crushing complex in Sonoma County was taken last September at the time of the grape harvest.

Glassware Is The Thing When Serving Good Wine

Crystal-clear glassware dramatically enhances the rich colors of California wines — which run through the hues from amber sherry to rich, red burgundy, pink rose, golden sauterne, and the spectacular orange-red of grignolino.

Wine glasses come in a variety of shapes and sizes and nearly every price range. They can be used singly or in sets — depending on the meal, table setting, and extent of the hostess' collection.

Most persons keep it simple, however, eschewing a large supply of glasses. For these, the all-purpose wine glass provides the perfectly practical answer. It features a generous nine-ounce bowl — tulip-shaped to husband the aroma of the wine, topping a short stem for beauty and utility. Those who prefer a more formal all-purpose glass will find several available with the same size and shape, but with longer stems.

The all-purpose wine glass is an excellent start in assembling glassware. As a person serves wine more frequently, he may add other styles of wine glasses to his collection.

The next logical addition may be the stately tulip-shaped Champagne glasses holding nine ounces, the hollow-stemmed and saucer-shaped, often used for parties and weddings. The Champagne flute is gaining popularity in this country after centuries of use in Europe. Traditionally it features a long, narrow bowl on a short stem.

The round-bowl sherry glass, a deep, narrow appetizer or dessert wine glass, is another excellent gift choice. It is eye-appealing and with a capacity of six ounces, and easily holds three-ounce servings.

A tall, slender-stemmed Rhine glass, with a round bowl — characteristic of glassware when reisling, traminer, sylvaner and other Rhine wines are poured — shows off the wine's subtle, light, straw-color or pale greenish tones. The extra long stems insure that the chilled wine will not be affected by the warmth of the hand.

Other white wine glasses often have shorter stems and larger bowls that Rhine wine glasses. With a capacity of eight to 10 ounces, these glasses are used for Chablis or Sauterne-type wines.

Glasses designed expecially for red table wines (nine to 26 ounces) are similar to the all-purpose wine glass in shape and capacity, although the stems usually are longer. Some unusual ones are the great, balloon-shaped burgundy glasses on tall stems, and the voluminous, tulip-shaped claret glasses.

With interest in wine increasing rapidly in this country, more varied selections of wine glasses are appearing in more and more stores.

'Dining In' — Air Force Tradition, Protocol

Everyone knows what "dining out" is — and does it.

And it seems logical to assume, then, that "dining in" means staying at home.

Not necessarily. The "Dining In" is an English tradition that began in medieval monasteries and spread to early universities and then into the military.

It is in Air Force protocol, and the late Gen. H. H. Arnold is credited with putting it there to bring together officers for camaraderie, good feeling and sociability.

Everything is very formal. Dress uniform and medals are worn. Everyone is expected to behave himself. Smoking is forbidden until after a formality called the lighting of the afterburner.

There are wine pouring ceremonies and many toasts, starting with honors to the President, secretary of the Air Force and his chief of staff. Eventually it gets down to toasting those who couldn't be there and then to some who could.

When the Dining-In ends, everyone stands at attention until the commander and the head table depart.

WARMUP SESSION AT MARINCELLO

Firemen advance behind a fog nozzle to practice controlling structural blazes at the old Marin Land and Cattle Co. headquarters in Marincello. Eight firemen from Sausalito, five from the Marin County Fire Department and six from Synanon participated today in burning down this old bunkhouse and other abandoned structures on the property, now owned by Gulf Oil Co. The firm donated the buildings to the county's fire training program. A Sausalito water tank truck and Synanon's new pumper unit were used in the drill. In recent years, the old buildings had been occupied only by trespassing transients, Gulf said.

Health Insurance To Cover Nation: Nixon

'Partnership' Plan To Aid Workers, Families

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon proposed today a national health care plan under which employers would provide low-cost insurance for workers and their families, and the federal government would foot most or all the bill for the poor.

In a special message to Congress, the President outlined a program which would:

—Require private employers to work out arrangements under which workers would ultimately pay only 25 per cent of health insurance premiums, and each worker and member of his family would be protected for costs all the way up to $50,000 for a catastrophic illness.

— Provide premium-free protection for families of four making less than $3,000 a year, and coverage at a sliding fee for those with incomes up to $5,000.

Administration officials said the plan would provide health insurance coverage for all but about 40 million Americans and virtually eliminate the costly Medicaid program of health care for the needy.

HEW Secretary Elliot L. Richardson said the cost to the federal government during the first year of such a plan's operation would be about $3 billion.

Nixon presented his own scheme for meeting the nation's health care needs amid a spate of alternatives being offered by members of Congress, including a national health insurance program being pushed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

The two proposals were the main features of a "national health insurance partnership" which Nixon said would carry out his pledge to prevent any American family from going without medical care because of inability to pay.

The President's low-budget proposals also would:

—Foster development of private health maintainance organizations in which persons could voluntarily enroll for medical care at a fixed prepaid fee.

—Provide $545 million for the health profession's scholarship program for low-income students and provide additional funds for developing area health education centers.

—Create a Health Education Foundation which would "become a national focus for expanded citizen health education."

—Provide additional funds for research into the causes and cure of cancer and sickle cell anemia, the latter an inherited blood disease found almost exclusively in Negroes.

Nixon said his program was "one in which the public and the private sectors would join in a new partnership to provide adequate health insurance for the American people."

In the last 12 months, the

Nixon: No Concessions, No Limit On Air Power

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon said Wednesday he will not limit use of U.S. air power in Indochina and refused to rule out the possibility South Vietnam may invade North Vietnam.

The President also said the South Vietnamese continue to shoulder more of the fighting, so successfully in fact that the withdrawal of U.S. soldiers may be accelerated and Hanoi soon may wind up dealing with Saigon, not Washington, in any peace talks.

Nixon's assessment came in an unscheduled 40-minute news conference at the White House. And while he talked in optimistic terms about Vietnamization, he warned Hanoi that "as long as the North Vietnamese have any Americans as prisoners-of-war, there will be Americans in South Vietnam—and enough Americans to give them an incentive to release the prisoners."

Nixon said the limits on use of U.S. ground combat troops outside Vietnam, as he has outlined them before, still hold; but "I am not going to place any limitation upon the use of air power except, of course, to rule out a rather ridiculous suggestion that is made from time to time ... that our air power might include the use of tactical nuclear weapons."

The President said there was no reason to believe mainland China would see the current South Vietnamese operation in Laos as a "threat against them or any reason therefore (for them) to react to it."

Asked whether Saigon might decide to launch an invasion of North Vietnam, he replied:

"I won't speculate on what South Vietnam may decide to do with regard to a possible incursion into North Vietnam in order to defend their national security."

His response seemed to indicate that such an invasion, at least, was an option available to Saigon.

He said the Laotian operation was going according to plan but conceded the South Vietnamese "have run into very heavy resistance on the road going into Sepone"—the Communist stronghold on the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Gen. Creighton W. Abrams has reported, Nixon added, that the South Vietnamese were waging the Laotian campaign "in a superior way."

"I can say today that as a result partially of our success in Cambodia (last spring) and based also on the present success of the Laotian operation, that the troop withdrawal program will go forward on schedule ...

"In terms of troop withdrawals, the Cambodian incursion insured it and allowed us, as a matter of fact, to set our sights somewhat higher. The success of this operation guarantees the continued program and gives the prospect of a greater troop withdrawal during the months ahead."

He said he would have an additional announcement on

Pentagon To Halt Spying On Civilians

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced today that all military counter intelligence and investigative activities—including surveillance of private citizens—would henceforth be under direct civilian control.

The action as prompted primarily by reports of Army abuses related to watching and keeping records on suspected subversives and other civilians, beginning with the 1967 Detroit riots.

Laird's announcement was less sweeping than he had indicated in December that it would be. The shakeup leaves the military directly in charge of foreign intelligence.

When he ordered a review of defense intelligence gathering two months ago, he said all intelligence gathering by the Defense Department should be placed directly under civilian control.

Laird put Robert F. Froehlke, assistant secretary of defense for administration, in charge of directing, managing and inspecting "military investigative and related counter intelligence activities."

A civilian organization called the Defense Investigative Review Council was set up with

Schoonmaker Agrees To Sell Sausalito Property

By WAT TAKESHITA

T. L. Schoonmaker, president of A. G. Schoonmaker Co. of Sausalito, today assured a bankruptcy referee that the company will sell its Sausalito property, pay off its creditors in full and continue operations on a reduced scale elsewhere in the Bay Area.

Schoonmaker testified today at the Marin Civic Center at a meeting of creditors before Conley S. Brown of Eureka, referee in bankruptcy.

August B. Rothschild of San Francisco, attorney for Schoonmaker, explained that this is not a bankruptcy to dissolve the company. "The company will continue on a reduced scale. We are merely presenting a plan to pay off creditors, and this plan requires an acceptance by the majority of the creditors."

"The company is solvent," said Rothschild. "It has a net worth of about three million dollars. But due to economic conditions, it ran out of working capital and it became necessary to file this plan of arrangement."

The company owes a total of $3,400,000. Schoonmaker said its total assets amount to $6,400,000, including accounts receivable and property.

Brown heard the testimony and continued the hearing for an indefinite period, probably about two months, to get a progress report on the sale of the 27-acre Schoonmaker property in Sausalito and details on how the creditors will be paid. Rothschild said the Sausalito

Nature Conservancy Purchase Of Slide Ranch Is Announced

By GEORGE NEVIN

Slide Ranch, 133 acres of rocky coastline north of Muir Beach, has been acquired by the Nature Conservancy, officials of the group announced today.

Bruce F. Wolfe, Conservancy Western representative, said a down payment has been made on the undeveloped land, but the full purchase price of $375,000 has yet to be raised. (See picture, page 9.)

The land was secured by a loan from Mrs. Kenneth Anderson of Orinda after two years of negotiations with the ranch's owner. San Francisco attorney Douglas P. Ferguson, who lives in Mill Valley and does volunteer work for the conservancy, obtained the loan and negotiated the sale, Wolfe said.

Slide Ranch lies between Shoreline Highway and the Pacific Ocean just north of the Muir Beach overlook and is the habitat of at least 100 species of animals and birds, including deer and bobcat.

The ranch had been recommended for acquisition by the California Parks and Recreation Department but lack of funds made its purchase impossible.

The Conservancy, a Privately supported land conservation organization which has preserved more than 225,000 acres of wild lands in America, was able to buy Slide Ranch because it is "independent and private" and is not bound by the same restrictions as government agencies, Wolfe said.

Eventual transfer of the land to the State Park System or other public agency is being considered as a possibility, he said.

Wolfe called Slide Ranch "one of the few open and wild acres on the Marin coast that is not in public ownership. Its preservation is vital if the unspoiled beauty of the coast is to be maintained."

Future recreation uses of the ranch by the general public are foreseen, he said, but for the time being educational groups will conduct scientific projects to study "nondestructive" uses of the land.

At present several University of California graduate students are conducting ecological surveys of the ranch's animal population and architecture students have completed a site analysis to determine how to protect the land.

The ranch is open to the public by appointment through the Nature Conservancy, 215 Market Street, San Francisco. Contributions for purchase of the ranch also may be sent there, Wolfe said.

Slide Ranch is the second West Marin ranch to be acquired by the Nature Conservancy this month. The group announced last week that George W. Wheelwright III had donated 535 upland acres of the 630-acre Green Gulch Ranch to the Conservancy. That ranch lies east of Shoreline Highway inland from Muir Beach.

McGovern Sees World War Threat

McGovern, already an announced presidential candidate for 1972, took strong issue with Nixon's assertion at a news conference Wednesday that he would not limit use of American air power in Southeast Asia while also refusing to rule out the possibility of a South Vietnamese invasion of the north.

Said McGovern: "I think he's given up on a political decision. He's flirting with World War III in Asia."

McGovern said that from now on, the administration would "have to bear the responsibility for every life lost."

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., said Nixon's statements "don't surprise me."

"It appears the President intends to do whatever he wants to in Southeast Asia and there is little we can do about it," said Fulbright.

At a Capitol news conference, McGovern said he believed Nixon was "still dreaming of some kind of military victory ... and that's just not in the cards." He charged that the President was "running out" on his campaign pledges to end the war.

Allied Drive Into Laos Claims Sharp Increase In U.S. Deaths

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist gunners today shot down five more U.S. helicopters in fighting in Laos and across the border in South Vietnam, where fighting subsided around the encircled American fire support base Scotch.

American military spokesmen did not give the locations where three helicopter gunships were shot down in Laos but said two crewmen were wounded. Two others were shot up in Quang Tri province across the border but managed to land with two crewmen wounded.

Unofficial figures showed at least 19 American helicopters have been destroyed in support of the South Vietnamese campaign in Laos in the past 11 days. U.S. casualties in the support role were 31 killed, 79 wounded and six missing in action. The casualties do not include GIs wounded in Communist shelling attacks.

The U.S. Command said today 51 Americans were killed in Indochina last week which included the first six days of the Allied drive into Laos. It was more than double the death toll for the previous week.

U.S. spokesman said the toll for the week ending last Saturday would rise still higher with addition of six deaths in helicopter crashes inside Laos.

The deaths were so far carried as "missing in action" because of delays in body recovery and identification.

The American death toll compared with 24 the previous week and the 51 killed was the most since the week ended Nov. 21 when 65 died. It raised to 44,459 the number of GIs killed since Jan. 1, 1961 and the year's toll to 251.

Another 217 Americans were wounded last week, a drop of 160 from the previous week and the lowest weekly total since the week ended Jan. 16 when 211 were wounded. A total of 294,946 Americans have been wounded in more than 10 years of war.

Sabella's OF MARIN

The story of the Sabella's actually begins in the 19th century when the family lived in a small Sicilian village and fished in the turquoise waters off Tunisia. In 1887 Luciano Sabella, at the age of fifteen, set sail for America and made the long trek across country to San Francisco, where he settled around the lower slopes of Telegraph Hill. Some years later, Luciano married Angela Scafani whose family had arrived from the same small village.

Angelo Sabella was born in 1904, the fourth of a family of thirteen. One of the first things he remembered was a walk he took with his grandmother in 1906 shortly after the earthquake on Columbus and Taylor Streets. A huge crack opened in the street before them. The earthquake was the occasion of Angelo's first trip to Marin. His father loaded his entire family and all their belongings aboard his fishing boat, and took them to a tent camp in Tiburon. After the great fire was controlled the Sabella's moved back to Stockton and Francisco Streets.

As a young lad, Angelo delivered the Italian language newspaper, Il Vocce del Popolo, on the cobblestoned streets of Telegraph Hill. Later he hawked crabs through the Barbary Coast for ten cents each and fifteen cents for two after school. In 1915, Angelo was at the prow of his father's fishing boat, The Marconi, when they won the gold cup at the Panama International Exposition Fisherman's Boat Race around Alcatraz Island. As Angelo grew up he worked with his father at their Crab Stand No. 3 Fisherman's Wharf, where two younger brothers and a nephew still carry on the family tradition.

In 1928, Angelo married Vita Ra, and in 1932 the young Sabella's opened the family's first seafood restaurant at the end of the Wharf in Santa Barbara. Arthur Brisbane, renowned Hearst Columnist; devoted an entire column to the young Sabella's acclaiming their fine food and warm hospitality. Many people still come to the Marin restaurant remembering the Sabella's from their seven years in Southern California. In 1940, Angelo returned to Fisherman's Wharf and was associated with his brother, Antone Sabella.

In 1951, Angelo moved to Marin and established a restaurant just north of the Richardson Bay Bridge on the Redwood Highway. His aim was to establish a family restaurant which would not depend on transient trade but one that would appeal continually to Bay Area residents.

The Sabella family's love of the sea is always with them and reflected in the fine family recipes that please even the most discerning of the gourmets.

Federal Housing Stung In Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A Senate committee said today the federal government has intensified the nation's housing shortage by tearing down more homes than it helped build and by spending more to subsidize squalid homes than decent ones.

In a report on 33 years of "federal failure" in housing, the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs also accused the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) of adopting discriminatory policies which accelerated the decline of central cities into slums.

The committee said the FHA has refused to insure loans in central city neighborhoods. That, along with high interest rates, has meant that no housing money is available in the central city, it said.

"This practice constitutes a significant contribution to the deterioration of our nation's cities and the consequential social ills we claim to deplore, from rising crime rates to high infant mortality," the committee said.

"As far as FHA is concerned, the federal government has failed to relieve the housing crisis in this country," it added.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., committee chairman, said in a statement accompanying the report that the government has built only 1.5 million housing units in the 33 years since the first federal housing legislation was adopted.

"The real need requires that level of output each year, not each third of a century," he said.

McGovern, an announced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said he would introduce a bill that would create a new agency — the Emergency Rural Home Development Administration— which would be charged by Congress with providing minimum housing, sanitation, clean water and such community facilities as day care centers for any town of 25,000 or below —including rural areas—within five years.

As bad as city housing is, he said, "two thirds of America's inadequate housing is in rural America and yet those areas receive less than 20 per cent of the nation's public housing."

The report said most federal help goes to middle or high income families at the expense of poor people whose homes are destroyed.

Reuther Crash Held Fault Of Altimeter

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Labor leader Walter Reuther died when the pilot of his plane was lured below a safe altitude by a freak illusion and a faulty altimeter in which parts were missing and one part was installed upside down, safety investigators said today.

Reuther, 62, head of the United Auto Workers union; his wife, her nephew, and a friend of Reuther's died along with the pilot and copilot when their small chartered jet crashed May 9 while attempting a night landing at Pellston, Mich.

In its report, the National Transportation Safety board said the twin-engine Lear jet clipped trees on a hilltop two miles from the runway, but the pilot was able to keep the plane airborne for one-half mile before it hit another clump of trees and crashed.

Investigators found the pilot's altimeter and an examination showed "some incorrect parts had been installed, some parts were missing and one part was installed upside down."

The altimeter apparently was functioning during the flight but did not give the pilot an accurate reading.

Normally on a landing approach the copilot's altimeter serves as a cross check for the pilot's altimeter, but the investigators said the plane was circling to the left as it prepared to land and the copilot may have been looking out the left side of the cabin toward the Emmet County Airport. "In such a case, he may have been obtaining his altitude information from the pilot's altimeter," the report said.

Sniper-Type Killing Of Nun

DETROIT, Mich. (UPI)—A nun was shot and killed early today when two shots were fired through her bedroom window at St. Cecilia's Convent on the city's west side.

Murder warrants were sought against four unidentified suspects who were arrested in an apartment building across the street from the convent, police said.

Police said Julita Maria Williams, 37, was dead on arrival at Henry Ford Hospital. She had been struck in the temple by one of two sniper-type shots fired through her bedroom window about 1 a.m., they said.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Guards Doubled

ISTANBUL (UPI)—Turkish police doubled their guard at all foreign consulates today after six explosions rocked U.S. and British establishments across Istanbul, shattering windows but causing no serious damage.

Explosions late Wednesday hit two U.S. military installations, the British consulate, the Turkish American Foreign Trade Bank, the Anglo-Dutch Shell Oil Co. research laboratories and a private engineering college.

Another blast in Ankara damaged a car parked in front of an apartment house where an American family lived. Two schoolboys in the capital were injured, one with loss of an arm, when a box they found in the street exploded in their hands.

Pair Indicted

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) —Alabama's first black sheriff since reconstruction and one of his black deputies are to be tried in federal court in April or May on charges of beating a prisoner.

Macon County Sheriff Lucious Amerson and Deputy Richard Coleman Jr. surrendered to federal authorities Wednesday and were released on $1,000 bond each. They were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The two officers are accused in a two-count indictment of inflicting summary punishment on Wilbert Dean Harris, also black, last Aug. 22 after a gunfight at the Macon County jail in Tuskegee.

Amerson could not be reached for comment on the indictment.

Berlin Status

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Secretary of State William P. Rogers and West German Foregin Minister Walter Scheel have concluded that Moscow still is seriously interested in reaching a negotiated agreement on the future of Berlin, diplomatic sources said today.

Scheel ended a visit to Washington today. He met with both Rogers and President Nixon, and the sources said he took the view the four power Berlin talks now are entering a crucial stage and that the Soviets are seeking to influence their course through a "war of nerves" carried out by press reports about Soviet dissatisfaction.

Scheel was said to feel the Kremlin would make no fundamental decisions in the Berlin talks until after the 24th Communist Party Congress in Moscow in March.

Liquor Store Employe Shot

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Two holdup men killed one liquor store employee and wounded another Wednesday night during a holdup.

The victim was identified as Thomas J. Morley, 19, San Francisco while Stephen Kaiser, 23, was rushed to Mission Emergency Hospital for surgery.

To Study Rocks

The rocks were in bags stowed in the mobile quarantine van that Alan B. Shepard, Stuart A. Roosa and Edgar D. Mitchell left aboard their recovery ship when they flw home last week. The van was due here on a cargo plane early today.

Most of the lunar samples examined so far consisted of rocks no bigger than apples and a large amount of soil collected from the dusty Fra Mauro Valley landing site.

The second aluminum sample container was opened Wednesday in the lunar receiving laboratory It contained mostly soil samples. The first box was opened last week and it held rocks and soil collected during the astronauts' long hike up a crater capped ridge.

Limited Record

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The AFL-CIO said today the last Congress made a good, but limited record of progress and blamed President Nixon for its shortcomings.

"President Nixon has tried erroneously to pin a do-nothing label on the 91st Congress," the labor federation said. "But it was administration policy and presidential vetoes that kept that record from being better."

The AFL-CIO, in a 116-page booklet entitled "Labor Looks at the 91st Congress" said the limited progress left the new Congress with a long list of unfinished business.

"It must tackle many new problems: public service jobs, accelerated public works, quality medical care for all americans, a minimum wage for all workers above the poverty level, reforms in welfare to insure all Americans the right to a decent standard of living, protection for the consumer and the environment," said the booklet, prepared by legislative director Andrew Biemiller.

Quits Interior

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The White House said today that Fred J. Russell has resigned as undersecretary of the Interior Department.

A government source said Russell was under pressure to quit because of "several embarassing decisions" when he was heading the department between the dismissal of former Secretary Walter J. Hickel and installation of Rogers C. B. Morton as secretary.

The White House would not make any other comment than "he has tendered his resignation," but the source said Russell submitted it Wednesday.

A PERSONAL PROTEST

Walking for peace, 40-year-old Mrs. Louise Bruyn of Newton, Mass., begins her 45-day walk to Washington, D. C. Mrs. Bruyn, mother of three teen-agers, said yesterday at the start of the walk that the undertaking was a personal protest against the war in Indochina because "I can no longer sit in the comfort of our beautiful home, knowing the death and destruction we are causing in another land." (UPI Telephoto)

Hanoi Accuses U. S. Of Planning N. Viet Drive

PARIS (UPI)—The Communists accused the United States today of planning new North Vietnamese military adventures which would threaten Red China. The United States rejected the charges and offered immediate negotiations on the withdrawal of all foreign troops from invaded areas of Indochina.

U.S. Ambassador David K.E. Bruce reminded the Communists of President Nixon's stated resolve to withdraw all U.S. forces from South Vietnam as part of an over-all settlement and told Hanoi's Xuan Thuy "everyone knows" North Vietnamese troops are in Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam.

"I see no reason why we cannot now begin immediately to negotiate an agreed timetable for the complete withdrawal and return home of all those troops—both yours and ours—so that the people of Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam can determine their future free of the presence of all outside forces," Bruce said.

Quake Pushes Range Of Mountains South

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The destructive Los Angeles earthquake was so powerful that during the massive temblor the mountains at the western end of the San Gabriel range rose three feet and then slipped three feet to the south.

State Geologists told a news conference Wednesday that the quake also caused several thousand landslides in the mountain range area and that studies were under way to try to determine whether heavy rain could cause future earth slippage.

However, Westerly G. Bruer, chief of the California Division of Mines and Geology, said an investigation so far has shown no reason to believe that another destructive quake would occur in the northern San Fernando Valley for a number of years—probably for several decades. The mountain range borders the valley—the worst hit area in the Feb. 9 earthquake.

Bruer said the quake measured 6.6 on the Richter scale and was rated as a "moderate to large" temblor but not a "great earthquake" such as the one in 1906 that hit San Francisco with an intensity of 8.3.

However, Douglas Morton, a state geologist, said the quake was powerful enough that "the mountains rose up three feet in relation to the valley floor and moved three feet to the south."

Damage from the quake, which took the lives of 64 persons, was still being tolled as some good news came from the federal government.

Ralph D. Burns, western regional director of the office of emergency preparedness, said a bill which President Nixon signed into law last Dec. 31, provided for the federal government to pick up the entire tab for damage to public property. It also provided for funds for all or nearly all wages for emergency service.

The public bill now totals an estimated $236.5 million and still is growing.

However, the government will provide relatively little financial relief for owners of homes or businesses—whose generally uninsured property damage so far totals $156.4 million. The list still is growing. But homeowners and private businessmen are eligible for low interest loans and grants of $3,500 in some cases.

In the major shock area—called the "disaster triangle"—a block-by-block canvass of buildings was 80 per cent complete.

Posted as unsafe by city inspectors in the 40-square mile area with the San Fernando Valley at its center were 271 private homes, 32 apartment buildings containing 882 dwelling units, and 234 private businesses.

Those buildings will have to be repaired to meet city standards before occupancy or be demolished.

Telephone Rate Increase Asked

San Francisco (UPI) — The staff of the California Public Utilities Commission Wednesday proposed an increase of $62.8 million a year for Pacific Telephone Co.

The company has requested an annual increase of $195 million, and hearings on its proposal are in recess until Feb. 24 when the CPUC staff will be cross-examined on its recommendation.

The staff said its recommendation would yield Pacific Telephone 7.64 per cent, compared to the current 6.77 per cent return on its investment.

Guard Shoots Escapee

SAN QUENTIN (UPI)—A guard shot and killed a prisoner who escaped from a minimum security unit at San Quentin prison Wednesday, prison officials said.

The guard fired after the prisoner refused to halt when ordered to do so, officials said.

Proposed Peninsula Highway Hit Again

After six public hearings, some Tiburon and Belvedere residents doubt the new highway system proposed for the Tiburon Peninsula will solve more problems than it will create.

They voiced their objections and concerns last night at a joint meeting of the Tiburon and Belvedere planning commissions.

Most of the residents were concerned that the new road would cut off access to Richardson Bay. Many opposed any new highway in order to discourage population growth.

The proposed new highway system, designed to meet anticipated traffic and population for the peninsula with respect to tideline ecology and recreational facilities, was prepared by a joint Belvedere-Tiburon Transportation Committee over the last six months.

Alvin R. Kuhn, Tiburon planning commissioner, explained to the 50 residents in attendance that the first section beginning near Reed Ranch Road would be a four-lane highway extending past the intersection at Trestle Glen Boulevard to Avenida Miraflores.

This area, designated as phase I, he said, would be placed as far from the bay shore as possible leaving room on the tidelands for a recreation and cultural center, the sanitary district, Richardson Bay Park, and a recreational area around the knoll.

According to Wayne Moody, Tiburon planning director, Phase I, if approved by both cities and the State Division of Highways, would be under construction by 1973 and be financed entirely by the state.

Every two years thereafter, Moody said, a new phase of highway construction would begin until the entire length of new road to downtown Tiburon is completed.

Most of the complaints from residents centered on phase II of the project.

The proposed plan would narrow the four-lane highway to two lanes from the knoll near Avenida Miraflores to Rock Hill Road. Moody said the two lane road would be constructed close to the shore leaving the old Tiburon Boulevard as a local service Road.

Residents of this area between Pine Terrace and the Tennis Club would be most affected by the new highway. The new two-lane road would cut off their access to the bay, leaving little room for a proposed bicycle-pedestrian path along the shores of Richardson Bay. (They had voted against the proposal at previous meetings.)

Moody explained that the remainder of the two-lane road would parallel the old Tiburon boulevard on its westward side.

"Why narrow the road from a four-lane highway to a two-lane highway?" questioned several of the residents at the meeting.

Kuhn explained that a large number of cars coming into Tiburon off Highway 101 would gradually peel-off into the residential area starting at Trestle Glen Boulevard. By the time the traffic reached the Hilarita area, he said, their numbers would be diminished even with the increased populations projected for 1990.

One woman questioned why other possibilities have not been presented, why, for example, the new highway was not planned for Ridge Road, and the tideline ecology protected from the proposed construction.

Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commissioner Donald K. Loomis said Ridge Road had been considered but that maintaining open space in that area was considered a higher priority. He said that the goal was to keep as far from the bay shore as possible.

Loomis said that in the area near Pine Terrace where the new highway would parallel the bicycle path, a small part of the bay could be filled to provide greater distance between the road and pathways.

Other residents resented the lack of other alternative plans presented at the meeting.

"What is the function of this meeting tonight," asked one man, "to convince us this plan is right?"

Kuhn explained as he did to similar questions that the committee's proposal was considered the best of several proposals and was recommended for consideration by the joint planning commission.

The only other alternative, Kuhn said, was that originally proposed by the state Division of Highways to make the entire route into Tiburon a four-lane highway close to the shore and partially on filled land.

Lawrence Lab Building A Super Atom Smasher

BERKELEY (UPI) — The atom smasher which created the last four manmade elements has been shut down for modifications which scientists hope will lead to the discovery of several more.

They theorize that some of the elements which "Super-Hilac" can make when it goes back into operation next fall will last millions of years rather than the millionths of seconds of recent manmade materials.

Super-Hilac — the modified heavy ion linear accelerator at Lawrence Radiation Laboratory of the University of California—will have the potential to create virtually every super-heavy element that has been proposed in theory.

The $3 million, six-month alteration announced today will make the machine the first one capable of accelerating ions as heavy as uranium—the heaviest natural element—to energies high enough for penetration of heavy target nuclei. It is hoped such collisions will create previously undiscovered elements when hundreds of protons and neutrons combine in new forms.

Before its modification, Hilac created elements 102 through 105—although Russian scientists and Berkeley physicists are still arguing over who really first found the short-lived element 104.

Former Monk Denies Plot

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A former Benedictine monk who describes himself as a "married Catholic priest involved in an experimental peace movement" has denied an alleged plot to kidnap a high federal official.

Paul Mayer, named by a federal grand jury as a coconspirator in the alleged plot, told a news conference Wednesday, "We have rejected all acts such as those of which we have been accused."

Mayer is one of seven persons named as coconspirators in a bizarre plot to kidnap presidential security adviser Henry Kissinger and to blow up an underground heating system in the nation's capital.

BRUCE P. COLLINS

Greenbrae Scout Cited For Effort

Bruce P. Collins of Greenbrae has been awarded the Medal of Merit by the Marin Council of Boy Scouts for trying to revive a heart attack victim.

On May 29, 1970, the 14-year-old Eagle Scout of Troop 11, Kentfield, made a determined though unsuccessful attempt to revive Max Pollak, 84, of Sausalito, through mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

The medal was awarded upon the recommendation of the National Court of Honor of the Boy Scouts of America.

Carpet Tests Are Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In 1967 Congress passed a law directing the Commerce Department to set standards preventing distribution of dangerously flammable rugs, carpets and other products.

In 1970, with standards still not set, 32 patients were killed in a Marietta, Ohio, nursing home fire. Officials said most of them were asphyxiated by smoke from rubber backing on a carpet.

This year, the Commerce Department set flammability standards for rugs and carpets.

Today, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC), which must enforce the standards, proposed tests to be used by manufacturers so they can certify their carpeting is not dangerously flammable.

Lower Enrollment Ceiling Planned At UC Campuses

BERKELEY (UPI)—Enrollment at the University of California will not increase as rapidly as predicted in the early 1960s, a study showed Wednesday.

Neither President Charles J. Hitch nor the board of regents has announced a change in planning yet, but a study indicates the university's nine campuses will have a total enrollment by 1980 of 135,000 students, instead of the present 106,000.

Earlier predictions were for a total of 250,000.

The most recent forecasts are from a working paper authorized by Loren Furado, vice president in charge of planning and analysis.

The working paper forecasts that both the Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses will increase to 30,000 but that newer and smaller campuses will not grow rapidly.

Campuses at Irvine, Santa Cruz, Riverside and San Diego each will have a ceiling of 10,000, instead of 27,000, the study showed, while Davis will have 16,000 and Santa Barbara 15,000. For Davis an enrollment of 25,000 previously had been predicted and the figure for Santa Barbara had been 25,000.

Site Is Found For Belvedere Antenna

After long search, Cable TV of Marin appears to have found a satisfactory site in Belvedere for construction of a community television antenna to serve the island community.

City Planning Commissioner William H. Rafter said commissioners Tuesday looked favorably on an application by the cable firm for a revocable license to build an antenna on city-owned property on the southeastern tip of Corinthian Island above the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Commissioners told Robert Pace, representing the cable company, to return March 15 with the exact location of the proposed antenna pinpointed.

Rafter said Pace told the commission the atenna, located on a steep downslope below Belvevue Avenue, will not block residential views.

Cable TV of Marin has waged a year-long battle to find an antennasite to serve Belvedere. The firm had located a site on Mount Ring in Tiburon but the Tiburon City Council in December blocked installation of the necessary transmission lines over city rights-of-way to Belvedere.

Rafter said Williams subdivided the property without permission from the planners and sold a strip of land to a neighbor for a greenbelt.

Williams argued unsuccessfully that it is to Belvedere's advantage to have a green area on the tip of the island.

Tiburon Doctor Running For Reed Schools Post

A Tiburon physician today filed candidacy papers for Gordon C. Wright's seat on the Reed School District board. Wright is the target of a recall election tentatively set for April 20.

Dr. John J. Osborn, of 2960 Paradise Drive, filed today in the Marin County Schools office, the first person to seek Wright's post. He is running, he said, because of his concern with "the erosion of quality education (in the district) in an atmosphere of distrust and hostility . . ."

Osborn, 53 years old and a 16-year resident of the district, is director of the intensive care unit at Presbyterian Hospital in San Francisco and is one of the developers of the heart-lung machine.

He and his wife Anne have seven children, one of whom still attends school in the district.

The candidate believes "good education can be carried out only in an atmosphere of cooperation and trust, which can and must be restored to the Reed District." He feels he can "help all elements in the community to understand each others' problems and to work together."

"We must restore the process where the board sets policy, administrators administer and teachers teach and where trustees show respect for the judgment and competence of staff and concerned citizens," Osborn said.

He feels the district must show fiscal responsibility, set goals and objectives, evaluate personnel and programs on a regular basis and work for "sensible change and innovation."

The candidate holds a BA degree from Princeton University and an M.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Md. He has taught and done medical research at Stanford and New York universities.

During World War II he served as a captain with the Army Medical Corps.

Leaders of the campaign to oust Wright, chairman of the school board, filed a recall petition against him with the Marin County Elections Office Feb. 3. The petition, containing 1,626 valid signatures (1,140 signatures are needed) was verified by County Elections Officer Peter C. Meyer Feb. 5.

Four other school board candidates have filed papers for the April 20 ballot, the county schools office reported today.

By district, they were:

Novato Unified School District — Raleigh D. Floyd of 2057 Carolyn Way, Novato, an engineer.

Lagunitas — Wilma M. McVey of 50 Forest Drive, Forest Knolls, a housewife.

San Anselmo — John F. Hulpke of 20 Oak Knoll Drive, San Anselmo, listing himself as a business administrator-teacher.

Zoning Bar Voted For Apartments

Seeking closer controls in zoning, the Petaluma Planning Commission last night deleted apartments as permitted uses in professional-medical zones.

Assistant Planner Richard D. A. Anderson said the commission and staff felt that multi-family dwellings should become a conditional use in the professional-medical zones.

Anderson said the commission felt that apartments should not just routinely be permitted since they may not always be compatible with medical offices.

The Petaluma Planning Commission also:

HOSPITAL — Heard a report that Quantas Development Co. had withdrawn its request to rezone land behind McDowell School for a planned hospital. Anderson said the firm may refile after the six month moratorium on rezoning is completed.

CREEKS — Approved plans of the Sonoma County Water Agency to widen and extend Capri Creek and to extend the Shasta Avenue conduit.

REZONING — Delayed until the March 16 meeting the request of Valley Green Co. rezone land on South McDowell Boulevard for a subdivision and the request of Caster Mobilehomes Corp. to rezone land east of Highway 101 south of Corona Road for a mobile home park.

Air Force Flies Blood To Center

A blood sample from a 10-year-old San Rafael boy suffering from leukemia was flown to Houston, Tex., yesterday by a Hamilton Air Force Base pilot for a vital test.

The test was necessary before experimental treatment could be undertaken in an effort to save the boy's life, the Air Force reported.

The Air Force undertook the flight because the blood had to be delivered in Texas in six hours and a commercial airline trip would have taken seven hours, the Air Force reported.

Maj. Russell Weber of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron made the trip in three hours to Ellington Air Force Base, Tex., and the blood sample was taken to M.D. Anderson Hospital, part of the University of Texas.

Antisuicide Center Gets New Office

Directors of the Marin Suicide Prevention Center learned yesterday that the center now has a lease on quarters in a county building in San Rafael and can move in either tomorrow or Monday.

Keith C. Craig, president of the center's board, said he signed the lease Tuesday.

The center does not yet have a target date for installing telephone apparatus to receive crisis calls from potential suicides, he noted. The new organization needs more funds before it can go into full scale operation, he explained.

Meanwhile, volunteers will begin equipping the office and preparing files. Craig said donations of stationery, office machines and furniture are sought.

William G. Thompson of San Rafael yesterday was appointed volunteer director of operations for the office.

The board elected Craig president, to replace Mrs. Walter Lyons, who resigned earlier this month.

Board members and nearly two dozen volunteer members who attended yesterday's meeting learned that the center has applied for state funds. They discussed plans to recruit supporting members, who would not necessarily be active participants in suicide prevention operations, Craig reported. Membership in the nonprofit corporation is $10 a year, he said.

Board member Hugh Hardin reported that the center and the College of Marin may cooperate in training a second class of volunteer suicide prevention workers to augment the two dozen men and women already available for duty when the emergency telephones are installed.

A $6,711 Budget Hike Is Proposed

The Marin County Comprehensive Health Planning Council yesterday approved a proposed budget for fiscal 1971-72 totaling $37,711.

According to Ray K. Bolinger, president of the council, the budget, to be forwarded to the county, is made up primarily of salaries.

About $24,000 is slated for the council's health planner, his secretary and half-time clerical helper.

Bolinger said about $4,500 is for fringe benefits and the remainder for office operation.

This year's budget totaled about $31,000. The increase, Bolinger said, is for the part-time clerical help and raising costs of office operation.

The council also accepted the resignation of director Ernest N. Kettenhofen who resigned last month due to business pressures. The council approved appointment of Ben Dial to the director's seat vacated by Kettenhofen. Dial is a vice president with Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Marinites' LSD Trial Begins In Mendocino

I-J Special Report

UKIAH — Jury selection has begun in the case of four Marinites charged with felony drug offenses stemming from a $3 million LSD raid in Fort Bragg last June.

After both of Mendocino County's two superior court judges and a visiting judge were disqualified earlier this month, Judge Kenneth M. Eymann of Sonoma County was assigned to hear the case which opened Tuesday.

A total of six men and one woman are being tried on felony counts arising from the LSD raid.

Marinites charged are Craig Burns Champie, 20, of Fairfax; John Rene Rodigou, 23, and Michael B. Aylwin, 23, both of San Rafael, and Wayne Butler, 23, of Forest Knolls.

All are charged with conspiring to make LSD, manufacturing it, possessing it and having the drug for sale.

Innocent Plea To Marijuana

A jury trial was set for the week of March 1.

Minard was arrested Dec. 15 when Novato police stopped his car because of a broken tail light. Marijuana was found in the car and in Minard's pocket, police said.

$400,000 Suit In Timber Land Fuss

A $400,000 suit was filed yesterday in Marin Superior Court on behalf of the estate of Dr. Ethel Righetti against an Oregon firm which had contracted to cut timber on her 1,400-acre ranch on Bolinas Ridge.

The firm, Mathews, Humbert and Walker of Northbend, Ore., has ceased its timber operation on the property, according to San Francisco Attorney William H. Orrick Jr., who filed the suit for Marie R. Weaver and Milton R. Righetti, co-executors of Dr. Righetti's estate.

Dr. Righetti died last Feb. 28.

The suit charges that George Walker, Robert L. Mathews and Jerald R. Humbert, owners of the firm, failed to pay a $350,000 balance on a $450,000 contract to purchase marketable redwood and douglas fir on the ranch.

The suit also asks $50,000 for damages to the property; $5,401 for back taxes on the land, and $5,000 for legal fees incurred by the estate in connection with lawsuits stemming from the logging operation.

The estate also is suing West Coast Orient Co. for $60,401, — saying the company guaranteed the performance of the logging operation.

Dr. Righetti and the Oregon firm were the subject of a suit filed by Marin County which was settled in 1969 when an Alameda County Superior Court judge ruled the logging could continue if the loggers posted a $50,000 bond and set up silt measuring devices to protect creeks in the area.

Last year, the firm came under attack for unattended fires. The Marin County Board of Supervisors recommended that the firm's logging permit be revoked, and criminal charges of illegal burning were filed against the company.

The South Vietnamese Command said government deaths totaled 478, the highest number since last June 6 at the peak of the Allied invasion of Cambodia, when 600 combat deaths were reported.

The number of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese killed was listed at 1,908, raising to 701,058 the number of Communist troops killed in the war.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese forces killed 25 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese troops at dusk Wednesday in Laos and were meeting only sporadic resistance in the drive.

The U.S. Command reported the loss of an Air Force F4 Phantom jet in the lower panhandle of Laos Tuesday. It was the 100th U.S. plane lost over Laos since last March 10. Both crewmen were missing.

U.S. spokesmen gave few details of the situation near fire base Scotch, 10 miles from the Laotian border, other than to say the fighting had subsided. Reports earlier said more than a company of reinforcements had been rushed to the battleground to the aid of an outnumbered platoon of GIs fighting a reinforced company of Communist troops attacking from all sides.

South Vietnamese spokesmen said the 16,000-man government force which swept into Laos 11 days ago was meeting only occasional resistance and had killed 25 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese near the town of Lao Bao.

Military spokesmen said South Vietnamese forces operating on Highway 7 more than 60 miles northeast of Phnom Penh killed at least 116 Communist troops today in two major actions.

troop withdrawals before May 1.

Nixon said the United States continues with the Paris talks primarily because it hopes to reach some agreement on the prisoners-of-war issue, but he added:

"We have to realize that as far as the negotiations affecting a political settlement for South Vietnam is concerned, time is running out for the North Vietnamese if they expext to negotiate with the United States. Because as our forces come out of South Vietnam, it means that the responsibility for the negotiations, increasingly, then becomes that of South Vietnam.

"I do not want to suggest that there are any more concessions coming from our side to North Vietnam. We are not going to make any more concessions. The time is for them next to act on the principles we have laid down."

A Death, Wounding In Larkspur

A woman died, apparently of a pill overdose, and a man was found bleeding from a serious throat wound in two separate incidents yesterday in a Larkspur trailer park, police said.

Officers said Patricia Louise Kiesel of space G-11 at the Marin Trailer Park, 2130 Redwood Highway, was found dead at about 7:50 p.m., apparently from an overdose of pills.

Five hours later, officers said, they responded to another call from the trailer park, this time finding William Wise Jr. of space G-8 bleeding profusely from a six-inch gash in the throat.

He was transported to Marin General Hospital where officials today declined to report his condition.

According to the Marin County Coroner's Office, Mrs. Kiesel's 12-year-old daughter, Sondra, discovered her mother unconscious in bed at 6:30 a.m.

The girl told officers she attempted to awaken her mother at 6:30 a.m., again at 7:15 a.m. and then at about 7:45 a.m. noticed the woman had stopped breathing. The daughter sought help from a neighbor, who phoned the fire department. Attempts to revive Mrs. Kiesel were unsuccessful.

Mrs. Kiesel was a native of Missouri and had lived in Marin for two years. She was employed as a bookkeeper in San Francisco.

Funeral will be Monday at Wacker-Helderly Mortuary in St. Louis, Mo., with burial at St. Paul's Church cemetery.

Officers said Wise, employed at Value Center Stores in San Francisco, was discovered by his employer after Wise fail to report to work.

He was found lying in a pool of blood in his bedroom. A knife was found nearby.

Schoonmaker, operating in Sausalito since 1948, had 450 employees at one time, but this has dropped to 140. The company will operate in Sausalito until about July or August, said Schoonmaker. When the property is sold, Schoonmaker said, the company will move to an undetermined location in the Bay Area, not in Sausalito, to continue operations on a reduced scale. The company assembles electric generators and manufactures diesel engines and parts.

The company has been heavily engaged in defense contracts, and Schoonmaker has said substantial losses were suffered on Air Force contracts.

Last February, the company was low bidder on a $31 million contract from the Army for electrical generators. But the Army awarded the contract to the second low bidder, claiming Schoonmaker had not met specifications.

A federal court judge, however, ordered the Defense Department to award the contract to Schoonmaker after it was disclosed the Army had given the higher bidder private information.

The Defense Department appealed that order and the matter is in the courts, a situation Schoonmaker has said has proved costly.

OBITUARIES

ALBERT PAULIST

Funeral for Albert E. Paulist, a long-time resident of San Anselmo, will be at 10 a.m. Friday at the Chapel of theHills in San Anselmo.

Paulist died Tuesday, apparently from a heart attack in his office at Southern Pacific Railroad in San Francisco. He was 63.

A native of San Francisco, he came to Marin in 1941 and lived in San Anselmo for the last 23 years. He resided with his wife Carolan at 141 Scenic Avenue.

Paulist worked for Southern Pacific since 1925 and held a supervisory position in its treasury department for the last 15 years.

Surviving him with his wife are a son, Robert Paulist of San Anselmo, and two daughters, Sharon Paulist of Sacramento and Kathie Paulist of Berkeley.

nation's medical bill increased 11 per cent, from $63 billion to $70 billion and in the last 10 years has shot up by 170 per cent.

In the last decade, Nixon said, hospital costs have risen five times as fast as other prices.

Under the Nixon proposal, all employers would be required to guarantee that all workers and their families received health insurance that would cover hospital services, physician services both in and out of the hospital, full maternity care, baby care including immunizations, laboratory services and certain other medical expenses.

To protect against catastrophic costs, the benefits would have to include not less than $50,000 for each family member during the period of the contract.

Harbor Carriers Again Eyes Ferry Service Into Sausalito

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — Harbor Carriers, operator of commuter and excursion ferries to Tiburon, is about to try again to extend similar service to Sausalito, it was disclosed yesterday.

The company won a Public Utilities Commission certificate to serve Sausalito three years ago, but failed to get the city council to approve use of a dock between the Sausalito Yacht Club and the Trade Fair.

The company's prospects, however, appeared uncertain in light of the council's vote Tuesday to support a recommendation by the PUC's staff that the certificate be revoked for failure to provide the service. The council's resolution said that service by Harbor Carriers would duplicate that of the Golden Gate Bridge District.

Failure to provide the service was the focal point for yesterday's hearing by a PUC examiner on a staff investigation of Harbor Carriers. The investigation was ordered by the PUC last August in the face of passengers' complaints about Harbor Carriers operations.

The investigation was consolidated with a rehearing of the company's permit to schedule trips between Tiburon and Alcatraz Island. The City of Tiburon successfully petitioned for a rehearing, arguing it could not accommodate parking facilities for persons who would use the service.

In a related move, the PUC was informed by Harbor Carriers and Milton McDonough, operator of a ferry between Tiburon and Angel Island, that they had settled their three-year dispute over McDonough's claim that Harbor Carriers was providing competing regular service without a PUC permit.

McDonough had filed a complaint against Harbor Carriers with the PUC, but dropped it yesterday in light of their settlement. It stated that Harbor Carriers would stop providing regular local service and stop soliciting passengers in Tiburon for service to Angel Island.

John G. Lyons, attorney for Harbor Carriers, disclosed his client's new move to get a dock in Sausalito during his questioning of the city's planning director, H. Eric Borgwardt.

Borgwardt conceded that the council's resolution asking that the certificate be revoked had not been on the agenda Tuesday, and that Harbor Carriers had not been notified about the matter. The resolution was brought up Tuesday night by Mayor Alexander R. Imlay, Borgwardt said.

The planner said that the bridge district was amply providing for both commuter and tourist traffic. He said the city had a limited capacity for ferry passenger traffic.

Harbor Carriers' bid to get a dock in Sausalito could be its last under its existing PUC certificate, since the PUC staff recommended the company be given only 90 days more to start the service or have its certificate revoked. The 90-day count, however, would be from the date of the PUC's order, which itself could be 90 days from now, the staff said.

Lyons' ire over the unheralded action by the Sausalito City Council was overshadowed by his angry denunciation of the bridge district when its attorney introduced a statement outlining its ferry service to Sausalito.

Lyons branded the statement by Gen.Mgr. Dale W. Luehring "nothing but a left-handed attempt to influence this commission." He insisted that the district was trying to introduce "facts highly prejudicial to Harbor Carriers," asserting "it would be outrageous to have this material read into the record."

The bridge district's attorney, Ross E. Stromberg, suggested that Lyons was "reading too much into this document," and said it only was "simply a summary of our official schedule."

The hearing examiner, Arthur M. Mooney, agreed with Stromberg and assured Lyons that his objections had been "noted." Mooney also assured Lyons that Luehring's statement would not be considered as evidence, but "just a portion of the formal file."

The hearing was to continue today in the State Building.

Man Insists Bomb Stunt Proved Case

Michael Lee Humphrey, still insisting that Marin County Civic Center security is not so secure, was arraigned yesterday on a misdemeanor charge of obstructing public officers.

Humphrey, 32, of San Anselmo, was arrested Tuesday when he attempted to smuggle what appeared to be bomb components into the administration building.

He said the county has spent more than $400,000 on a security system that doesn't work.

"I agree there should be security, but the way they're going about it is ineffective," Humphrey said.

"$400,000 for security would be really groovy if it made this place secure, but it doesn't."

The self-employed maintenance man said it was the weight of a book he carried, and not a metal detector, that tripped up his plan to confront the board of supervisors with proof of the building's insecurity.

The hollowed-out book contained modeling clay, resembling plastic explosive.

A brown paper bag in which he carried a clock in a carved out grapefruit also contained sliced pineapple wrapped in tinfoil.

If the clock had registered on the metal detector, he reasoned, deputies looking in the bag would have assumed it was the tinfoil that registered.

He said he was surprised he was caught, but still thought "a person bent on destruction can do it."

Humphrey was freed on $625 bail to return to Marin Municipal Court March 3 to enter a plea to the charge against him.

Art Of Bonsai Classes Slated

A series of four classes on the art of Bonsai cultivation will be given at 7 p.m. Mondays beginning March 8 at the Marin Co-op in Corte Madera.

Instructor Kenneth Osaki of the Marin Nakayoshi Club, a Japanese cultural and social society, said the course will include selection of Bonsai trees, form and style, and the principles of training Bonsai.

Classes will be limited to 20 people chosen on a first-come basis. Reservations can be made with Mrs. James C. Staley of 243 Golden Hind Passage in Corte Madera.

84 Strep Cases Top Disease List

Eight-four cases of streptococcus infections topped the list of communicable diseases recorded in Marin last week.

According to Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, Marin County Health Officer, there were 69 cases of German measles, 22 cases of gonorrhea and one case of infectious hepatitis recorded.

Oklahoma Park Chief And Patrolman Shot To Death

EUFAULA, Okla. (UPI)—The superintendent of Fountainhead State Park and an Oklahoma patrolman were shot to death and a park ranger critically wounded Wednesday, apparently in a struggle that developed while they were arresting two soldiers believed wanted by federal authorities.

The bodies of Park Superintendent Leo Newton and Highway Patrolman Bill J. Walker, 35, were found near the park's airstrip by Newton's son, Tim, 14. Park Ranger W.L. Pickens was sprawled a few feet away.

The highway patrol said more than 500 state, local and federal officers had joined the search for two suspects identified as William B. Franklin, 28, and Edwin Edgar Jones, 24, both of Mineral Wells, Tex. A patrol spokesman said Franklin was wanted as a deserter from Vietnam and Jones was AWOL from Ft. Hood, Tex.

Pickins underwent surgery at a Tulsa hospital.

Highway Patrol Chief Bill Mayberry rushed to the scene from his Oklahoma City headquarters. Roadblocks were thrown across every road in the park area within 20 minutes of the shooting and within an hour the borders of Texas and Arkansas were sealed, he said.

"The two boys, and we know who they are, had been stopped by the park superintendent and the ranger," Mayberry said.

Agency Has 40 Ready To Fill Jobs

The Marin City Employment Service has 40 qualified applicants seeking employment in a variety of jobs, director Nesbit Crutchfield reported.

He said the individuals, who have all been screened by the employment service, are "qualified and responsible men and women who very much want employment in semi-professionak, semi-skilled and non-skilled work."

Most of the applicants are high school graduates seeking jobs as construction helpers, janitors, domestics, clerks and general laborers, he said.

Crutchfield said the employment service was formed three weeks ago to help unemployed persons in Marin City find work. Unemployment in the community is currently about 33 per cent, according to the director.

Some of the Marin City applicants have transportation and could accept jobs in Richmond, Oakland or San Francisco.

Employers having positions to offer may contact Crutchfield at the employment service office which operates out of St. Andres Presbyterian Church weekdays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Cost of the service is funded by the church.

OIL SPILL RECREATED — Brown-black swirls of oil emerge through the Golden Gate into the Pacific Ocean portion (foreground) of the U.S. Army Engineers' Bay-Delta hydraulic model in Sausalito. The army recreated last month's oil spill in miniature, for the visit yesterday of William D. Ruckelshaus. Ruckelshaus is administrator of the newly created federal Environmental Protection Agency in Washington.

Consolidation Study Opposed By Chiefs

The Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen was told last night that the county's police chiefs are opposed to hiring a consultant to study consolidation of police departments or certain law enforcement services.

Dan Terzich, Mill Valley police chief, reported that the chiefs met yesterday morning and decided the money to be spent on the study would better be used to open a countywide crime laboratory.

"We have qualified law enforcement people here in Marin to study consolidation," the chief observed.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday endorsed the concept of hiring a criminal justice coordinator to make the study, withholding final approval until budget time.

The cost for one year would be $25,000, county officials said, with the federal government paying $15,000 and the county the rest. Half of the county share would be in the form of services and supplies.

In other matters, the mayors and councilmen, meeting at Sabella's in Mill Valley, were told by Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, that he shortly would introduce a bill requiring furnishing of zoning and land use informations on real estate to buyers.

Behr said he also was preparing various pieces of legislation that would tax emissions from factory smokestacks; create a state environmental protection agency similar to the one of the federal level; create a three-year moratorium before placing home improvements on the assessment rolls in order to help the slumping construction trades; and to require conversion of public and private auto fleets to propane or natural gas fuel.

The senator said he "strongly and urgently" favored resubmission of Proposition 18 to the voters. The measure, defeated in the November election, would have enabled diversion of gas tax money to mass transit.

Endorsing the concept of federal-state-local revenue sharing, Behr noted that the federal government at present keeps almost 90 per cent of the income tax revenue it collects.

The mayors and councilmen will meet again March 31 in Ross.

Promise Of Peripheral Canal Probe

A new federal environmental watchdog agency will conduct a thorough investigation of the Pheripheral Canal to determine its effect on the Sacramento Delta, the agency's head said yesterday.

William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the recently created Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), promised the inquiry after touring the Army Corps of Engineers San Francisco Bay-Delta hydraulic model in Sausalito.

Ruckelshaus, who paused briefly to answer reporters' questions after the tour before returning to San Francisco, promised a "full-scale investigation" of the canal, which has been criticized by conservationists as a threat to the Delta's rich marshlands.

"If it (the canal) is found dangerous," he said, "my agency has the power to stop it."

But he declined, in advance of the investigation, to give an opinion of the canal. Aides said he was made aware of the controversial nature of the Peripheral Canal only yesterday during his tour of the model.

Earlier, Ruckelshaus had witnessed a reenactment of the disastrous Jan. 18 oil spill resulting from a tanker collision outside the Golden Gate.

With the tall, heavy-set Ruckelhaus, a battalion of military officers and an assortment of reporters and photographers looking on, Bay-Delta model employees poured two beakers of crankcase oil into the murky waters of the model.

The first was dumped into the water just outside the Golden Gate as the tide swept into the bay. The second was poured in the vicinity of Angel Island as the tide crested.

Model officials explained crankcase oil approximates the viscosity and specific gravity of the 800,000 gallons of bunker oil spilled into the bay from the ruptured holds of the tanker Oregon Standard.

As the tide turned in the model, thick streamers of oil floated out the Golden Gate, rippling in brown-black swirls, and fanned out in the ocean off Point Bonita.

Most of the oil floated north, almost exactly in the same pattern observed in the real oil spill. After 10 minutes and two complete tidal movements, the Petroleum was even with muir beach. Tidal action then drove it ashore.

Brig. Gen. Frank A. Camm, Southern Pacific Division engineer, and Col. Charles R. Roberts, San Francisco district engineer, explained how the model helps the corps predict the dispersion of pollutants in the bay.

Ruckelshaus was shown how the corps tests the effect of the Peripheral Canal to determine whether its construction will promote salt water intrusion of the Sacramento Delta.

Results of the corps' testing are incomplete. When finished, they will be made available to the Environmental Protection Agency.

San Geronimo Group Asks Septic Tank Policy Delay

The San Geronimo Valley Association, in the wake of resident protests, has voted to ask the Marin County Board of Supervisors to delay action on its proposed septic tank ordinance for further study.

Richard Poppe, association president, said the group acted Tuesday night after citizens raised a variety of objections to the proposed measure.

Poppe said residents were concerned that homes with septic tanks would require $20 annual occupancy permits, that tanks would have to be pumped out on a regular basis and that homes within 100 feet of streams wouldn't be allowed tanks.

Poppe said Asst. County Administrator John F. Barrows and William Desmond, chief of environmental health for Marin, appeared before nearly 100 persons at the association session to explain the ordinance, scheduled for a vote by the board of supervisors on March 22.

Restrooms Approved For Field

The Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission has approved $1,000 for construction of rest rooms at the city baseball field and approved the plans for it.

Commission secretary Ernestine Healy said the expenditure was approved Tuesday with the stipulation that plumbing and concrete work be completed first. Remaining money will go towards bathroom fixtures and other work, Mrs. Healy said.

The Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission also:

LIGHTS — Approved a recommendation by Police Chief James R. Orr to install $100 in lighting on the south side of the pavilion.

MEETING — Changed the April meeting from April 20 to April 27 because the April 20 school board election will be held in the commission's meeting place, the women's club.

VANDALISM — Heard a report from Edgar Phillips, the street superintendent, that vandalism at the pavilion averages $100 a month.

FESTIVAL — Voted moral support to the Fairfax Festival, but declined to offer financial assistance.

PAVILION — Set up a committee of commissioners Joan Walla, Stanley W. Little and Joseph E. Martinez to determine what improvements the pavilion needs.

Psychiatrist Says Calley Had No 'Specific Intent' To Kill

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—A psychiatrist insisted today that Lt. William L. Calley Jr. had no "specific intent" to kill at My Lai, even though he gave two separate orders for a group of women, children and old men to be slaughtered.

Dr. David G. Crane of Indianapolis, Ind., a defense witness at the Calley murder court-martial, said on cross-examination, however, that "he intended the people to die—just as if he had pulled the trigger."

Calley, 27, of Miami, is charged with the premeditated murder of 102 Vietnamese civilians during an American infantry sweep of the hamlet nearly three years ago.

Crane was one of two defense psychiatrists called to show that Calley was so "psyched up" during the search-and-destroy mission that he was unable to premeditate murder.

The defense has conceded that he did kill at My Lai and that he did not regard the villagers there as human beings.

Dr. Crane had testified Wednesday that Calley lacked the mental capacity to "form a specific intent to kill."

Referring to previous prosecution testimony, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III, the chief prosecutor, posed a hypothetical question:

"Doctor, assume that Lt. Calley told Paul Meadlo with a group of civilians to 'Take care of these people' and then departed for a few minutes and returned and said, 'Why haven't you wasted 'em yet?'

"And Meadlo said, 'I didn't know you wanted me to,' and Calley said: 'I want them dead.'

"Would that affect your opinion on specific intent?"

"No," Crane replied. "He did not have the ability to form specific intent. He could generally intend those people to be killed. He intended the people to die.

"It was just as if he pulled the trigger. When he gave the order, that was tantamount to pulling the trigger because there would be no question in his mind but that the order would be carried out."

Crane said Calley was not capable of a complex decision during the operation—such as would be required in determining the legality of orders to kill everything in the village.

Daniel brought up testimony that Calley stopped one of his men in My Lai from "molesting a female," and asked: "Would that be a complex decision?"

"No, but I think it is a significant one," Crane replied.

Record Expenditure For Streets, Roads

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A record $665.87 million was spent by California's cities and counties during 1969-70 for construction and maintenance of streets and roads, Controller Houston I. Flournoy reported Tuesday.

The Controller said the figure represented an 11 per cent increase of $66.38 million over the previous year. A total of $421 million was spent by 404 cities while the counties spent $22.87 million.

The Inequality Of Women Is Explored By Novato Women

By DOROTHY NEWELL

A woman who cheered as a child for McKinley as he ran for President against William Jennings Bryan and the president of the Marin County Chapter of the National Organization for Women as she discussing the inequality of women today were features of the program on the women's liberation movement at a luncheon of the United Presbyterian Women of the Presbyterian Church of Novato yesterday.

Speakers on the panel, all members of the Presbyterian church and the Novato residents, were Mrs. Alta McConnel, housewife and a former high school teacher; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Novato attorney; Mrs. Bunnye Rupp, executive secretary of the Association of California Hospital Districts; and Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, president of the Marin chapter of NOW.

Mrs. McConnel began the discussion as she told of being the child of the only Republican in the school district when McKinley won over Bryan as President of the United States. She recalled voting in 1920 after the women were given the right to vote and chuckling to herself in the voting booth and saying, "I don't know how to vote." The vote was only one thing for women's rights she said.

She was asked as she went in to the teaching field during World War I whether it was to be a career or a year or two of teaching and then marriage. She was among only three or four in the class that responded they wanted to make a career of teaching. Mrs. McConnel said, "Mrs. Emma Willard was told that advance math was too hard on the brains," (of a woman) and Mrs. Smith stated later that Emma Willard "being denied text books with which to teach solid geometry, taught with the aid of pyramids and cones carved out of turnips and potatoes."

Dorothy Young told of her experiences working with attorneys in a law office as the only woman. After she passed the California Bar. Male attorneys were provided secretaries, but she was expected to do her own typing and secretarial work.

"Men attorneys think women can only handle domestic relations, probate and workmen's compensation laws, or they are placed in research and never get to court or see clients," she said.

However, since she started her private practice 10 years ago Mrs. Young said she hasn't run into that type of discrimination.

Bunnye Ruppe, a wife, mother and executive secretary, said with greater freedom there is greater responsibility — both men and women have limited freedom.

"There are ground rules" she said, and a husband and wife have an original contract. She went on to explain during a question and answer period that any marriage is a contract, where the husband and wife have certain rules they live by. Bunnye, a woman among many men in her organization, says she feels women are more emotional and deal with matters subjectively rather than objectively, therefore many are not as capable for top positions.

She talked about women arriving in this country in 1608, when the first European women arrived here to be sold by their own consent to settlers as wives, to the present time when NOW nationally and locally will work to try to pass the Equal Rights Amendment, again in 1971.

She gave as an example what women are up against in this country. For 47 years an Equal Rights Amendment has been brought before congress only to lose out. She said it states that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. The 14th amendment has never been interpreted by the Supreme Court to cover women in this regard.

NOW was organized in 1966 and the Marin Chapter began in 1970. The organization allows men members, but it may be noted though that men hold no official positions of leadership, she said.

Among the NOW statement of purpose quoted by Mrs. Smith was: "NOW is dedicated to the proposition that women, first and foremost, are human beings, who, like all other people in our society, must have the chance to develop their fullest human potential."

"We are in the midst of a cultural revolution," Mrs. Smith said. With a life span lengthened to nearly 75 years it is no longer either necessary or possible for women to devote the greater part of their lives to child-rearing, she continued. Only 37 years of their lives are involved in childhood, education, adolescents, marriage, childbearing and child raising.

"Ours is not a struggle against men but against male supremacy. Freedom for women could mean male liberation as well," she said.

NOW speaks out in behalf of our own equality, freedom and human dignity — not in pleas for special privilege or in enmity toward men — but in an active, self respecting partnership with men," she continued. "We women are beginning to redefine ourselves. We are learning to like and respect ourselves and each other. It's a revolutionary movement, no doubt about it," she concluded.

Mrs. McConnel concluded the meeting by saying, "The girls must have the choice of being a spinster, a homemaker or being a homemaker combined with the life of a profession, but they must feel they have the freedom of choice."

Seven Day Milk

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI)—Under normal refrigerator temperatures of 30 to 45 degrees, milk should keep fresh an average of seven days. So says Ethel Diedrichsen, of the University of Nebraska Extension Service. She advises that containers should be stored closed.

Enfant Terrible Breaks His Silence

FRENCH FASHION designer Yves Saint Laurent claims critics who called his spring fashion collection hideous just did not understand that it had a revolutionary spirit. Says the boy wonder of Paris, "I did not think in a profession as free as fashion that one could meet so many people so narrow-minded and reactionary, petty people paralyzed by taboos."

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) —Yves Saint Laurent says the critics who called his World War II floozy look for spring the truly hideous fashion of the century are a pack of "petty . . . narrow-minded reactionaries."

To the wispy, bespectacled boy wonder of Paris, his critics just did not understand that his spring fashion collection of Jan. 28 had "a revolutionary spirit" that did not kill off high fashion as they said but "on the contrary, brought it out of a rut."

In an exclusive interview with UPI, the "enfant terrible" of high fashion broke his silence on the scandal he stirred up when his manniquins paraded like 1940 streetwalkers in football shoulders and tight dresses. One critic cried "hideous" and a U.S. news magazine renamed him "Yves St. Debacle."

"I DID not think in a profession as free as fashion that one could meet so many people so narrow-minded and reactionary, petty people paralyzed by taboos," said Saint Laurent.

"But I also am very stimulated by this scandal because I know that which shocks is new. And basically it was not the details that were important in my collection—the (Ginger Rogers) coiffures or platform-soled shoes—but the revolutionary spirit that upset people.

"It breaks traditional so-called good taste, and if one regards it with eyes used to a certain illusion of traditional good taste, it certainly can shock.

"Fashion is the reflection of our time and if it does not express the atmosphere of its time it means nothing. My aim never was to shock or amuse. I made this collection in a spirit of gaiety and freedom to express what I thought to be our times.

"Haute couture is bogged down in a boring tradition of so-called good taste and refinement, and it has become a museum, a refuge for people who do not dare to look life in the face and who are reassured by tradition."

SAINT LAURENT admitted his puffed sleeves and striped mannish suits "perhaps did not please a certain press or American buyers. But it pleased youth and that is what counts for me. It pleased people who understand. One must try to make fashion interesting to youth and to people who make our epoch and not stay locked up in a tradition made for some people living in the 19th century. Certain buyers and journalists will be further shocked this spring when they see women wearing what they judged as 'hideous'."

The designer added he did not want to compare himself to great artists, but he recalled that when Edouard Manet painted the nude portrait "Olympia" people cried scandal. And when Igor Stravinsky conducted the modern "Rites of Spring" listeners were revolted. It was just the same, he said, when the directress of another fashion salon told him after viewing his collection she "felt insulted."

The bearded Saint Laurent insisted his tightly swathed hips and cutout bodices were not trollopy at all, but merely revived "a true female body."

"FOR YEARS the eye was used to a boyish girl without breasts, waist or hips. I never thought the appearance of a true woman would provoke such a scandal," mused Saint Laurent.

Although critics complained Saint Laurent's World War II chubby fox coats and turbans reflected a ghastly fashion era, the designer defends the '40's styles as "very feminine. Very modern."

Did Saint Laurent and other couturiers stage an inglorious retreat by baring the knees again after putting women into midis and maxis last fall? To Saint Laurent "this hemline question is stupid." He insisted it was the new "spirit of fashion freedom" for any hemline "which is saving high fashion."

SO IS PARIS high fashion dying as critics say?

"It is a laboratory and as such its future is assured. But it would be a mistake to try to keep it in its old golden frame, as a museum destined to dress only a few privileged women," Saint Laurent said.

"Certainly haute couture is no more as it was 30 or 50 years ago but is the world the same? Fashion now is international. Ideas can be born everywhere, but I believe Paris will remain the marvelous catalyst. Paris is an old grandmother who still has a trick up her sleeve."

To critics who urged him to forget the '40's look, Saint Laurent announced his future collections will continue in the same spirit "because I know I am right." Furthermore, he added slyly, his new style undoubtedly will show up "in the collections of others."

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

When She Walks All Over You Don't Come Crawling Back

DEAR HELEN:

I went with this girl for a year and four months and saw her almost every day. For ten of those months we really loved and understood one another, and then she started to step all over me.

She said I was being too good to her and it was my fault that she took advantage of me. Then she said she wanted to have a good time and not get serious, so she flirts with all the other guys and hardly gives me a second look.

I haven't taken her out in three weeks and it's about killing me. I've tried dating other girls, but I only have one on my mind. And she's dating other boys.

Should I crawl back and ask for a date, or let her come to me? — CONFUSED AND WAITING

DEAR C and W:

Don't crawl back unless you enjoy being stepped on. Really, you can do better — and you may even agree with me in six months. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Nowadays more and more kids are beginning to believe God is where it's at — but where is that? Not in church, it seems. I'd like to go to church to hear love and goodness, and that things will be all right if I believe in Him. But instead —

For three Sundays now we've been getting sex education. I think it's up to the parents who put us in this world to tell us how they did it. It's not the church's job. Especially when it's made to sound kind of awful.

Before that we discussed crime and drugs and pollution and segregation and pornography — everything but the Bible. Helen, I'd like to attend church to find some peace, and instead I come away more scared than ever. I'd like to sing the good old songs and feel happy being with happy people who don't find fault with half the other people in the congregation.

Would it be a sin to look for God on a hilltop instead of where He often isn't at — in church? — STILL SEARCHING, AGE 15

DEAR S.S.:

It's no sin to look for God wherever He's at — and a hilltop is one of the best places. You might ask Him to come and visit your church. — H.

Says Sea Won't Feed Enough

By PAT BALMES

There is no hope that we can feed the world's exploding population from the sea, according to Gerald Talbot, previous director of Tiburon's Marine Laboratory.

Representing the United States Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Talbot spoke at the United Presbyterian Women's luncheon meeting at Westminster Presbyterian Church in Tiburon yesterday on "Food from the Sea — Fact or Fiction?"

"People think all we have to do is farm the sea and science will solve everything. They postulate that the sea, three-fourths of the world's surface with its added dimension of depth, will produce enough to feed the world's population which is doubling every 35 years. But they are not clear about what is economically possible," says the scientist.

The world might be able to survive a doubling or two if its population is willing to eat herring, squid, octopus and minute crabs, Talbot said. By expanding fishing and eating this less desirable menu, people could increase seafood from three per cent to 12 per cent of the world's food supply. Presently these seafoods are used for fishmeal, oils and, in foreign countries, margarine.

"EVEN IF this increase were tenfold, it couldn't meet the demands of the projected population explosion," he says.

The latest available figures put the world's catch at 63 million metric tons in 1969, says Talbot. The maximum possible catch is guessed at by experts who measure the plankton nutrients in fishing area. They think fish presently in the sea could weigh 240 million metric tons. Half must be left in the sea yearly to reproduce, according to Talbot.

"Thus 120 million metric tons is the maximum future catch we could hope for, including the strange but nutritious sea life. But the small crustacea and fishes would be too small and scattered to be efficiently harvested, so 100 million metric tons yearly is a realistic projection. We are catching more than half of this now!" warns Talbot.

Fish farming, which has been practiced for a long time but never produced a large percentage of food, is economically impossible on a large scale. Because of the high cost of hand labor, only expensive foods like oysters, crabs and shrimp are raised. Fish farming can only be carried on in bays and estuaries along the continental shelf. These areas are in danger of pollution. Half of the possible 100 million metric tons may soon be poisoned. You can't fish farm in polluted areas, he explains.

"The bureau has been fighting to get restrictions against DDT," says Talbot. Pointing out that small fines for polluting don't bother big companies, he said that people must demand heavy enforcement of anti-pollution laws.

HE CITED the example of a Southern California company which was dumping 600 pounds of DDT daily into the Pacific in spite of a cease and desist order. They kept it up until they were brought into court, he said.

"It's terrible that things can go on this way; that somebody has to put the squeeze on a big company. Russia is having exactly the same pollution problems in the Black Sea. But the government is able to take effective steps much quicker, he said.

Pessimistic about increasing food production on land, Talbot said the United States has had very little food to give away during the last 10 years. Unless the Imperial Valley is washed of salt and alkalies a large part of it will be out of production in 10 years. Most fertile land on earth is already under cultivation, he said.

Irrigation projects like the Indus River dams and the Aswan dam have increased the land under cultivation, but the extra food produced by the dams could not feed all the children born in the areas while the dams were being built, according to Talbot.

"THIS POPULATION doubling is the fastest where food is the shortest. Something has got to give in the next 15 or 20 years or there is likely to be a famine. It seems inhuman not to feed starving children. But it seems more inhuman to feed 500,000 starving people in Pakistan whose children in 20 years will grow up and multiply to a million people that will starve!" says Talbot.

In 1958 Talbot was sent by the United Nations to help the Pakistanis increase their supply of fish by reconstructing fishways destroyed in the building of the dams. The fish use these ladders to ascend the dams to spawn. There 500,000 people were dying of starvation and another million suffering from malnutrition, he said.

To add essential amino acids to their inadequate diet of rice and wheat the United States built portable fish stores, small cold-storage units, where people could come to buy fish, he said. Strange to their taste, the people refused to eat the fish.

"We couldn't even give it away," Talbot finished.

County Help Urged For Open House

The Marin Mental Health Advisory Board last night proposed that staff members from the Community Mental Health Center be assigned to work full-time at Open House.

The board was thinking in terms of three staff members being assigned to the private drug addiction treatment center in San Rafael, according to the board secretary, Adelaid Green.

Board members felt that through Open House, some persons can be reached in an anti-drug abuse program who would not come to the "establishment," Mrs. Green said.

The board's proposal will be passed on to the Marin County Board of Supervisors and the Marin Hospital District board.

The board also recommended that the staff at the mental health center for inpatient and adult outpatient services be integrated to obtain greater flexibility.

Members also learned that no additional money will be available in state and county budgets for new mental health programs in the county.

Guilty Plea To Reduced Charge

Lawyer Due $1,300 For Magee Case

Sausalito Attorney A. Leonard Bjorklund Jr. will be paid $1,300 for his services in behalf of San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee.

Bjorklund, who was appointed to represent Magee, was relieved of the assignment at his own request Feb. 8, giving as his reason Magee's refusal to cooperate.

In a petition for payment, Bjorklund said he had worked 35 hours and 10 minutes on Magee's case between Dec. 28 and Jan. 28.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Superior Court, who ordered Bjorklund paid yesterday, said the $1,300 figure was based on the usual $35 or $40 hourly rate paid to court appointed attorneys.

In a statement attached to his petition, Bjorklund itemized the time spent interviewing Magee, reviewing the transcript of the grand jury indictment, in telephone conversations, court appearance and preparation of legal documents.

Magee is charged, along with Angela Y. Davis, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with an Aug. 7 escape attempt at the Marin Hall of Justice.

Cycle Stolen

By DAVID DIETZ

A group of Marin youth representatives and police juvenile officers split narrowly today over whether the names of young people accused of major crimes should be published in newspapers.

Under particular attack from critics was the policy of the Independent-Journal to publish the names of teen-agers under 18 who are said to have committed felonious acts such as burglary, robbery or car theft.

Generally endorsing the newspaper's policy today on Radio KTIM's "Sounding Board" program were Lt. Albert Howenstein of the San Anselmo police and Detective Michael M. Mannick of the Novato police. Critical were Charles E. Newman, Corte Madera juvenile officer, and Charles Smith, youth coordinator of the Marin County Youth Commission, and a commissioner, Laurie Packard.

The supporters said publication of the names of juveniles accused of major offenses brought about public awareness of social problems and aided in control of community behavior, while the detractors said young people were unduly shamed and alienated by the practice.

Mannick saw conflict in youth's clamor for more rights and responsibilities and its demand for protection from public exposure in the event of arrest.

While applauding youth demands for a bigger role in society, Mannick said, "With every right, however, there is a corresponding obligation, and with every freedom, there is a corresponding duty."

He said youths should "stand to face the consequences of their acts," adding: "The public has a right to know that perpetrators of felonious acts are not nondescript juveniles but are individuals — and individuals have names."

Howenstein felt newspapers should use discretion in publishing juvenile names, but Newman found no benefit at all in the practice. "It's neither a deterrent nor news," he said.

"Rehabilitation is the name of the game," Newman observed, "and that's what we work for." Noting that juvenile law did not regard offenses committed by juveniles as criminal acts but more in the context of civil offenses, he asked: "Then why are they treated that way (as crimes) in the newspapers?"

Smith said the youth commission has gone on record in opposition to the I-J policy. He said the practice is prejudicial because law prohibits publication of the outcome of juvenile hearings.

He called bringing attention to arrested juveniles a "puritan-ethic holdover" and likened such publicity to the 18th century practice of "putting people in stocks in the public square."

Miss Packard said the practice brings "condemnation by peers" and felt it caused youth to believe society is "more concerned with shaming them than helping them."

"The emphasis," she said, "should be on rehabilitation rather than on punishment."

One listener to the program who telephoned a question to the group remarked that the I-J's practice had brought mounting bitterness against the newspaper and another considered it "cheap publicity."

The program, moderated by Kitty Oppenheimer, may be heard on tape at 10:05 a.m. Sunday.

Another Sign Is Rejected

A sign for Tiburon vintners, 72 Main Street, has been denied by the Tiburon Board of Design Review because the building already has too many signs.

Planning director Wayne E. Moody said he told the board on Tuesday that the building already has a total of 59 square feet of signs where city ordinance allows only seven square feet.

Although the new sign would replace an existing one, Moody said board members did not want to encourage any new signs on the structure.

Dazzling Debut Casts A Spell

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

SAN FRANCISCO — Maestro Josef Krips, a master of the works of Mozart and Mahler, blended the two into a tranquilizing evening last night with a brilliant assist by soprano Elly Ameling in her debut with the San Francisco Symphony.

Miss Ameling, who scored a triumph at the Stanford Summer Festival in 1969, displayed her dazzling technique in Mozart's "Exsultate, Jubilate" K. 165, accompanied by a small chamber orchestra. Her voice, which spans two octaves, has a velvet quality in the lower register which is seldom heard on the Opera House stage. And wht is so amazing about her tonality is the ease in which she can transfer into crystal-clear high notes — in the range of a high C — with ever so little effort.

The work is of a jubilant nature, with the closing motet text consisting of the single world "alleluia" in which the guest displayed pure vocal agility.

Miss Ameling was also featured in the major work of the evening, Mahler's Symphony No. 4 in G Major. Again she displayed fine lyric quality. The "word" movement, which is the finale, is based on an old Bavarian folk song which lends a certain somber mark to a work that is predominately gay and light as compared with the solemnity found in both the Symphony No. 8 and 9.

Krips worked the ensemble extremely hard in the first three movements of the Mahler, obtaining some of finest sounds from a sometimes lax French horn section which has been noted for its weakness for several seasons. Especially rewarding were the small solo passages by concertmaster Stuart Canin, who alternated between two violins in the second and third movements.

The lighter Mahler was an excellent mark of programming and blended perfectly with the graceful characteristics of the evening's opener, Mozart's Symphony No. 35 in D Major, K. 385 (The Haffner).

Performed with limited personnel, Krips moulded a refined performance from the ensemble. It was especially evident in the finale — the presto — which begins rather slowly with nimble like sonority from the strings. However the melody quickens and the conclusion is a rousing one as compared with the Mahler which ends in the faintest trace of melody from the harp.

The program will be repeated again at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Opera House, the second of four subscription series under the baton of Krips.

Last Bach-To-Mozart Concert This Sunday

The third and final pair of Bach-to-Mozart concerts in the Homestead Valley Improvement Association's Candlelight Series will be presented Sunday at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley.

At 2:30 p.m. the program for children will feature introductions to the flute, oboe, bassoon, clarinet and French horn by the musicians playing those instruments and using appropriate music.

Composers represented will be Handel, Debussy, Tchaikovsky, Mendelssohn, Mozart, Dowland, Stravinsky and Carl Nielsen.

Musicians performing will be Walter Subke, flute; Raymond Duste, oboe; Donald Carroll, clarinet; Jeremy Merrill, French horn; and Robin Elliott, bassoon.

The program for the adult Candlelight Concert at 8 p.m. will include: Adagio and Rondo for Glass Harmonica, K. 617, Mozart; "The Nightingale," for soprano, flute, strings and continuo, Handel; Trio for Flute, Oboe and Harpsichord, Gordon Jacob; Serenade, Op. 10, Ernst Von Dohnanyi; and the aria "Zerstesse, Mein Herze, in Fluten Der Zaehren" from St. John's Passion' and Cantata No. 51, "Jauchzet Gott in Allen Landen", Bach.

Musicians performing will be Gwen Curatilo, soprano; soprano; Raymond Duste, oboe; Walter Subke, flute; Edward Haug, trumpet; George Nagata and Donna Salarpi, violins; Asbjorn Finess, viola; Teressa Adams, cello; and Donald Pippin, harpsichord.

The final Candlelight Concert will be a program presented by flutist Michael Debost and pianist Christian Ivaldi on March 28.

OUT OF JAIL AFTER 18 DAYS

Unshaven, but sporting jaunty smiles and leis presented by waiting families and friends, three San Francisco labor leaders leave Marin County Jail. Jack Goldberger (left), president of Periodical Drivers and Helpers Local 921, and Leon Olsen (center) and Donald Abrams, president and vice president of San Francisco Typographical Union 21, this morning completed their 18-day jail sentences for contempt of court in violating an injunction limiting picketing and forbidding violence by the unions in connection with the ITU strike against the Independent-Journal. The strike began Jan. 7, 1970. The union leaders announced they were to hold a press conference later today in San Francisco.

Teens Try Bank Job With A Bike

NEW MADISON, Ohio (UPI) —A 15-year-old girl who allegedly held up a bank with an empty pistol and her 17-year-old boyfriend who manned a getaway bicycle were being held today in the robbery of the Farmers State Bank.

Barbara Flusher and Darrell Noggle, both of Greenville, were held in the Darke County Jail in lieu of $5,000 bond on charges of armed robbery of a financial institution.

Police said Miss Flusher, wearing a ski mask, staged the robbery while Noggle waited outside Wednesday.

The girl allegedly ran from the bank with $5,000, but patrons of a nearby restaurant grabbed and disarmed her.

Restaurant owner Eugene Simpson said Noggle then arrived to rescue the girl armed with another gun. The youth agreed to surrender the gun if they would free her.

"We said we would," Simpson said, "and he gave us the gun.

"Boy, he was sure surprised. He thought we really would let her go."

They turned the pair over to police.

Burl Ives Granted Divorce From Wife

The couple had been separated for the past 15 years. Ives was ordered to pay $2,000 monthly alimony.

Mrs. Meir, Cabinet Confer On Newest Cairo Peace Plan

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli Premier Golda Meir conferred with her cabinet for two hours today on Egypt's reply to the peace initiative of United Nations envoy Gunnar V. Jarring. Political sources said Israel was under heavy U.S. pressure to follow Egypt's "positive" response.

Israeli officials declined to discuss details of the cabinet deliberations in Jerusalem today. The cabinet spokesman, Michael Arnon, said ministers heard a report from Foreign Minister Abba S. Eban. Asked to comment on the Jarring talks, Arnon said: "I don't answer questions on Jarring moves."

A one sentence official statement said Eban reported on the latest developments in Jarring's search for Middle East peace and that the discussion would continue at the next cabinet meeting Sunday.

Jarring was reported to have proposed that Israel withdraw its troops from Egypt's Sinai Peninsula bordering the Suez Canal and that an international peace-keeping force be posted at Sharm el Sheikh to safeguard Israeli shipping rights through the Strait of Tiran to the port of Eilat on the Gulf of Aqaba.

The Egyptian spokesman referred to alleged statements by Eban that Israel would not return to 1967 border lines without a peace agreementand by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan that he preferred "Sharm el Sheikh without peace to peace without Sharm el Sheikh."

The uncertainty which followed the Israeli cabinet meeting today indicated that ministers had not yet reached a decision on the Jarring proposals.

Israeli newspaper correspondents in dispatches today from Washington and New York said the Jarring initiatives had placed Israel in "a diplomatic bind" and put the Jewish state "on the defensive in the latest round of highpowered horse trading."

Diplomatic sources in Jerusalem said Israel was under pressure from the United States to be more flexible in its approach to the Jarring talks and adopt a more positive attitude.

PX Probe Reveals Mystery Man

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A former army investigator testified today that senior military officers thwarted his efforts to investigate reports of corruption in post exchanges in South Korea that later cropped up in Vietnam, involving the same promoter.

Augustin J. Manfredi, a retired Army chief warrant officer who was an investigator for the Army's Criminal Investigations Division (CID), told a Senate Investigations subcommittee the incident "was the most frustrating experience of my life."

He said he worked for two months on an investigation of business promoter William J. Crum in Korea in the late 1950s, but then was ordered to end his probe and submit a "whitewash" report.

"I have often asked myself just who was this man William Crum that he could command so much attention," Manfredi said." I have often wondered who was he to have so much influence and weight to throw around?"

Crum's name was mentioned prominently Wednesday as the subcommittee opened fresh hearings into alleged improprieties in the operation of PX's and similar facilities in Vietnam.

It was alleged in testimony by committee investigators that Crum had shifted his operations from Korea to Vietnam partially as a result of the CID investigation into his Korean activities.

Manfredi said Crum's operations in Korea involved smuggling, bribes, kickbacks, and gratuities to high-ranking military personnel and said that despite widespread knowledge of his activities, Crum was able to set up similar operations in Vietnam.

The Army's former highest ranking enlisted man and seven other persons have been indicted on charges of conspiring to defraud enlisted men's clubs in Vietnam through bribery and kickbacks.

A special federal grand jury returned the indictments Wednesday at Los Angeles against Sgt. Maj. William O. Wooldridge, who once held the title of sergeant major of the Army.

The favors, Senate investigators said, included a rent-free Saigon villa and heavy Chinese silks.

The 37-page Los Angeles indictment accused Wooldridge and his associates of conspiring to monopolize sales of thousands of dollars worth of foodstuffs, bar supplies, gifts and other items at inflated prices from a company some of them had formed. The company was identified as Marmed, Inc., incorporated at Fullerton, Calif.

SACRAMENTO ROUNDUP

Public Hearings Slated On Budget

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Ways and Means Committee plans to conduct 11 public hearings throughout most of California including one in Marin on April 2 on navigation and ocean development, on Governor Ronald Reagan's proposed $4 billion state budget.

"This time we give the people an opportunity to tell us what they think of how their money is being spent," Chairman Willie Brown Jr. said Wednesday in announcing the hearings.

The San Francisco Democrat criticized the usual state capitol budgetary hearing process as a "closed circuit production involving only legislators and an assortment of Sacramento bureaucrats."

Republicans have denounced the statewide hearings as a traveling "carnival" attempt to discredit Reagan's spending plan. Democrats contend they want to learn the budget's potential "impact" on local government revenues.

Brown announced that six subcommittees will start out-of-town hearings March 5 in San Francisco and wind up April 2 in Marin County. He said they will work Fridays and Saturdays.

The agenda includes these hearing topics, although specific locations will be announced later:

March 5-6, state employe salaries and teacher retirement and department of consumer affairs, San Francisco; Air Resources Board, San Fernando Valley.

March 12, public school aid, junior college construction, impact on property tax, Orange County; same topics March 13 in Fresno; California Council on Criminal Justice, San Diego.

CASELOADS

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The Reagan administration is uncooperative in providing welfare caseload figures and costs, a legislative budget adviser told lawmakers Wednesday.

Thomas Dooley, an assistant to Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post, said his office is "having great difficulty" understanding caseload information supplied by the State department of Social Welfare.

Post's office is a politically independent agency which acts as the legislature's watchdog over state fiscal matters and gives advice on complicated financial issues. More often than not, the legislative analyst is at odds with governors.

Dooley appeared at a meeting of the Assembly Welfare Committee called to examine the status of the long-simmering issue of whether California is in conformity with federal law governing aid to needy children. The case is pending in the state supreme court.

PESTICIDES

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The arsenal of chemicals farmers use to kill insect pests can actually aggravate the problem and cause an "increase in reproductive capacity" of the bugs, according to a University of California scientist.

Entomologist Carl B. Huffaker of Berkeley and other researchers at the UC-sponsored symposium on farm chemicals Wednesday said the substances keep growers on a "pesticide treadmill" by failing four ways in their jobs:

—They can help the bugs reproduce faster.

—They can bring on infestations of "previously innocuous or minor pests."

—The pests develop resistance to the chemicals.

Biologist Robert van den Bosch of UC Berkeley said that "extensive experimentation strongly indicates" that the problem of the bollworm and other pests "in San Joaquin Valley cotton is largely insecticide induced."

CLIMAX OF THE REGGIO CALABRIA REBELLION

A force of 15,000 Italian police moved into the rebellious Santa Caterina district of Reggio Calabria today to end a six-month series of riots and protests in which six men have died and hundreds injured. During the height of the protests yesterday, a cordon of policemen on top of a hill faced down an approaching group of rioters. The dissidents were protesting the naming of a rival town as the new capital of the region located at the toe of the Italian boot.

Burton Claims 'Lies' On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —Was Gov. Ronald Reagan "lying" when he said state law forced him to cut back Medi-Cal services to the poor?

Richard L. Camilli, deputy director of the State Department of Health Care Services, countered that Reagan told the truth when he said he was "mandated" by a 1968 Act to reduce health care services in December.

But Republican Assemblyman Gordon W. Duffy, the Act's author, said he wasn't so sure.

"I would have to review the Act in detail and I haven't had an opportunity," insisted the Hanford Republican, chairman of a committee which just completed an exhaustive study of Medi-Cal's fiscal problems.

The "liar" charge —an unusually strong one even for frequently warring politicians —came at a news conference Burton called to explain his bill restoring services cut by Reagan. The measure is set for Assembly floor debate Monday.

Burton, chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee, became upset when a newsman cited Reagan's frequent statement he trimmed the program as "mandated" by law to head off a projected $140 million deficit.

"He did it on his own hook," Burton shouted. "When the governor says he was mandated to do it he is a liar because I refuse to believe he is a fool."

When the Reagan administration announced the cuts in payments for "providers" — such as doctors —and in recipient services, it said it was acting under a statute which stated it "may" trim back if there is "reason to believe that the total cost of the program will exceed available funds."

Burton, a lawyer, contended that because the law read "may" instead of "shall" Reagan really didn't have to make the cuts.

At a news conference three weeks ago, Reagan said "these 'horrifying' cuts that I have made in Medi-Cal were mandated on me by the legislature... I have no choice in that matter."

Antiwar Initiative On Berkeley Ballot Denied

BERKELEY (UPI) —Both a superior court judge and Berkeley's city council have rejected demands by youthful demonstrators that an anti-war initiative be put on the ballot for the April 6 municipal election.

Councilmen, whose meeting was briefly interrupted by youthful shouting, voted 5-2 Wednesday night against putting to a vote a declaration that city policy calls for "peace and solidarity between the people of Berkeley and the people of Vietnam."

The measure also would require the city attorney to provide legal aid to Berkeley men who want to avoid military service.

Judge Lyle E. Cooke, earlier in the day, also turned down a plea for a write to put the declaration on the ballot, but he did hold back his order 48 hours in order to permit an appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Rick Brown, a candidate for city council, told councilmen they were "denying the right of the people to use a legal political process."

Overnight Family Visits Scheduled

Overnight visits by the families of San Quentin inmates will be allowed within several months, Associate Warden James W. L. Park announced yesterday.

Park said only minimum security prisoners will be eligible for the visits from wives, parents and children because the program will be housed in a low security area.

He said the prison guest house and an employee's residence with accommodations for a total of six to eight couples have been selected for the visits.

Other details, including the starting date, remain to be worked out, Park said.

He said Warden Louis J. Nelson decided to start the conjugal visits at the suggestion of Raymond Procunier, state director of corrections.

The director of the prison system had been impressed with the success of a pilot program at Tehachapi Prison near Bakersfield, Park said.

"I think you could say that the experience at Tehachapi Prison has had a significant effect in helping families work out their relationships problems," Park said.

Forty per cent of the visits at Tehachapi have been by parents, Park said.

Terra Linda Grad Wins Soroptimist Club Honor

Kathryn Kristensen of 61 Esmeyer Drive, Terra Linda, January graduate of Terra Linda High School, has won the Youth Citizenship Awards Program of the Soroptimist Club of Marin.

Second place went to Gordon Walker of 825 Las Gallinas, San Rafael, and third to Diane Glicksman, 123 Garden Avenue, San Rafael, both graduating in June from Terra Linda High.

Judging was based on candidates answers to essay questions concerning their responsibility to family, community and the work. Also judged were the students activities and service in school, church or community, their leadership, and their chosen field of interest that would indicate value to society.

Miss Kristensen's entry has been forwarded to the district chairman and with other club winners. The district winner will be awarded $75 and have the the opportunity to compete in the Southwestern regional contest for the $1,000 awar. The 17 regional winners are then eligible to compete for the Federation award of $1,500.

Tables, sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Southern Marin, will be located at the following supermarkets at the times indicated: tomorrow, Safeway (Bon Aire Shopping Center) 10 a.m. to noon; Saturday, Red Cart Market (Mill Valley) 10 a.m. to noon, Safeway (Strawberry) 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and Safeway (Tiburon) 2 to 4 p.m.

Monday, Safeway (Strawberry) 10 a.m. to noon; Feb. 20, Big G (Sausalito) 10 a.m. to noon, 1 to 3 p.m. and Feb. 23, Big Six (Sausalito) 5 to 7 p.m.

Voters also may register at most fire stations in the county, the league said.

Experimental Drama Feature

Montage, a program of experiemental of comedy and drama featuring audience participation and "unpredictable happenings" will be presented next Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley.

Members of the professional Theatre-Media Lab will present the improvisatory sketches every Wednesday, without charge. It requests the audience come early.

Maloney To State Panel On Ecology

Douglas J. Maloney, Marin County counsel, and Ignacio A. Vella, Sonoma County supervisor, have been named to a newly created committee to advise the state attorney general on environmental problems.

Att. Gen. Evelle J. Younger announced creation of the new committee earlier this week. He said its purpose will be to identify threats to the environment so that official action can be taken by his department.

"The Attorney General," he noted, "has certain common-law powers to enable him to do almost anything in the public interest."

Task force subcommittees will study air pollution, water pollution, land use and open space, pesticides and solid waste disposal, he said.

Initial membership of the task force also includes representatives of the Sierra Club, the Bay Area Pollution Control District, the Environmental Protection Agency, Regional Water Quality Control Board, Bay Conservation and Development Commission and Save San Francisco Bay Association.

Final Rubella Make-Up Clinic Slated Monday

A final rubella make-up clinic will be held at 920 Grand Avenue in San Rafael next Monday from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health office officer, said two separate vaccines will be available to accommodate all children from 1 through 11 years of age, including those who may be allergic to eggs, feathers, chicken or duck.

No fee will be charged at this rubella make-up clinic, but donations to the Marin Medical Society Rubella Fund will be accepted.

Beginning on March 1, Rubella immunizations will be a part of the health department's routine immunization clinics. They will be held each Monday, Tuesday, and Friday from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in Room 400 of the Marin Civic Center. At that time, $2 per family per visit will be charged to those who can pay.

Nixon Seeks Law On Rail Strike

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon has asked Congress to pass legislation that would allow him to head off a threatened nationwide rail strike March 1.

Nixon sent a report to Congress Wednesday asking for power to impose a contract settlement or allow only a limited strike or lockout.

Last Dec. 10 Congress passed a law barring a strike until March 1. Since that time three of the four unions involved in the dispute with the nation's railroads have agreed to new contracts, but a fourth, the 90,000-member United Transportation Union, has not signed.

Pantsuits Are Not Welcome In One Court

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Pantsuits are very much in vogue, acceptable at the White House and exclusive restaurants. But they are not welcome in the courtroom of Municipal Judge Wilbur G. Dettmar.

"Either you want to be a woman or you want to be a man," Dettmar told attorney Marguerite M. Buckley. "You can take your choice, but not in my courtroom."

Dettmar continued the case Wednesday and told Miss Buckley to go home and change clothes. He later resigned the case to another courtroom.

Bureaucracies Fatten; Teaching Staffs Shrink

Independent-Journal reporter Pat Angle, in her "I-J Reporter's Notebook" last Friday, noted that although Sausalito School District has a shrinking pupil population, it does not have a correspondingly shrinking administrative setup. She figured that administrative costs total $260 per pupil in the preliminary budget for next school year.

Although the Sausalito district is an extreme case, it is not untypical. School districts — like other bureaucracies — tend to expand administration, paper-shuffling, and other generally non-productive operations, out of proportion to expansion in the place where most of the work for which they are intended gets done. That place, in the school districts, is the classroom.

THE MARIN COUNTY superintendent of schools each year publishes a directory which lists, district-by-district, the employees in the county's public schools, from superintendents down through coordinators, principals, teachers, secretaries, janitors and bus drivers. A comparison of listings in the 1965 edition and this year's shows increased central office staffs to be the rule, while in many cases the number of classroom teachers has actually declined.

Sausalito had 14 in its central office in 1965, and has 28 this year — a 100 per cent increase. The number of teachers in its classrooms, however, declined from 39 in 1965 to 33 this year — a 15.4 per cent decrease, despite smaller class loads, because of declining attendance.

But it was not alone.

MILL VALLEY School District's central office personnel increased 88 per cent in the same period, from 18 to 34, while classroom teachers dropped 6.3 per cent, from 159 to 149.

Fairfax School District more than doubled its central office staff, from six to 15, while adding one teacher to bring the total to 40. The one-school Ross district increased the central office personnel from four to seven (75 per cent) while reducing classroom teachers from 29 to 27 (a 6.9 per cent drop). Tamalpais High School District's central staff grew 76 per cent, from 33 to 58, while the number of teachers increased only 3.1 per cent, from 318 to 328.

Unfortunately, two of the biggest districts — San Rafael and Novato — no longer furnish listings for the county directory.

Lagunitas and Larkspur districts have fewer teachers than five years ago, but more people in their central offices. The reverse is true in Reed and San Anselmo districts, where central office staffs have been cut while teachers were added.

CALLS FOR GREATER school financing customarily cite the need for smaller classes, better teacher-pupil ratios. But the figures indicate that the increased money tends to go elsewhere than to the classroom.

It is, of course, a corollary of "Parkinson's Law": The bureaucracy fattens upon itself.

One way to keep school costs down without impairing the quality of instruction would be to reverse this trend. School district trustees (many of whom will be new after the April 20 elections) and interested citizens might give this some attention as work on next year's school budgets proceeds.

'Reform' Of Seniority Difficult To Detect

By FRANX ELEAZER

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Well, they reformed the seniority system, didn't they? So let's take a look at the lineup of bright, young new faces among the committee chairmen of the 92nd Congress.

There is Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., newly elected chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. He is 80, and previously was chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

In the House, Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., succeeded to the office of armed services chairman. Hebert is 69.

Replacing Ellender as chairman of agriculture is Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., who is 57. Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn., new chairman of House public works, is 59.

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., 82, chairman of House judiciary for 20 years, has been elected for two years more. So has Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., 80, rules committee chairman in the two previous congresses.

REP. GEORGE MILLER, D-Calif., continues as chairman of the House space committee. Miller is 80. His Senate opposite number remains Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., who is 75.

Chairman of the House Banking Committee is Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., who is 77. Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., continues as chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, and is 71.

House government operations has a new chairman, Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., who is 67. Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., remains as chairman of Senate government operations, at age 74.

SO IT GOES. In fact, except where a predecessor died or wasn't re-elected to Congress, there are no new committee chairmen in Congress. And those who are new were selected in strict accord with the seniority system.

So what was the antiseniority noise all about?

It was about some minor reforms that later may prove significant. What they proved this time is that even given a choice, most members of Congress still favor selecting their legislative leaders on the basis of how long they have served.

FOR THE FIRST time, House Democrats and Republicans separately voted themselves the right to review and vote on all nominations as chairman (or in case of the Republicans, ranking minority member).

The Democrats then challenged one nomination, that of Rep. John L. McMillan, D-S.C., chairman of the District of Columbia Committee. They had a secret vote on McMillan. He won re-election to the post he has held for 22 years. The vote was 126 to 96. McMillan is 72.

(Senate Republicans did make a rule to allow only one ranking committee spot per member. That spreads the seniority system around, anyway. House Democrats imposed a similar limitation on subcommittee chairmanships, also bringing more members into the action.)

As for the House and Senate leadership teams, they never have been selected on the basis of seniority. But the House this year replaced retired Speaker John W. McCormack, who was 79, with Rep. Carl Albert, who is 62. On the other hand, Senate Democrats tossed out Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., as their whip, in favor of Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va. Kennedy is 38. Byrd is 53.

Of course some gains were made on the seniority front. Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., for instance, resigned at 73 as secretary of the Republican Conference, to make way for a younger man. Republicans promptly picked to replace him Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., who is only 70.

Pictures Don't Do 'Em Justice

I have been a Paul Peterzell Watcher since Sausalito Council days. He has become more handsome as the years go by and a real inspiration to a fatty like me because he not only took it off, he kept it off.

Sometimes I attend meetings in the city where his is the only other face from Marin. If I knew that Paul would cover the meeting I could stay home because he always does an excellent job of reporting what happened.

I like the old picture of Paul laughing because most of what he hears from the office seekers deserves to be laughed at and he knows it. This new picture is not as libelous as Mary Leydecker's — she is a beautiful girl but unless we knew that it would be hard to imagine from that picture.

I hope you keep Paul covering politics forever because that's where the action is.

Vietnamese Prove We're Not Needed

I was impressed to see the South Vietnamese Army in the invasion of Cambodia. They are even more impressive in their invasion of Laos. Imagine being able to carry out offensive actions of major size in two different countries simultaneously?

I believe the South Vietnamese Army has shown its complete military competence. Thus I can see no reason why it cannot defend its own homeland right now without the need for a single American soldier on its soil.

More About Dutch Role In Early U.S.

My old Frisian heart jumped for joy after reading your ("Editor's Notebook") article in the Jan. 30 issue. Whoever led you to that part of The Netherlands did a good deed and gave you the correct information. Most people skip that province because it's not on the usual schedule and apart from sailing on the lakes there is nothing to be seen which might interest the tourist except perhaps some very beautiful local costumes in a few towns. And the dike, of course.

It is also very extraordinary that you mentioned the house on the Keisersgracht in Amsterdam where John Adams lived — and this writer too.

Contrary to what you wrote ... Friesland IS a land of milk. The cows have udders of unbelievable size and the milk production is one of the highest. At least in my youth when I had to visit and stay with some 150 relatives there.

As to financing of the young U.S.A. which put the infant federal union on its feet: Hamilton borrowed from Holland $1,200,000 on Nov. 12, 1790, at 5 per cent; $1,000,000 on Feb. 15, 1791, at 5 per cent; $2,400,000 in September, 1791, at 5 per cent; $1,200,000 in December, 1791, at 4 per cent. I believe that the bank was Hope and Co. in Amsterdam.

Do you know that the first salute to the American flag by a foreign nation took place at the small island of St. Estatius when Fort Oranje there welcomed an American frigate (I think) on Nov. 16, 1776? This island is now a part of the Netherlands Antilles and issued a commemorative stamp of that fact on Nov. 16, 1961. Being a collector I have of course that stamp in my collection...

Architects' Fees Based On Complexity

Your editorial of Feb. 5 concerning professional fees for architectural services was extremely ill informed and consequently grossly unfair to the profession. As both an architect and a resident of Marin County, I would like to correct your errors of fact and offer some alternative ways of looking at the question of fees.

Architects do not uniformly charge an eight per cent fee or any other set percentage of the construction cost ... The reason that eight per cent is generally associated with public school construction is that this percentage is related to the complexity, services required and typical cost range for this type of project... The American Institute of Architects publishes standard agreements based upon a stipulated sum as well as the actual cost of services plus a fixed fee.

You have suggested as a method of saving costs to secure architectural services by competitive bidding with the project being awarded to the firm offering to accept the lowest fee. I wonder if you would wish to select your physician, dentist or lawyer on this basis...

Approximately a third of the architect's fees are paid by him for the services of structural, mechanical, electrical and civil engineers plus other special consultants which the project may require. If his fee increases as building costs rise so do his expenses. None of us are exempt from the problems of inflation and consequent soaring costs for all of the goods and services which we must purchase...

Learn Sacredness Of Human Life

You are to be commended for your editorial of Feb. 2, "Perhaps It's Time We Examined the Recipe". One of the worst aspects of the "sex education" programs you mentioned is that the groups which instigated them have consistently refused to realize or take responsibility for the inevitable effects, i.e., more abortions, more illegitimacy, a soaring VD rate. And there is more to come - a bill has been introduced in the Florida Legislature for euthanasia - so-called "mercy killing of the aged".

Our society is indeed in serious trouble if our children, the hope of the future, are not made to realize the sacredness of life; not just for miserably oil-soaked birds, or the vanishing whales or other endangered species, but the sacredness and dignity of HUMAN life and human relationships.

Words On Oil Spill Efforts Appreciated

On behalf of Standard Oil Co. of California, I am writing to express our sincere appreciation for the Independent-Journal's editorial of Jan. 28, which is certainly complimentary of our efforts to safeguard the public interest following our recent tanker collision and subsequent oil spill.

At a time when we had been under considerable public criticism and some adverse press reports, it is heartening to find such an expression which has something to say in our behalf.

New Promise For Russians Elusive As Predecessors

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

For the long-suffering Russia citizen the promise of more consumer goods is an oft-told tale.

From 1928 to the present the Soviet Union has had nine so-called five-year plans, all looking toward the same goals —development of industry and a solution to the agricultural problem, with most of them at least giving lip service to mounting demands for consumer goods.

Stalin instituted the first five-year plan. It was to develop industry and bring an end to NEP, the "new economic policy" set up by Lenin in 1921 to overcome economic paralysis and sabotage by the peasants.

Under the 1926 plan, Stalin began his war against the peasant. Millions were killed and others deported in a mass tragedy comparable to Hitler's later extermination of the Jews.

ONE FIVE-YEAR plan lasted only about two and a half years. Another ran seven. All were on a grand scale.

Nikita Khrushchev opened up the virgin lands to the east as a solution to the Soviet Union's agricultural problems, and reaped dust storms because he acted without regard for weather or soil conditions.

He also promised the long-suffering Russian consumer his living standard would equal the United States' by 1970.

At the end of March, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin is scheduled to place before the 24th party congress the new five-year plan for 1971-75 whose details now are being presented to the Russian people.

FOR THE FIRST time, light industry, that portion of industry devoted primarily to development of consumer goods, is given priority in the percentages.

The figures are misleading since heavy industry comprises 75 per cent of all Soviet industry and will continue to dominate the overall economy.

The goals seem relatively modest and attainable, but with exceptions that could lead to new disappointments.

The plan, which foresees a 44 to 48 per cent increase in production of consumer goods, is to reach its goals, according to the Soviet news agency Tass, through a "high pace" of development of production, the rising of its efficiency, scientific and technical progress and accelerated growth of labor productivity."

Reduced to simpler language, this means rapid growth of computer techniques in industry, increased efficiency in labor and management and success in such vital projects as development of new industry in western Siberia and completion of a new oil pipeline from western Siberian fields. Working against achievement are these:

—Reluctance of the Soviet military to share computer secrets with Russian industry, forcing the latter to depend upon outside and sometimes inferior soucrces.

—A fear inside management that the computer will do away with jobs.

The negative response of Russian workers to pleas for increased productivity when the shortage of consumer goods leaves them nothing to buy with their increased wages.

In 1970, these industries were among those falling short of production goals: electric, oil, gas, coal, steel, trucks, cars, tractors, television sets, refrigerators.

Dick And Spiro Have It Easy Compared To George And Abe

(John S. Knight in Detroit Free Press)

In one man's opinion, the shifting of George Washington's birthday and other memorable dates in history is for the birds.

However, the Washington-Lincoln birthday observance could be a source of some comfort to President Nixon and Vice President Agnew, our two leaders currently enduring the darts and arrows of their critics and adversaries.

By comparison with the vicious attacks upon our greatest presidents, Dick and Spiro have fared rather well.

PRESIDENT WASHINGTON was the prime target for Franklin Bache's Aurora, Callendar of the Richmond Examiner and Thomas Paine. To Bache, as recounted in James E. Pollard's "The Presidents and the Press," Washington was "treacherous, mischievous, inefficient and guilty of the farce of disinterestedness."

Bache further accused Washington of "stately journeying through the American continent in search of personal incense, of ostentatious professions of piety, of pusillanimous neglect, of little passions, ingratitude, want of merit, insignificance and spurious fame."

The New York Argus, Boston Chronicle, The Kentucky Herald and The Caroline Gazette were among the chief chorusers of complaint. The tenor of their feelings is found in this quotation: "If you could for a short time put off your suit of buckram and condescend to that state of humility in which you hear the real sentiments of your fellow citizens, you could save the wreack of character now crumbling to pieces."

Unlike Spiro Agnew, there is little in the record to indicate that Washington was anything but contemptuous of these attacks, which he preferred to ignore. Our first President did complain that his critics treated him "no better than a common pickpocket."

THE LINCOLN story is even more remarkable for the savagery of his enemies. Here is a sampling of the ridicule, insults and falsehoods to which President Lincoln was subjected by the press, pulpit and politicians as recounted by the American Legion magazine:

"The President has usurped the power of Congress. He has involved us in an unnecessary war. He has fumbled this war. It is a bloody and costly failure."

"Not a spark of genius has he; not an element for leadership. Not one particle of heroic enthusiasm."

The martyred Lincoln was called "Lincoln, the baboon, the imbecile, the wet rag, the Kentucky mule." Wendell Phillips described Lincoln as "a huckster in politics, a first-rate second-rate man." A Springfield neighbor said of Lincoln: "He is the craftiest and most dishonest man that ever disgraced an office in America."

LINCOLN'S personal appearance was the butt of their jibes and venom. Cartoons exaggerating his gangling, stoop-shouldered frame, long, wrinkled face, abnormally long limbs and tight, ill-fitting suits were common.

Following the now-famous Gettysburg Address, the Chicago Times observed: "We pass over the silly remarks of the President; for the credit of the nation, we are willing that the veil of oblivion shall be dropped over them."

Even Edwin Stanton, later to become Lincoln's secretary of war, once called him "the original gorilla, the Illinois ape and a low, cunning clown."

While Gen. George B. McClellan commanded the Army of the Potomac, he wrote his wife that Lincoln "is nothing more than a well-meaning buffoon."

Lincoln's last law partner, William H. Herndon, proceeded to note that the President's mother was illegitimate, which unfortunately was true, and that Lincoln himself was a bastard, which he was not.

NO OTHER president endured the abuse and slander which beset Abraham Lincoln. Today, we have laws of libel and slander to protect the innocent.

Yet, as the American Legion magazine has said: "Lincoln has long been beyond the power of detractors to do him harm. In 1962, a poll of 75 historians voted him the greatest of presidents. The next four in order were George Washington, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Thomas Jefferson."

Nixon Finally Buys The Plan: Wind Down War Via China

WASHINGTON — Whenever something new happens in the war in Indochina, I always seek out my dear friend Joseph Wallstop, the dean of the hawk columnists.

Late last fall as the war was winding down Joe had become more and more depressed, so I didn't know what mood I'd find him in. Happily, when I went down to his war room located in the basement of his house, I found him dancing a jig.

"JOE, I SAID, "you're your old self again."

"They've finally listened to me," Joe said gleefully. "I've wanted to invade Laos for four years."

"That's wonderful, Joe," I said. "It must be great to see a dream come true."

"I didn't think President Nixon had the guts," Joe said. "But, thank God, he has finally bought my plan. Hanoi will be on the ropes in a matter of weeks."

"I THOUGHT you told everyone Hanoi was on the ropes after the Tet offensive."

"They were on the ropes," Joe said. "But they didn't know it. I still maintain the Tet offensive was the biggest allied victory of the war."

"Bigger than the invasion of Cambodia?" I said.

"Cambodia was different. In Cambodia, I wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries that were supplying the Reds in South Vietnam."

"But if you wiped out all the Communist sanctuaries, why did you have to go into Laos?"

"Because, you idiot, Hanoi is hurting, so they're sending everything down the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Once I interdict the Ho Chi Minh Trail, I'll have the Commies on the ropes again."

"Unless they think of something else," I said.

"COME OVER HERE," Joe said. He took me over to a very large table which had a relief map of Southeast Asia on it. He had flags all over it: green for allied troops, red for Communist troops and blue for American aircraft. He even had a miniature Sixth Fleet which he could push around the table.

He put on his campaign hat and said: "This is what I want to do: I want to bomb everything in Cambodia and Laos. That may force Hanoi to send their stuff through Thailand."

"Why, it's the old interdiction ploy," I said.

"Exactly. This will give me an excuse to invade Thailand. Once I'm in Thailand, I'll give General Abrams time to shape up the South Vietmanese army so they can invade North Vietnam."

JOE MOVED the green flags across the DMZ.

"You mean you're going to invade North Vietnam?"

"What choice do I have?" Joe replied. "Once I clean out the sanctuaries in North Vietnam, Hanoi will be on the ropes."

"So they'll sue for peace?" I said excitedly.

"No, they won't," he said disgustedly. "They'll ask the Chinese to intervene."

"JOE," I SAID nervously. "You're moving the green flags up to the Chinese border. You're not thinking of sending the South Vietnamese into China?"

"Why not?" said Joe. "That's where all the supplies are coming from."

A red phone in the corner rang urgently and Joe picked it up. "Yes, Mr. President. You're doing fine. Just fine. Once you secure the Ho Chi Minh Trail, call me back and I'll tell you what to do next."

Board Approves Requests Of $1 Million In Grants

The Marin County Board of Education has authorized its staff to forward applications requesting more than $1 million in federal grants for development of three new programs.

According to C. Sidney Smith, coordinator of curriculum, the board approved the requests Tuesday.

The first asks for $542,000 over a five-year period for a model kindergarten class to be used for in-service training of teachers.

The second application, Smith said, asks for $486,000 for a three-year training program for school administrators. The program will concentrate on new budgeting systems expected to be mandatory by the state in several years.

The third application asks for $42,000 for development of a sequential curriculum for preschool deaf children. The program will be developed by teachers and will be administered by the Marin County Schools Office if approved.

The board also heard a report from Joseph Denhart, director of the preschool program, on programs at the Novato Children's Center, Head Start and preschool programs.

The board supported a resolution sponsored by the Tamalpais High School District Board asking the state to exclude Marin from next year's mandatory unification election.

Bill Is Aimed At Teacher Retirement

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill intended to hoist the state Teachers' Retirement System out of a potential $5.5 billion hole was proposed today by Assemblyman E. Richard Barnes, R-San Diego.

Barnes, chairman of the Retirement Committee, noted the measure is similar to an unsuccessful plan introduced last year.

He said it eventually would require teachers and local school districts to pay the entire cost of the pension system. But the proposal contained no method of financing the revision.

Barnes said he hoped the money would be provided through enactment of tax reform legislation or that it could be tied into the omnibus school finance bill adopted by the legislature each year.

Barnes said that if every eligible teacher now in the program should immediately request the benefits, the system would face a mammoth $5.5 billion deficit.

Currently, the state makes up the difference in the annual shortage from what teachers and school districts contribute and what the retirement system actually costs.

The program is in debt because the contributions of teachers and school districts fall far short of meeting the pensions paid out each year.

In 1970-71, the districts contributed an estimated $65 million raised through property taxation. The state made up the estimated deficit of $91 million.

Barnes said if the program is left unchanged, the state will pay $116.3 million for the system in 1971-73 and $634.8 million by 1989-90.

Barnes said teachers now pay into the program an average 7.4 per cent of their wages. The school districts contribute a maximum 3 per cent of the total payroll.

The new Barnes proposal would require both teachers and school districts to contribute 8 per cent.

The state would pay a flat $135 million annually for the next 30 years to cover teachers now retired. At the end of 30 years, the state payments would stop, based on the assumption that by that time few of the teachers now retired would still be alive.

Under the Barnes bill persons already retired would receive a cost of living adjustment retroactive to 1965—the last time such an increase was granted.

Proposed Outfall Levels Attacked By Sewer Panel

The Richardson Bay Sanitary District board has objected to proposed strict new discharge requirements contemplated by the San Francisco Bay Regional Water Quality Control Board.

Secretary Barbara Bartis reported the board on Tuesday asked the regional board for more time to comment on the porposed requirements. The regional board had requested Richardson Bay's comments by Feb. 25.

Directors also asked the Marin Municipal Water District to back Richardson Bay in its request to the regional board for more time. Mrs. Bartis said the water district is overseeing formation of an improvement district which would study ways to achieve the outfall levels sought by the regional board.

In other business, the board approved plans and specifications and called for bids on sewer main replacement along Belvedere Drive in Strawberry.

Lloyd's Files Suit Against Penn Central

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Lloyd's of London filed suit Tuesday against the Penn Central Railroad.

Lloyd's asked U.S. District Court here to rescind a $10 million insurance policy protecting officers of the Penn Central from suits holding them accountable for financial losses to the railroad caused by their wrongdoing.

Lloyd's claimed it was misled by statements made by David C. Bevan, one of 71 railroad officers and directors covered by the policy. Bevan was ousted as the $132,000-a-year finance chairman of the Penn Central about two weeks before the railroad filed for reorganization.

Thailand Steps Up Patrolling

By Toronto Telegram News Service

HONG KONG — With warfare spreading in the neighboring lands of Cambodia and Laos, the government of Thailand is stepping up its counter-insurgency campaigns.

This month, the first units of the 12,000-strong Thai troops serving in South Vietnam are due to return home. Some of the men will be moved to remote border provinces to help in the fight against Communist guerrillas.

About 1,600 of the guerrillas are roaming through northern Thailand, another 1,500 are concentrated in the northeast near the Laotian border, and there are at least 1,400 well-trained men in remote areas of the Malay peninsula near Thailand's border with Malaysia.

About 300 Burmese rebels, as well as 400 hard-core Thai guerrillas, are operating from mountain and village bases in five provinces bordering Burma.

Most of the Communists are engaged in harassing Thai troops and police, as well as in recruiting and propaganda activities.

The battles and ambushes between government forces and guerrilla units are never large-scale, but quite regularly soldiers, rebels and civilians are killed in different parts of the country.

The bolder guerrillas will raid remote villages, and hold propaganda meetings before government forces can reach the area.

Many villages have set up self-defence posts and protection units. Often, the poorly-armed villagers are no match against the tough guerrilla bands who attack with modern Chinese rifles and Soviet machine-guns.

Last month, the governor of Nakhon Phanom province on the border of Laos asked for the wholesale transfer of police in one Communist-infiltrated district. The Governor, Major-General Yonh Na Nakhon, admitted that the police had oppressed villagers and had stolen their livestock.

As North Vietnamese and Viet Cong units step up activities near Thailand's borders, more weapons are reaching the rebels.

Thai Interior Minister General Praphas Charusathien says that arms are smuggled into the country from Laos, and are then shipped in fishing boats to Communist guerrillas in southern Thailand.

Thailand already has sealed off its land border with Cambodia to prevent Communist infiltration. In the Thai-Malaysian border region, land and naval patrols are being intensified in an attempt to stem the arms smuggling.

The government is recruiting an additional 4,000 police, and most of them will be sent south to fight Communists as well as 500 Moselm guerrillas belonging to the National Liberation Front of the Pattani Republic, a small but fanatic group who want to secede from Thailand.

The insurgency in Thailand is a sickness the government is trying to cure by improving the social and economic conditions of the country's 33,000,000 people.

And although the government can never dismiss the possibility of Communist incursions from Laos and Cambodia, the situation in Thailand is by no means critical.

Thailand last year decided against any heavy involvement in the Cambodian conflict, and instead is concentrating on putting its own house in order. It will take time, for the Communists are well-entrenched in some of the more remote areas.

But Thailand is far wealthier than Vietnam, Cambodia or Laos. Its towns and cities are booming and growing. And as Communist rebels operate most successfully in an impoverished nation, the present insurgency can achieve little more than to give the military regime in Bangkok additional headaches.

Father of Nevada's Gaming Law Reflects

RENO, Nev. (UPI)—Nevada's glittering gambling industry celebrates its 40th anniversary this year, but the man who started it all lives quietly and almost forgotten on a remote ranch.

Phil Metschan Tobin, 69, was a freshman assemblyman in 1931 when he introduced the bill in the Nevada legislature to make gambling legal.

It not only turned out well for many individuals, it put the state treasury in the black. Tobin, however, never made a dime from a business that earned about $600 million last year.

Tobin faded from politics after two subsequent terms in the state Senate and has shown little interest in development of the legalized gambling business. In fact he has never seen the Las Vegas strip which accounts for more than half of the state's gross gambling receipts.

Tobin has been a rancher all his life, as attested to by his leathery face and rough hands. He works at the Paiute Meadows Ranch on the Nevada-Oregon border where there are no telephones or television. He goes into town —113 miles away in Winnemucca —only occasionally. During the winter, he visits relatives in Reno, California and Oregon.

Tobin recalled the events of 40 years ago as if it were yesterday.

"The damn state was broke. We were in the midst of the depression," he said.

When he came to the legislature, he had no intention of introducing a gambling bill. He said a colleague had such a bill but was "afraid to introduce it because of the reaction of his wife." Tobin agreed to do it.

"I had two other reasons. First, illegal gambling was prevalent. Everyone had a blanket and a deck of cards or dice and it was getting out of hand. Some of these tinhorn cops were collecting 50 bucks a month for allowing it.

"Secondly, the state needed revenue. This way we could pick up the money from the license fees for the games."

"I'll never forget one committee meeting. About 200 preachers and women, mostly from Reno, were crowded into the room. As I walked in one lady pointed me out and remarked to her companion, 'and he looks like such a nice young man.'"

"I guess they must have thought I was the devil."

The measure eventually passed the legislature and Gov. Fred Balzar signed it into law March 19, 1931. The same year, the legislature approved the then-liberal divorce law requiring six weeks residence for a decree. Together, they helped carry Nevada through the depression, but it wasn't until World War II, with the development of the Las Vegas Strip, that legal gambling really began to blossom.

Tobin had one chance to get into the business "but I was too busy hustlin' cows at the time," he said. He said legal gambling "doesn't hurt the moral climate a bit."

"At least kids can't gamble now," he added. "Hell's fire, before, as long as a youngster had a coin he could play the slot machines because they were not illegal and there was nothing the law could do. At the high school in Winnemucca, the boys used to make slugs to fit the slots."

Tobin himself doesn't gamble much. "You know you can't win," he said.

Playboy Prince In Haiti

By TORONTO TELEGRAM NEWS SERVICE

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The age of the playboy prince is not dead.

But now, as if in answer to this region's age-old obsession with exotic contrast, Jean-Claude Duvalier is being groomed to assume power.

Jean-Claude, a bulky 19-year-old who is known to his closest friends as "Baskethead," is the only son of Haiti's aging and ailing dictator, Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier.

Having survived at least two heart attacks and half-a-dozen uprisings, Papa Doc decided last November to put his governmental affairs — including the matter of succession — in order.

When Jean-Claude took his father's place at the annual Army Day parade to accept the salute and hand out medals, Duvalier's wretchedly poor and oppressed subjects began to get the drift of his thinking.

Then followed a declaration in the semi-official daily Le Nouveau Monde that "President Duvalier has chosen his son Jean-Claude to continue his work of reparation."

And within days, government officials had begun feverishly amending parts of the 1964 Duvalierist constitution to lower the minimum age for a president from 40 to 20.

A compliant National Assembly last month unanimously approved this amendment and, for good measure, decreed that Jean-Claude is really 21, not 19.

Even as such irritating legal trivia were being ironed out, the moon-faced, 200-pound Jean-Claude appeared to be in rehearsal.

The young man no longer moves around freely. Even when attending the law school in which he was hastily enrolled last October, he is flanked by units of the heavily-armed and deadly Ton Ton Macoutes, the secret police.

He already has taken official inspection trips to government projects and has received the military honors reserved for the chief of state.

Up to late 1970, his main interests had been his six late-model cars and his girls.

Jean-Claude's rule, when it comes, stands to perpetuate the ruthless suppression which has characterized Papa Doc's 13-year rule over the three million inhabitants of the world's oldest black republic.

The lad is a lot like Ramfis Trujillo, the late son of the late dictator of the Dominican Republic, Raphael Trujillo.

Trujillo made Ramfis a full colonel at age nine, but as the boy ripened he became more interested — like Jean-Claude —in his movie-star sweethearts, his yachts, cars and planes.

Ramfis personally directed the investigation, the torture and the killing of almost all those implicated in his father's assassination.

Jean-Claude, local legend has it, used a palace officer as a target during pistol practice when he was 13 and shot him fatally.

Assuming it does occur, Jean-Claude's accession to the presidency could also prove to be a short-lived, final fling in the chronicles of playboy princes.

The situation in Haiti after Papa Doc Duvalier will be far messier and events could move far more swiftly than in the Dominican Republic which, after Trojillo, had to be cleaned up by an invasion force of U.S. marines.

A behind-the-scene power struggle is already in progress.

Papa Doc's ambitious daughter, Marie-Denise, wants her husband, former Lieutenant-Colonel Max Dominique, named as successor. Duvalier first exiled Marie-Denise in 1967, then shot 19 army officer friends of Dominique's when he thought they were plotting to overthrow him.

The Dominiques returned to Haiti from Paris late last December.

Palace security chief Luckner Cambronne — who controls the 600-strong palace guard, some 500 other elite troops, and the Ton Ton Macoutes — is another potential rival. He's been waiting in the wings as Duvalier's "most loyal and trusted servant" for years.

So has former Finance Minister Clovis Desinor, who was abruptly dismissed from his post last October when Duvalier learned that Washington would like to see Desinor take over the reins of government.

Although he appears to have little support within the military establishment, Desinor is still a free man and one of the few in Haiti with good links to the U.S.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Heart Attack Risk Factors: Smoking, Tension, Cholesterol

For 10 years cardiac researchers have worked hard to determine what predisposed a person to a heart attack. They knew the cause was hardening of the coronary arteries, but why did the walls of these vessels thicken and interfere with circulation to the heart muscle? This question never has been answered to the satisfaction of all concerned.

CARDIOLOGISTS did find out that most people who had a heart attack often smoked heavily, had high blood pressure, or too much cholesterol or other lipids (fats) in the blood serum. In fact, these three factors occurred so often (alone or in combination) that they were labeled major risk factors. Since the offenders can be modified, avoided, or corrected, there was a possibility that atherosclerosis could be delayed or even prevented.

Progress has been made, in that the results of studies in centers here and elsewhere covering thousands of people showed that, in general, the outcome is better among those who correct or eradicate the heart attack risk factors.

THE RESEARCHERS were also able to associate other risk factors with the hardening process. Heredity entered the picture and some people had a long family history of heart attacks, often before age 50. These people cannot get a new set of grandparents but forewarned is forearmed. Obesity is a trait known to encourage heart trouble. Many fatties develop hypertension and elevated cholesterol levels. These factors and not the excess weight may be responsible.

For years diabetes has been recognized as a risk factor in premature hardening of the arteries. However, the condition can be controled with diet, insulin, and the avoidance of obesity. Sedentary living seems to increase the risk of a heart attack although the evidence is not convincing. Exercise, of course, has proved beneficial in improving the circulation.

Tension resulting from emotional crises, personal life situations, and unusual fatigue may also precipitate heart attacks, especially when the individual has arteriosclerosis.

PHONEMIC DEAFNESS

S. N. writes: I have a hearing aid and can hear TV, movies, and the stereo, but don't understand the words. My doctor says my hearing nerves are dead. Can anything be done for me?

REPLY

If your hearing nerve is dead, learning to read lips will help. In a condition called phonemic regression, words are heard, but not understood. It is considered an aging process.

HER ARM ACHES

Mrs. G. writes: When I do anything with my right arm, it aches from the armpit to the hand. What could be causing this pain?

REPLY

Neuritis, arthritis, bursitis or poor circulation should be considered first.

CANCER OF THE BLOOD

B. H. writes: What are the symptoms of cancer of the blood?

REPLY

If you refer to leukemia, the symptoms are pallor, weakness, fever, bleeding tendencies, and enlargement of the glands of the neck, armpits and groin.

SHRINKS WITH AGE

R. C. P. writes: Does everyone shrink with age?

REPLY

Yes, provided they live long enough.

Thai Village Is Terrorized; Four Are Slain

BANGKOK (UPI)--About 25 armed and masked men Tuesday terrorized a village of 50 families, shot and killed four people and kidnaped three others, according to reports reaching here today.

The raid on the Klong Prakot village in north Thailand also resulted in the theft of $10,000 worth of valuables, police said.

Piecing together the story, authorities said the raiders surrounded the village and opened fire, some with M16 rifles.

Four people were cut down by gunfire as the villagers scattered in all directions, police said. The gunmen ransacked every house in the village.

Sheet Of Ice Destroys Barn

BENJAMIN, Utah (UPI)—Oldtimers brag about winters so severe that gale winds emptied lakes by blowing away the ice cover.

To sheep farmer Glen Ludlow, that's mild. His barn, situated about 100 yards uphill from Utah Lake, was leveled by a sheet of lake ice 9 inches thick and 400 feet long pushed from the shoreline by winds up to 50 miles per hour.

The ice crunched through the side of the barn early Wednesday and piled up inside to a depth of 12 feet. Ludlow estimated damage at $15,000.

Sub Is Sighted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon says a Soviet nuclear submarine has been sighted in Cuban waters, and a Soviet guided missile carrier is operating off the west coast of Florida.

Some Money Found Near Golf Course

Attention, whoever lost several thousand dollars in the hills above Mill Valley's golf course — the Mill Valley police department is anxious to talk to you.

The girl, whom Sisk declined to identify, passed part of the money around to friends at the school but surrendered what was left of it to police after school employees told them of the incident.

Sisk said about $1,600 of the cash has been recovered and "we know where the rest of it is" — among friends of the girl.

Probe Explodes After Launch

VANDENBERG AFB, Calif. (UPI)—A Thor-Agena booster combination missile carrying a classified satellite exploded in a ball of flames Wednesday about 40 seconds after launch from this military aerospace center.

The Air Force said there were no injuries. The debris from the 70-foot long missile landed about a quarter mile from the launch site in an uninhabited area.

The missile was launched by an Air Force-industry team and a military spokesman would only say the "purpose of flight was to place a satellite in orbit."

Commercial Catches On As Hit Song

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A ballad written as a ditty for a television commercial for a bank is supplanting "Oh Promise Me" at weddings.

Paul Williams, 30, the lyricist for "We've Only Just Begun," said he received more than 50 requests to use the song at nuptials before sheet music for it even was published.

Several hundred high school and colleges have asked permission to use the words as the theme for their yearbooks.

Williams and his partner, Roger Nichols, wrote the song more than a year ago when an advertising agency, Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborne, needed music for a commercial for Crocker-Citizens National Bank.

"It's really a tasty commercial," Williams said. "It has been winning a lot of awards. It's low-key, a soft-sell. You have to see it several times before you realize it has anything to do with a bank."

The commercial features a short film of a wedding, with the first two verses of "We've Only Just Begun" played in the background. As the newlyweds leave on their honeymoon, the words, "You've got a long way to go. We'd like to help you get there," flash across the screen, and then the name of the bank.

"We wrote the third verse for their second commercial," Williams said. "That one shows a man leaving for his first day on a new job and his wife seeing him off. We wrote a bridge between the verses and had the song.

"Mark Lindsay recorded it on an album, then the Carpenters came out with the single, which has sold about two million copies so far."

"I was an actor," he said, "but I don't know if I gave up acting or it gave me up."

He was filming "The Chase" with Marlon Brando when he began fiddling with the guitar of a fellow cast member, and wrote his first song.

He has had hits with "Out in the Country" sung by Three Dog Night, "The Drifter" by Steve Lawrence, and "Someday Man" by the Monkees. "We've Only Just Begun" has been recorded by Dionne Warwick, Lawrence Welk, Glen Campbell, Jerry Vale and Claudine Longet, among others.

"Before this song my publishers called me a writer of standards that never were hits," Williams said.

He believes "We've Only Just Begun" will become a classic "because it says something meaningful to people, regardless of time."

"I try to write about the positive side of life. God knows there's enough negativism," William said.

"I'm a rank sentimentalist and I like my songs to have a message, but I believe a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down.

"I like to think of myself as the old Tin Pan Alley type, with a cigar in my mouth," he laughed.

Proposed Law Would Ban Sale, Use Of Pesticides

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill prohibiting the sale or use of DDT and other "hard" pesticides in California and levying a fine of up to $6,000 per day on manufacturers was introduced yesterday by Assemblyman Leo Ryan, D-Burlingame.

The state Department of Agriculture, by regulation, already has banned the use of DDT in homes, gardens and on most crops except where there is no suitable substitute. Tomatoes are probably the crop still most extensively sprayed with DDT.

The department has not prohibited the use of other "hard" pesticides, known as chlorinated hydrocarbons.

However, before a farmer may use a chlorinated hydrocarbon on his crops he must have the permission of the county agricultural commissioner.

Ryan's bill would ban the use of all chlorinated hydrocarbons in California unless there was no other adequate substitute available.

His bill would make use of the pesticides by farmers and others a misdemeanor. Manufacturers who sell the "hard" pesticides in California would be subject to a $6,000-per-day fine. Manufacturers also could be fined if the pesticide leaked or spilled into state waters, land or the air.

"A great deal of damage has already been done by the persistent nature of DDT and other hard pesticides, but if we can put a stop to its use anywhere in the state now we might be able to eventually reverse the destructive process set into action before we knew how dangerous these chemicals could be," said Ryan.

Edward Robinson Jr. To End Marriage

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Actor Edward G. Robinson Jr., 37, filed suit in superior court Wednesday to end his two month marriage to Nan Morris Robinson.

Robinson, son of the screen star, claimed irreconcilable differences. The couple was married Dec. 7 in Tijuana, Mexico. It was his third marriage and her first.

No Grizzlies

DENVER (UPI)—The Colorado House of Representatives Wednesday tentatively approved a bill to ban the hunting of grizzly bears—even though, as far as anyone knows, there aren't any grizzlies left in the state.

Work On Boulevard Is Sought

The Lynwood Park Improvement Association is going to request the City of Novato to undertake maintenance and repair work on South Novato Boulevard, the main traffic arterial in South Novato.

Association members agreed Tuesday night that work is needed on the heavily traveled road, reported Gloria Burnett, secretary.

They also agreed to seek changes in the road system in the Lynwood area to reduce traffic and hazards, she said.

The association proposed a cul de sac for the east end of Sunset Parkway and a cul de sac on Leafwood Drive on the north side of Sunset Parkway.

Mrs. Burnett explained that Leafwood Drive now extends across Sunset Parkway, and residents feel it should not serve as a through roadway.

Also proposed was a cul de sac at the south end of Leafwood Drive, south of Sunset Parkway.

Increased Threat Of Palestinian Air Hijacks Seen

ZURICH (UPI)—Swiss federal authorities have warned police and airline officials in Zurich, Bern, Basle and Geneva of increased danger of aircraft hijackings by Palestinian guerrillas.

The warning, based on information from the French embassy in Amman, said the threat comes from George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), which could try to restore its weakened ranks and influence by dramatic hijackings like those it carried out last September.

The Amman embassy said the worldwide outcry against the hijackings last fall has led the other Palestinian organizations to apply pressure on the PFLP to cease the tactic.

Pot Charge Is Reduced

A hearing on defense motions was set for March 9.

By MARY LEYDECKER

A change in state law that would permit the public defender's office to collect small fees from indigents is being supported by Marin County supervisors although the man serving as public defender is doubtful about such a measure.

Acting Public Defender Harold J. Truett said yesterday that forcing defendants to pay even a small part of their defense costs might cause some to "Abandon their right to counsel."

"I can hear some of them saying to the judge, 'You forced me to have an attorney. Now you're forcing me to pay for it;'" Truett said.

He also speculated that the cost of determining how much individuals should pay and collecting it might amount to more than the money that would be taken in.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney, however, disagreed with Truett. Maloney, who has drafted a bill which Marin supervisors hope will be introduced in the state Legislature, said that such a system is now used effectively in juvenile court.

County supervisors, concerned about the rising cost of the public defender's office — which this year has a budget of $233,044 — have urged that persons who can pay some of the cost be forced to do so.

Truett said that his office has no fixed guidelines for determining which persons are entitled to free legal defense by his staff of nine attorneys.

"We get guidelines from the local bar association," he explained. "We are told that at present a person charged with a felony must have $300 just to get started with the case with a private attorney.

A misdemeanor charge would mean a retainer of $150," he added.

These costs, he said, would be only for preliminary stages of a case and would not cover the cost of a trial.

If Truett's staff determines that an individual cannot afford a private attorney, he is declared eligible for the public defender. "If a person owns real estate, we automatically decide he can raise money to pay an attorney," he said.

"We look at each case individually," Truett continued. "One man earning $100 a week whose wife works and who has no children would not be eligible for our services," he said. "While another earning the same amount with a wife at home with five children, might be considered eligible."

Those who urge that fees ranging from $5 to $25 be charged persons who could afford to pay small amounts say that even these amounts would help offset the cost of the public defender's office.

They say that those termed "indigents" by the courts because they can't afford private attorneys can often afford some part of their defense costs.

Truett is doubtful, however, saying, "Some of these people work one month and not the next. Collecting would be difficult."

Furthermore he foresees that taking up valuable time of judges in fixing charges might cost a lot more money than would be collected.

Not so, said Maloney.

"In juvenile court, the county revenue officer makes the decision of how much parents should pay for the services of the public defender for their children. If there is any dispute, the judge makes the final decision," he explained.

Maloney and County Administrator Alan Bruce are also eyeing a possibility for cutting costs for private attorneys that are court-appointed to represent indigents.

This practice comes about because in many cases which involve more than one defendant, "a conflict of interest" between the defendants is declared, and each must, under the law, have his own attorney.

During the current fiscal year, $60,000 has been appropriated for appointed attorneys in marin courts.

Bruce and Maloney's plan, also envisioned by officials in other counties, is for public defenders in Bay Area counties to switch around so that the appointment of outside attorneys may be avoided as much as possible.

Bill To Revamp Road Fund Plan

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill revamping the system for distributing state transportation funds and making available $25 million for local projects was introduced Tuesday by Assemblyman John F. Foran, D-San Francisco.

Foran said his bill abolishes the 11 separate funds currently used for the state's transportation expenses and revenues. Instead, only one fund would be used.

An immediate result of the plan, he said, would be to free a one-time $25 million cash payment to local government and $7 million for state road construction.

Youth Held In Burglary Probe

A 15-year-old Larkspur youth has been cited to juvenile authorities on suspicion of burglarizing Madera Foods in Corte Madera.

Officers said Ross Malcom Yates of 374 Wilson Way, Larkspur, was cited after he was found Friday hiding in the market's stockroom. Two other youths suspected of entering the store at 508 Tamalpais Drive escaped on foot, officers said.

Six bottles of wine and an undetermined amount of other goods were reported missing after the 8:23 p.m. incident.

Yates was booked into Marin Juvenile Hall.

AN OPEN LETTER to Mr. Bob Hope, c/o Palm Springs, California:

Dear Bobby Bird:

First, I would like to congratulate you for the tremendous success of your annual Bob Hope Golf Tournament staged in Palm Springs last weekend.

As I have been No. 1 fan of Arnold Palmer for years, his victory thrilled me to pieces. Charge!

Yet, there were two other highlights which I thoroughly enjoyed over the television.

Of course, your post-tourney performance was a classic. I refer to the interview you had with those three girls. I thought I'd die when you asked the first girl her age and when she replied "21," you said something like, "Heck, I have balls older than that . . . (long pause) . . . er, golf balls, that is."

That was really cute, Bobby Bird.

Then there was Vice-President Spiro Agnew's unforgettable tee shots. I mean the ones where on two shots he hit three spectators with what we golf fans call "shanks."

It just came to me, Bobby Bird, that in light of the Veep's Shank Shots, why don't you change the name of your theme song to "Shanks For The Memories." I think Spiral would appreciate it.

And in closing, Bobby Bird, the fact that you are such a good friend of Mr. Agnew's, may I suggest that you use your influence on a brainstorm of mine.

I mean, this plan I have to end the war in Southeast Asia. Why don't you send Mr. Agnew to the Saigon Golf and Country Club with a bag full of golf clubs. By the 15th hole, the way he plays, he'd wipe the hell out of the Viet Cong.

Well, it was only a thought.

Again, Mr. Hope, my thanks to you for presenting such an exciting tournament.

Sincerely,
Shamus "Shanks" Gilmartin

THE MEADOW CLUB can expect its beautiful golf links to be even more immaculately manicured in the near future.

The private Fairfax club's golf superintendent, Donald J. Baker, has attended the 42nd International Turfgrass Conference in Denver, Colo.

From what I'm told, this conference arms superintendents with new knowledge and techniques to help them provide the ever-growing golf world with the finest golf turf. Highlighting the program were 35 outstanding speakers who included some of the top agronomists, research scientists and golf course supes in the world.

I just had to use that sentence because I like to impress you with fancy words like agronomists. That's why every time I go to the races I go directly to the turf club with all those rich agronomists.)

CLOB JOB — Charlie Flynn (14) of Marin is getting clobbered by Wayne Kemp of Contra Costa in this first half action of last night's game, although no foul was ruled on the play. No. 42 is Floyd Allen of Contra Costa and No. 24 for Marin is Joe Smith. Marin won, 83-79.

Marin Wins Thriller In Final Seconds

By DAVID EINSTEIN

Charlie Flynn, who lifts the fortunes of College of Marin's Tars just by being in the lineup, stole the ball and then the show with 24 seconds left last night to give the Tars an 83-79, Camino Norte Conference basketball victory over Contra Costa Junior College in Kentfield.

The largest crowd of the season, nearly 1,000, was cautious, confident, frightened and finally exalted as the Tars beat the Comets of San Pablo for the first time ever in a CNC game. Both teams are now 8-3 in conference play, tied for second place behind De Anza of Cupertino.

Marin, which lost to Contra Costa, 91-62 in their only other meeting this year, blew a 16-point halftime lead and was trailing by one when Flynn took all the pressure on his own shoulders. Fouled before he could score a layup following his clutch steal, which interrupted a stall Contra Costa thought would end the game, the former Redwood High School star made the first free throw in a one-and-one situation, to tie the score at 79 apiece.

He missed the second shot, but Ed Herrnberger, himself a first rate hero of the night, corraled the rebound, and shoveled the ball back to Flynn. Again he was fouled. This time he missed the first of a one-and-one set, but gained a reprieve when the Comets committed a lane violation. Charlie crossed himself, and sank the next two shots, the winning points. Herrnberger, who led all scorers with 23 points, subsequently sank two more charity shots with 10 seconds left for insurance.

The story of the game prior to the final magical seconds could be translated into the time Flynn spent in the lineup. When he came off the bench midway through the first half, the lead had changed hands a half dozen times, and the score stood even at 24 all.

Obviously infected with Flynn's spirit, the Tars proceeded to belt the Comets senseless for the next nine minutes. Center Roosevelt Green, thwarted completely by Contra Costa pivot man Floyd Allen last month in San Pablo, handled his adversary easily and boomed in 12 points before the intermission. And guard Joe Smith, also looking to erase the memory of a poor performance

Boston Crushes Sagging Warriors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) --It could be the San Francisco Warriors are trying to get all the bad games out of their systems before the NBA playoffs.

But coach Al Attles fears if they continue to play like they have in the last two games, the playoffs also may be out of reach.

Coming off a 45-point loss to Seattle, the Warriors ran into hot-shooting Boston at the Oakland Coliseum-Arena Wednesday night and played dead to the tune of 129-99. At one point, the Celtics held a commanding 44-point lead at 113-69 with 7:19 remaining.

The loss left San Francisco at 34-32 with a 4 1-2 game bulge over third place Seattle in the NBA's Pacific Division. Only the first two teams in each division make the playoffs.

Boston outscored the Warriors 70-35 in the second and third periods while firing a sizzling 57 per cent from the field. San Francisco, meanwhile, managed only 11 baskets and a 23 per cent accuracy over that span, including a measly 14 points in the third quarter.

Dave Cowens, Boston's 6-9 rookie center from Florida State, outplayed Warrior center Nate Thurmond by scoring 20 points and pulling down 14 rebounds. Thurmond managed only 15 points.

John Havlicek bucketed 28 points and Jo Jo White added 24 to lead the Celtics. Guard Jeff Mullins' 19 points topped the Warriors.

One bright spot for the Warriors was the shooting of rookie guard Levi Fontaine. He scored all of his 16 points in the final 8:08 of play.

San Francisco will try to snap out of its slump against the San Diego Rockets at the Cow Palace Friday night. On Saturday, The Milwaukee Bucks, only NBA team the Warriors have failed to beat this season, make their final appearance of the season in the Bay Area, also at the Cow Palace.

Mrs. Laver Not Missing Any More Matches

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mary Laver figures she literally can't afford to miss any of her husband's matches in the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic.

Mrs. Laver, the wife of tennis star Rod Laver, watched her husband win nine straight matches at $10,000 in the Classic from Jan. 2 to Feb. 6—but then decided to take a skiing vacation in Aspen, Colo., when Laver played in the Philadelphia International Classic.

She now plans to go to New Haven, Conn., Friday night to see Laver's match against Roy Emerson. She likes to cash those $10,000 checks.

All Teams Get Fat On Seals

Latest to take advantage of the lackadaisical play of the Californians is the Minnesota North Stars who hung a 3-2 loss on the Seals Wednesday night before 13,473 at the Metropolitan Sports Center.

Last year, the North Stars were unable to beat the Seals at the Sports Center in nearby Bloomington. But this season Minnesota has won all three games there with the Seals and sports a 1-4 mark against the westerners with one game remaining in Oakland.

Despite losing all four games on the recent road trip, the Seals will return home to their first complete sellout of the season Friday night. That's when Bobby Orr, Phil Esposito, John Bucyk and all the rest of those high-flying Boston Bruins come to town. Chris Worthy played the entire game in goal for the Seals and kicked away 31 Minnesota shots. But three got by him and that was enough.

The line of Bill Goldsworthy-Danny Grant-Jude Drouin got the scores off Worthy who was starting only his third game of the season. Two of the goals were by Goldsworthy.

California enjoyed a 1-0 lead at the end of the first period on Ernie Hicke's 18th lamplighter of the season. Then after the North Stars scored three goals, Teddy Hampson notched his 10th of the campaign with 3:06 remaining on feeds from Doug Roberts and Gerry Ehman.

The Seals have lost 28 of the 33 games they've played on the road so far this season. If it's any consolation, 14 of their remaining 20 games will be at home where they enjoy a 13-11-1 record.

'Slow Recovery'

A RAIDER WITH PROBLEMS

Wells Is Sentenced To 60 Days

OAKLAND (UPI) —Warren Wells, the brilliant outside receiver of the Oakland Raiders, will go to jail for 60 days in order to undergo a battery of psychological tests.

Superior Court Judge Leonard Dieden Wednesday ordered Wells to jail after he pleaded no contest to a Nov. 14 hit-run charge.

Wells, 28, was put on probation last year after he pleaded guilty to the attempted rape of a 32-year-old woman. His probation required that he not drink and avoid places where liquor is served.

Highway Patrolmen testified that Wells failed sobriety tests after two traffic arrests last month and Oakland police officer Wayne McPhee testified that Wells was under the influence of alcohol when arrested on the hit-run charge.

The case will again come before the superior court April 19 and the decision then will be made as to Wells' future, based partly on the findings during the next 60 days.

Judge Dieden rejected a defense request that Wells be sent to the Langley Porter Clinic in San Francisco for psychiatric treatment and instead ordered him to the Santa Rita rehabilitation center east of Oakland.

Testifying at the hearing was Dr. James D. Jones, professor of psychology at Texas Southern and dean of students at the school when Wells was there. Dr. Jones said that Wells has an extremely low tolerance for alcohol and that he has serious psychiatric and emotional problems.

Wells is the main support for his family in Houston, Dr. Jones said, and is not strong enough to make the necessary decisions.

On Monday, Wells paid $125 for the hit-run charge and he also is out on $1,000 bail from Jefferson County in Texas, where he was arrested on a high-grade misdemeanor charge when a rifle was found lying on the floor of his car.

WILL ABIDE BY DECISION

Haywood Watches From Sidelines

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)— Owner Sam Schulman of the Seattle Supersonics claimed today a court ruling benching star forward Spencer Haywood was a partial victory for the club.

"It was far more favorable than appears on the surface," said Schulman in a telephone interview from New York City where he was preparing for today's meeting of team owners in the National Basketball Association.

"We expected a worse decision. What the court apparently is telling us is to settle our own differences or settle them in court."

The 6-foot-9 Haywood, acquired Dec. 30 by Seattle from the Denver Rockets of the rival American Basketball Association, did not suit up for Wednesday night's game against Portland and probably won't see any more action the rest of the season.

A panel of three federal judges in San Francisco Tuesday dissolved an injunction that had prevented other NBA teams from interfering with Haywood while he played with the Sonics.

Schulman said the most important decision in the case could come Monday from U.S. District Judge Warren Ferguson in Los Angeles.

The federal judge will consider a summary judgment regarding whether the league's four-year clause applies to Haywood.

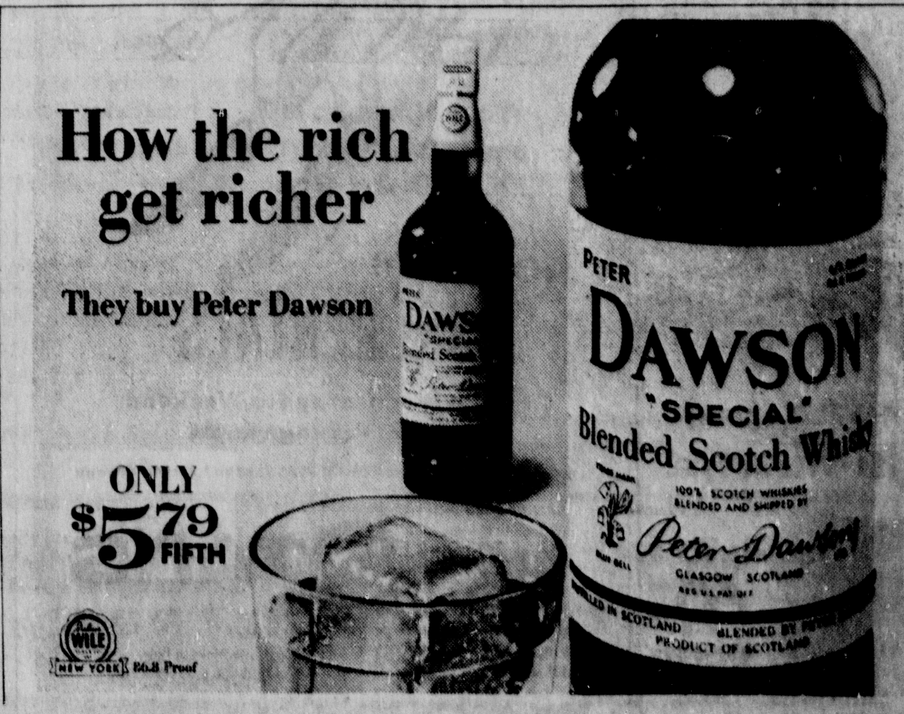
"If the decision is in our favor," Shulman said, "Spencer will belong to Seattle. That would be it, except that Spencer's Denver contract still must be declared invalid."

If he doesn't rule on the matter Monday, the case will be tried March 2.

NBA Commissioner Watler Kennedy officially "disapproved" Haywood's playing contract Wednesday.

As authorized by the appeals court, Kennedy said that any further use of him "will be considered a willful violation by Seattle of the provisions of the constitution and by-laws of the NBA."

Schulman said, "We will abide by the decision as it now stands and will not do anything to jeopardize our position."



Slugger Carl Yastrzemski Is Now Baseball's Richest

By United Press International

Boston's Carl Yastrzemski became the highest paid player in the American League and possibly all of baseball Wednesday and Mel Stottlemyre retained his status as the highest paid New York Yankee.

Yastrzemski signed a three-year contract for an estimated $150,000 per year and Stottlemyre followed suit by accepting a slight raise, to an estimated $70,000 from the Yanks despite a disappointing 15-13 record last year.

"I'm very happy with the contract and wouldn't have signed for three years unless I got what I wanted," said Yastrzemski, who missed his bid for a fourth American League batting championship last year when California's Alex Johnson edged him by .0003 of a point.

In other signings, the Los Angeles Dodgers announced that outfielder Manny Mota and pitcher Jim Flynn agreed to terms leaving only four players including shortstop Maury Wills among the unsigned.

The Kansas City Royals announced that veteran pitchers Dave Morehead and Wally Bunker had come to terms and pitcher Casey Cox signed with the Washington Senators.

In a minor trade, the San Diego Padres sent infielder Van Kelly to the Atlanta Braves' Richmond, Va., farm club for pitcher Chuck Westerhouse.

A pair of familiar pitching names were also in the news from the spring training headquarters.

Veteran Pedro Ramos, the 35-year-old right-hander who pitched with five major league clubs in 15 seasons, signed a contract with Atlanta and will report to the Richmond affiliate.

And Denny McLain drew praise from his new manager Ted Williams of the Washington Senators.

McLain was the first Senator to pitch batting practice and Williams commented, "No one asked him to pitch but he's anxious to get started and that's good. I just hope he doesn't get carried away and do too much too soon."

RICH RED SOCK — Slugger Carl Yastrzemski smiles after signing a contract yesterday that made him the highest paid player in baseball. He received a three-year contract estimated at $150,000 per year, although details of the pact were not disclosed.

Laver — Another $10,000

Emerson was more than just another interested spectator Wednesday night when Laver polished off Dennis Ralston 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3 in the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic. That's 10 straight and $100,000 for Laver in the winner-take-all $10,000 classic matches.

The man who'll try to stop Laver from making it 11 straight and a sweep before the Feb. 22 semi-finals is Emerson. Already a straight set loser to Laver on Jan. 16, Emerson will face Laver for the second time in New Haven, Conn. on Friday.

Emerson knows he has a formidable task. "The last two months he's been playing the best tennis of his career," Emerson said. "He's at the top of his game."

And Emerson knows when Laver is at his best. There was a time when Emerson was considered the best player in tennis. But that changed in 1962 when Laver won his first grand slam, beating Emerson in the finals of three of the four tournaments.

Laver has been the man to beat in tennis ever since—and he hasn't been beaten that often.

Ralston was given a shot at it since he'd beaten Laver in their last two matches in the U.S. Open at Forest Hills and the Pacific Championships.

Ralston started out well, winning the first set as he broke Laver in the sixth game. But he said the turning point came in the second game of the second set when he felt a linesman blew a call. Ralston was obviously upset and it looked like he threw a ball in the lineman's direction but Ralston claimed he didn't.

"I couldn't believe it," he said. "I had one ball in my hand and I threw it to the back fence. I thought I'm really going to get nailed for throwing a ball at a linesman. But I didn't throw the ball at him."

The ball boy quietly retrieved the lob throw that missed the lineman and there was no further protest but Ralston said he felt it, "changed the whole match." He added, "I lost my concentration, it's my own fault. I felt I was close to breaking the match wide open and I felt it get away."

Ralston wound up double faulting on game point as Laver broke him for the first time in the match. Laver then held his service on four straight points including two aces and he was ahead 3-0 in the second set and he went on to win three straight sets.

Laver admitted that he thought his shot on the controversial call "might have been a little wide" even though the linesman called it good.

But Laver felt he was playing well even when he was behind in the first set.

"I never felt I lost my momentum," he said.

Key Match: Nastase Vs. Gorman

SALISBURY, Md. (UPI)—Ilie Nastase, beaten twice by Americans when Rumania challenged for the Davis Cup in 1969, must defeat a new generation of American Davis Cuppers to win the United States Men's indoor open tennis championships here.

Nastase won his third round match Wednesday night, 6-4, 64, over Richard Russell of Jamaica. Gorman routed England's Gerald Battrick, 6-2, 60.

Graebner won, 7-5, 6-1, over Marty Mulligan, the native Australian who now plays Davis Cup for Italy.

Fillol, who is unseeded, outclassed Juan Gisbert of Spain, 6-2, 6-2 to make the quarter finals.

Other quarter finalists who will see action Friday night are the top ranked American, Cliff Rickey of San Angelo, Texas; Thomas Koch of Brazil, the fourth foreign seed; and Vladimir Zenik of Czechoslovakia. They all won their third round matches last night.

Also qualifying for the quarter finals was Peter Curtis of England. He advanced when Jim Osborne, the four-ranked American from Bountiful, Utah, fell and broke his wrist last night.

The championship in the $50,000 open will be decided Sunday.

Carpenter Card Assistant; Eagles Sign No. 1 Choice

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Lew Carpenter, a 10-year National Football League player and a seven-year coach, today was named an assistant to new head coach Bob Hollway of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Carpenter, with the Washington Redskins the last two years, will work with Cardinal receivers and the defense. He will report to St. Louis on Monday.

His selection follows Wednesday's announcement that Hollway has let go of two of former coach Charley Winner's assistants, Red Miller and Ken Blue.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Eagles head coach Jerry Williams said present plans call for using first draft choice Richard Harris as a defensive end.

Harris, a lineman from Grambling College, signed a four year contract Wednesday with the National Football League club.

The Eagles said Harris was given an undisclosed amount of a bonus for signing but the contract did not include a no-cut clause.

Billiards

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Former world champion Frank McGown of New York ran 143 balls to defeat Jim Rempe of Scranton, Pa., 150-9 for his fourth straight victory to take the straight pool lead Wednesday in the $40,000 world 3-in-1 pocket billiard championships.

Also undefeated with three victories was defending champion Irving Crane, five times world champion from Rochester, N.Y. Crane scored over Jimmy Moore, Albuquerque, N.M., 150-65.

Basketball

AMES, Iowa (UPI) — Iowa State Athletic Director Clay Stapleton and a three-member committee today began heir search for a new head basketball coach to replace Glen Anderson whose contract was terminated.

Anderson, 41, was asked Wednesday by the university's athletic council to step down as head coach at the end of the season but to stay at the university in some other capacity.

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (UPI —Bowling Green State University basketball coach Bob Conibear, facing a second losing season in his three years here, will resign after the final game this year.

"In all fairness to the basketball program at Bowling Green, I feel it is best to step down at the end of the current season," Conibear said Wednesday.

NBA ROUNDUP

Haywoodless Sonics Win

Haywood, the controversial star who caused a storm of protest when he jumped the Denver Rockets of the rival American Basketball Association to sign with the NBA Sonics, Wednesday was benched by a court ruling. NBA teams protested Haywood's signing since his class at the University of Detroit has not yet graduated.

Dick Snyder picked up the slack Wednesday night, however, scoring 25 points to rally the Sonics to a 130-126 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers. Portland, which won five of its six previous games, led 120-119 later in the game when Snyder hit a free throw and a field goal to put Seattle ahead to stay.

In other NBA action, Milwaukee downed Philadelphia 119-114, Boston crushed San Francisco 129-99, Phoenix swamped Cincinnati 133-117, Chicago beat Cleveland 109-104 and Buffalo edged past Baltimore 118-114.

Lew Alcindor scored 41 points as the Bucks rallied to beat Philadelphia. The 76ers led 108-106 with four minutes remaining when Jon McGlocklin hit on a layup and Bobby Dandridge converted a three-point play to boost the Bucks in front.

Clem Haskins' 29 points helped Phoenix record its biggest scoring output of the season in the Suns' triumph over Cincinnati. Charlie Paulk led the Royals with 27 points.

Tom Boerwinkle and Chet Walker scored nine Chicago points over the last 3 1-2 minutes as the Bulls beat Cleveland to move within a half-game of second place Detroit in the Midwest Division. Bob Love's 30 points were high for Chicago while rookie John Johnson also had 30 for the Cavaliers.

Jockey Injured IN GGF Mishap

Rosenkranz, with apprentice Danny Isbell in the saddle, romped to a three-length victory over Shakazu in the featured race. Upper Balcony finished third in the field of nine allowance sprinters.

Rosenkranz paid $3.40 as the public favorite while covering the six furlongs in 1.09 4-5.

TUCSON OPEN

Trevino Tries For No. 3

Trevino was the top money-man of the year in 1970 but in the six tournaments to date this year has fared poorly. He withdrew from two of them because of illness in his family. He may make his big comeback on the par 36-36—72 Tucson National Golf Course. A third straight win would be without precedent and the odds, of course, are against it.

Shaw, the 28-year-old Oregonian, has won two of the six 1971 tournaments—the Crosby Clambake and the Hawaiian Open. Hs top money-winning total is $72,933, more than $12,000 better than the No. 2 man, Miller Barber who has $60,090.

Only Arnold Palmer among 1971.
winners chose to pass up this $110,000 tournament which runs through Sunday in the normal course of 72 holes.

Palmer moved into the No. 3 money-spot with $56,162 when he beat Ray Floyd on the first extra hole of a sudden-death playoff to take the Bob Hope Desert Classic last Sunday.

Barber and Floyd are here along with Lunn, winner of the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, first event of the year, and George Archer who won the Andy Williams San Diego Open. Barber won the Phoenix Open.

Boros, who has gone over the 50-mark agewise, can not be counted out of contention and seems to thrive in this hot, desert climate.

The course is a picturesque one—an oasis against a brown backdrop of barren-looking mountains. It has four water holes but its fairways are wide and accommodating. The longhitters love it here.

Palmer is resting this week to prepare for the National PGA championship in Florida. This is the only major title that has eluded him. His Palm Springs win broke a 14-month drought and at 41 he figures he won't have many more good chances for the PGA.

A Segregated Hall Of Fame

Really, sometimes I think Baseball as an industry is run by the Krupp Family. On second thought, cannon-makers have more heart.

You know what they've done now? They've segregated the Hall of Fame!

I ask you!

They have taken Baseball's shrine, Cooperstown, and turned it into a "Sorry, I can't serve you here — but if you'll step around to the back" place.

THEY HAVE told Satchel Paige they're going to let him in but he's to bring his House of David uniform with him. He's back to the Chattanooga Black Lookouts, the bus league. He's barnstorming again. He's in the comedy wing. He's on the Baltimore Elite Giants. The Indianapolis Clowns. He's an end man. Mr. Bones. He gets in the Stepin Fetchit Room, I guess.

Great gobbles of sheep shears! Who's in charge here, Senator Claghorn? Who in the world got the bright idea to dust off and put back the "Colored Only" sign in this day and age? Where have these guys BEEN?!

TELL ME it's a practical joke. Allen Funt is going out any minute and break up and say "Smile, you're on 'Candid Camera!'" There's no other rational explanation.

The situation is this: "Baseball's" Hall of Fame is actually run by, and its rules laid down by, a board of directors. While it includes baseball men such as the chairman of the board, former baseball commissioner Ford Frick, as well as Bob Carpenter of the Phils, league presidents Joe Cronin and Chub Feeney, the present commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox and former league president Warren Giles and William Harridge, it also includes sewing machine heirs, foundation presidents — monied residents of upper New York State. It is a private organization which has Baseball's sanction but is not governed by Baseball. One Paul Kerr is president. Stephen C. Clark, Dr. James Bordley III, Edward Stack and Howard C. Talbot are officers of the company. It is a tourist attraction — 3,000 people a day go through it in summer, 200,000 a year.

IT ARUGES that its rules are inflexible. Let us see.

For admission, an ACTIVE player must have been out of the game five years and get 75% of the vote of the baseball writers.

But, there is a "Veteran's Committee" which consists of a dozen men (players like Bill Terry, Frankie Frisch, executives like Giles, J. Roy Stockton and so on) and they can elect WHOM THEY WISH from a roster of players, managers, executives, umpires and, presumably, ushers and traveling secretaries, provided it has been 20 years since they left the game for players and five years since retirement for execs. This year, the Veterans Committee whisked SEVEN men into the Hall of Fame, one executive and six players. They are as full-fledged members as Babe Ruth or Ty Cobb. They get to eat with the family.

FIVE YEARS ago, this committee amended its own rules to admit Casey Stengel by lowering the five-year retirement to six months, provided the honoree was 65 years of age or older.

Impaneling a 10-man committee, 80 per cent of which is comprised of black players, writers and broadcasters to select (at the rate of one-a-year) great players from the old Negro leagues for a special section of the Hall is a clumsy, self-defeating attempt to right a wrong by compounding it. Every school boy knows Satchel Paige belongs in the Hall of Fame. So does every Hall of Famer.

A man who twice struck out 22 major leaguers in a game, who won 12 games in relief (and saved 10 others) for the old St. Louis Browns, who may have been the worst team ever to play the game, when he was at least 46 years old should not be in the back of this bus. No one ever pitched or batted against Satch was consulted in this move, you may be sure — not Joe DiMaggio, Dizzy Dean or Bob Feller, none of whom is ashamed to say he was the greatest.

BUT THIS notion of Jim Crow in Baseball's Heaven is appalling in its own right. I can't think of a more terrible idea. To have kept Satchel Paige from playing in the white leagues for 24 years and then bar him from the pearly gates on the grounds he didn't play the required 10 years is a shocking bit of insolent cynicism, a disservice to America.

What is this — 1840? Either let him in the front of the Hall — or move the damn thing to Mississippi.

DuPree-Rondon Title Fight

NEW YORK UPI — Jimmy DuPree of Jersey City, N.J., will meet Vicente Rondon of Venezuela on Feb. 27 at Caracas for the World Boxing Association's version of the light heavyweight championship.

in the East Bay, found range on his lefthanded jumpers, and he too got 12 before the half. Both Green and Smith finished with 19.

With Flynn out of there, the Tars saw their lead dwindle to 10 early in the second half, but the firecracker guard came in to steady the ship, and the margin zoomed to 15. Only when he came out for a rest, with five minutes to go, did the Comets begin their final drive.

Mike Lee and Wayne Kempt, dazzling outside shooters who finished with 19 and 17 points apiece, got red-hot, and that combined with the inside scoring of Allen succeeded in cutting Marin's seemingly comfortable lead from 13 to nothing in just four minutes. It was Allen, who during the entire second half took wholesale advantage of Green because the latter had four fouls, who dumped in a hook with a minute left to put the Comets ahead at 79-78.

The Tars, like a drowning man whose life passes before his eyes, were watching their chances for a post season playoff spot slip away when Flynn came off the bench once more, and rescued them.

International Field In Maine Ski Event

KINGFIELD, Maine (UPI)— Downhill races shifted from Switzerland for lack of snow had more than enough and the threat of even more today for the scheduled preliminary events to World Cup skiing at Sugarloaf Mountain.

An international field of over 100 men and women representing 14 nations wound up two days of trial runs Wednesday with only one major casualty, Canada's Doug Temple, who suffered a back fracture.

Officials who earlier had installed two fishnet barriers on the upper reaches of the famed narrow gauge trail hastily replaced them with 15-foot high rope fences after several men and women complained.

The European events, downhill runs from the Arlberg Kandahar for both women and men, were slated for this morning and noon respectively, followed by the downhill runs of the regular World Cup series on Friday. Giant slalom runs were listed tentatively for Saturday and Sunday.

Sugarloaf promoters predicted up to 15,000 spectators would attend the races, but early indications were that they'd have to commute 50 miles or more.

Packer Assistant

Phillies Announce Signing Of Selma

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Philadelphia Phillies announced today the signing of Dick Selma, their top relief pitcher last season with 153 strikeouts and a 2.75 ERA.

Selma, 27, in his first season with the Phillies, tied a team record of 22 saves set by Jim Konstanty in 1950.

He had a 8-9 record last season in 73 games.

THE SKI SCENE

Courtesy Code A Fine Thing

By CHARLIE COAÑE

As you ski your way down a gentle slope taking in the awe and splendor of it all, surely you've experienced a skier who whizzes past you with little concern and even less control. In fact, sometimes you may feel like taking your pole and banging the "hot dog" skier on the side of his head!

Well, someone has come up with a National Skier's Courtesy Code and I believe it merits a discussion here.

"1. All skiers shall ski under control. Control shall mean in such a manner that a skier can avoid other skiers or objects." This says it all in a nutshell. Many times a fast skier will be zipping through an area of slower skiers. He should avoid the slower skier!

"2. When skiing downhill and overtaking another skier, the overtaking skier shall avoid the skier below him." But don't close your mind to anything going on above you.

"3. Skiers approaching each other on opposite traverses pass to the right." This is not practiced too often and hard to remember when you're aiming right at another skier.

"4. Skiers shall not stop in a location which will obstruct a trail or stop where they are not visible from above or impede the normal passage of other skiers when loading or unloading." You'll see this violation all day long.

"5. A skier entering a trail or slope from a side or intersecting a trail shall first check for approaching downhill skiers." Unless, of course, you wish to be clobbered.

"6. A standing skier shall check for approaching downhill skiers before starting." Unless, of course, you wish to be clobbered.

"7. When walking or climbing in a ski area, shis should be worn and the climber or walker shall keep to the side of the trail or slope." Signs will help remind you of this.

"8. All skiers shall wear safety straps or other devices to prevent runaway skis." Areas will not let you on a lift without them. A runaway ski is a lethal weapon. If this happens, a common practice is for all who see the runaway to yell, "ski", to warn those skiers in its path.

"9. Skiers shall keep off closed trails and posted areas and shall observe all traffic signs and other regulations as prescribed by the ski area."

Those are the nine rules of the road, and courtesy on the slopes, as on the highway, is contagious.

By DON CARTER

Bowling has something in common with many other sports that involve the arm — baseball, golf, football, and numerous others. All require a good follow-through. As you deliver the ball, make your arm continue in the upswing after the ball has gone. Don't quit. Follow-through is one of the key factors in getting what the pros call "forward roll," and that is what brings strikes.

ALMANAC

Today is Thursday, Feb. 18, the 49th day of 1971

The moon is in its last quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aquarius.

On this day in history:

In 1969 Arab terrorists attacked an Israeli airliner at the airport in Zurich, Switzerland. Six persons were wounded.

A thought for today: Henry Wadsworth Longfellow said, "Give what you have. To someone, it may be better than you dare think."

Promoters Looking For A Young Queen

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The promoters of the Grand National Junior Livestock Exposition and Horse Show said today they are looking for a young lady to be the queen of the show scheduled for March 30-April 7.

The queen should be a member of a 4-H club, Future Farmers of America club or some other supervised group, the Grand National office said. Applicants were asked to send details about themselves and a picture if possible to the Queen Contest Manager at the San Francisco Cow Palace.

Knowing How Suits Will Break May Save A Foolish Mistake

Sometimes you can locate all of the missing cards after just one trick has been played. Knowing how the suits will break may save you from a foolish mistake.

Opening lead — ♠ Q

IN HAND

West opened the queen of spades, East discarded the ten of clubs, and South won with the king of spades. Paying no attention to the bidding or the first trick, South led a diamond to dummy's king, returned to his hand with a heart, and led a diamond to dummy's queen.

East won with the ace of diamonds and returned the ten of hearts, hoping to persuade declarer that West had the jack of hearts. South won and led a club to dummy's ace, relying on a 3-3 break in diamonds.

REVEALING DISCARD

East's discard at the first trick showed the entire hand. East could have only five clubs and could not have a five-card side suit since he would have bid that suit instead of clubs. Therefore, East surely had four hearts, four diamonds and five clubs. Moreover, East surely had the ace of diamonds and the king-queen of clubs for his sketchy opening bid.

Since the diamonds cannot break well, South's best play is to lead a low diamond and play dummy's eight at the second trick. East wins and returns the king of clubs, holding the trick.

ANOTHER TRICK

East continues with the queen of clubs and wins that trick also. Now there is no further defense. If East leads a third club, South wins in his own hand and leads a diamond to force out the ace. The ace of clubs is a re-entry to dummy, and declarer makes his game with two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and at least one club.

There is at least one other way to make the contract, but South must not rely on a favorable break in diamondsm

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold:
♠- Q J 10 9 7 5 3
♥- 6 4 3 2
♦- 7 4
♣- None.
What do you say?

ANSWER: If not vulnerable, bid three spades. If vulneable, pass.

Freedom Galore For UAL Staff

CHICAGO (UPI)—United Airlines is offering its employes vacations whenever they want. For as long as they want. With a free flight anywhere in the United States, including Hawaii.

The only requirement, the airline said Tuesday, is that the employe obtain his supervisor's permission and that he be gone for at least five days.

United said it hopes the unpaid vacation will avert further layoffs. The airline announced recently more than 600 stewardesses and pilots will be laid off by July 1.

Glass Demand Up; Hold On To L-O-F

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. Do you think Libbey-Owens-Ford will recover? I have a 12-point loss on my shares. — M.S.

A. Roughly 45 per cent of Libbey-Owens-Ford's sales are to the automotive industry, 95 per cent of which is to General Motors. In fact, company supplies about 75 per cent of GM's glass requirements. Because of this heavy reliance on GM, which suffered a 10-week strike, consolidated net sales for all of 1970 rose only 9.6 per cent, while earnings dropped 54 per cent. Although final quarter results represented on improvement over the third period deficit, sales and profits were still severely hampered.

The general business decline and costs of introducing major technological change in glass operations also restricted profitability. Despite this rather unimpressive picture, outlook for 1971 is quite optimistic. Libbey-Owens is benefiting from its conversion to float-glass production; higher volume sales to resurgent GM; and a slight boost in 1971 prices for automotive glass.

Moreover, continuing strong demand for glass and stepped-up capital outlays should further aid results. Quarterly dividend of 50 cents was recently declared. Stock has excellent rebound potential and should be retained.

Q. Two years ago I purchased 100 shares of Republic Corp. at $85 a share. It is now around $10. Would you advise sale? — H.C. & E.P.

A. Your shares, bought prior to a 3-for-2 split, have an adjusted cost of $56.67 per share for the 150 shares you now hold. As a result of reorganization, broadly diversified Republic Corp. has disposed of operations, which in fiscal 1970 contributed $24 million to gross. Other divisions to be disposed of gross about $20 million annually.

Dependence on the aerospace industry has been reduced and remaining operations are more closely integrated. Deferred product development costs and other expenses were unusually large in fiscal 1970, resulting in a drop in earnings to 54 cents a share, down from $1.78 the year earlier. Shares may be held for further recovery in a strong market atmosphere.

Can Makers Join Recycling Effort

SAN FRANCISCO — (BW) — Four of the nation's leading can producers yesterday joined with the California Anti-Litter League in announcing the establishment of a Bay Area Recycling Information Center and a major reclamation program to begin March 1 in Northern California.

The establishment of the Bay Area Recycling Information Center was lauded by Norvell Gillespie, executive director of the California Anti-Litter League.

"We are proud to join with these major producers in setting up what is believed to be the first recycling information center in the United States.

"It is our hope that the center will serve to coordinate information about the more than 100 recycling centers which already exist in the Bay Area and to encourage more materials back into the recycling process.

"The new center will provide data on how and where all cans, bottles, paper, etc., may be brought for recycling. The California Anti-Litter League believes that the establishment of the information center is a vital step — taken by industry — to facilitate the effective and speedy reclamation of solid waste materials."

Information regarding the location of recycling centers may be obtained by calling 781-8086 in San Francisco, or asking the operator for Enterprise 1-9110 if calling from the other counties in the Bay Area, or by writing to Bay Area Recycling Information Center, Suite 2101, 100 Bush St., San Francisco, Calif. 94104.

Gillespie said that a brochure which includes tips on preparing items for recycling and a directory of all recycling collection centers in San Francisco and the Bay Area counties of Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, San Mateo and Santa Clara, is being offered free of charge by writing to the Bay Area Recycling Information Center.

The can manufacturers also announced the opening of 12 more can recycling plants in Northern California. Companies participating in the program are: American Can Co., Continental Can Co., National Can Corp. and the Heeken Can Co.

A spokesman for the four companies said, "We are deeply concerned about the rapidly growing problems of solid waste accumulation and the general pollution of our environment.

"Because of this concern the major U.S. can producers are donating their services for the collection of all types of cans — steel, aluminum, tin plate and bi-metal. These include food cans, beverage cans or any other type of metal container.

"The scrap cans will be shipped at company expense to various locations where they will be separated, processed and transported back to the primary metals industries."

Proceeds from the sale of the scrap will be donated to the California Anti-Litter League in support of its anti-litter and recycling efforts.

Steel Output Up 1.6% For Week

NEW YORK (UPI) — Steel production rose by 1.6 per cent last week to 2,664,000 tons from 2,622,000 tons the week before, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported.

Production in the week ended Feb. 13 was equal to 109.2 on the institutes new index (average weekly production in 1967 equals 100, or 2,439,701 tons) compared with 107.5 for the previous week.

Production from the start of the year through Feb. 13 totaled 16,167,000 tons, compared with 16,001,000 tons at the same point in 1970.

Consumer Goods Spending Gets Soviet Boost

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union will double its spending on consumer goods production during the next five years, the country's deputy planning chairman said.

Nikolai Mirotvortsev, the deputy, said the Soviet Union would invest $9.7 billion in light industrial production for 1971-1975. The 1966-1970 figure was $4.8 billion, he said.

Mirotvortsev said the flagging food, meat and dairy industries would be perked up with $10.7 billion; the investment figure in 1966-1970 was $6.6 billion.

"Production of consumer goods for the first time in the history of our Soviet economy will exceed by its average annual tempo of increase any previous five-year period," he said

Wrigley Co. Hikes Chewing Gum Price

CHICAGO (UPI) — The William Wrigley Jr. Co. has raised the wholesale price of its chewing gum for only the second time in 53 years.

The new wholesale price of the five-stick package is 72 cents for a box of 20 packages, up from 60 cents.

Overbought NYSE Slips Still Lower

NEW YORK (UPI) —The stock market moved lower in brisk trading through the first two hours Thursday.

Newton Zinder, analyst for E. F. Hutton & Co., said so far it looks like a normal period of consolidation in a market that has been overbought for several weeks.

William Nelson, director of research for Moody's Investors Service, noted that the confidence factor is still strong on Wall Street even though there are no signs yet that the economy is recovering. He added, however, that the market could be vulnerable to a major selloff if the next batch of numbers on the economy do not live up to the administration's hopes and predictions.

Shortly before noon, declines outscored advances by more than a two-to-one margin. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index was off 0.33 at 97.87.

Prices also backed down in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange. Of the 1,000 issues traded, 538 declined, while 206 gained.

Among the most active AMEX issues were AIM Companies fractionally higher on 20,000 shares, Mite Corp. also slightly higher on 19,00 shares, and Buttes Gas & Oil up slightly on 16,000 shares.

Frontier Denies It's Near Broke

DENVER (UPI) — Spokesman for Frontier Airlines said a recent federal study showing the nation's nine regional air carriers "close to bankruptcy" did not apply to Frontier.

The Department of Transportation study showed that the nine carriers, including Frontier, had a combined loss of $33.3 million in the 12 months ending Sept. 30.

Frontier reported a net loss of $2.78 million for 1970, compared with an $11.9 million deficit in all of 1969. Spokesmen for Frontier said increased subsidies plus a variety of operating economies and $7.9 million in extraordinary income had improved the airline's capital position substantially.

January's Building Activity Gets Year Off To Fast Start

It is encouraging to have a new year start off with a flurry of building activity — and January did just that.

Total building permits for the month valued out at $3,337,284 — a gain of 75.6 per cent over the first month showing of $1,900,951 last year. It was even better than December's $2,268,683, according to the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Business Bureau. Most of it was residential construction.

Activity in San Rafael and its environs totaled $1,596,846, also mostly residential. Novato came up with $590,293 — 86-per cent residential and miscellaneous permits. Larkspur's $305,360 was mainly residential. Mill Valley permits were $268,845, mostly residential and miscellaneous. The Belvedere-Tiburon peninsula checked off $231,293 — all residential and miscellaneous permits.

Sausalito's $79,854 was all commercial and miscellaneous, as was Corte Madera's $71,516. San Anselmo had $57,347, principally residential; Fairfax $8,000 (no residential); and Ross $3,500, all miscellaneous. West Marin and other incorporated areas accounted for $78,725, nothing commercial.

HOUSE OF SOTHBY

'I Waggled The Catalogue And Purchased A Rembrandt'

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

LONDON (UPI)—Almost anyone can buy a Rembrandt. I did.

It happened more or less by accident.

For years I had read about the multi-million dollar sales at 34 New Bond Street, home of the 226-year-old auction house of Sotheby and Co. In a newspaper I read they were to auction more than 100 old master etchings, engravings and woodcuts.

A 36-cent catalogue listed the goods, works by Goya, Rembrandt, Canaletto and other names associated with the folks who run to Rolls-Royce, Tiffanys, executive jets and mink coats. I decided to see the other half in action.

The doorman at Sotheby's recognized the familiars, the art dealers from New York, Paris, Munich, Florence and London, and showed the way in for the sirs and madams.

The rest of us—the tourist with camera, the auction nut and the curious—also got a smile. In the little dramas at Sotheby, the spear carriers mix equally with the stars.

The goods for auction included a tiny, battered Rembrandt etching. An old Sotheby hand told me "one might get it for 40 pounds ($96) unless the dealers are hungry." Why not try, I thought.

Adrian Eeles, a Sotheby's director and the man charged with authenticating old master prints, did the auctioneering. None of that tobacco sale lingo. Very precise. Very clear. Like a supreme court session. No one smokes. Experience tells Eeles when someone is using a finger to bid $240 or merely to scratch a nose.

The sale began.

The dealers had made notes on their catalogues, what they wanted and what they could bid. These businessmen and women sell at home in their galleries what they buy here, and they sell it often double or triple price.

Mr. New York bid by waggling a ballpoint pen. The Paris dealer signalled by raising his chin about an inch. Mr. Munich, his right hand on the table, raised the palm about an inch to show his bid. Florence pointed a finger. London nodded his head.

The tiny Rembrandt came up. A young attendant in blue smock held it between two fingers. An auction addict bid two pounds ($6.60). It sold for $439.20.

The world's old master market is booming. In search of safe profitable investments and in hunt of some tax benefits, more persons than ever before are buying. Works of Rembrandt and other famous masters are zooming in prices yearly.

With the tiny etching sold, I thought my chance had gone. I had not even bid. I watched a big Rembrandt go for more than double the expected $2,400 estimate.

The dealers fought like pirana —their teeth showing in the finger wagging, head nodding, palm raising. Between two big Rembrandts, a post-card sized etching came up.

It was an authentic Rembrandt, cited by the experts, from the master's first and only etching block, one of the last from that block with several tiny lines minutely blurred, a bit stained by age, in need of some expert restoring but a prize. After the sale, a professional expert judged it "an extremely good buy." In the auction room I thought, why not try?

The addicts had their fun up to $24. The dealers took over. Paris bid $43.20. London nodded $48. New York waggled his pen for $60.

I shook my catalogue—"30 pounds ($72). The gentleman in the rear," said the auctioneer. It is not displeasing to be called a gentleman in Sotheby's auction rooms.

Paris bid $84. Florence raised it to $96. I am no gambler. I will never own a Rolls-Royce. But this was a Rembrandt and a good one. I waggled my catalogue for $108.

New York bid $120. Someone up front offered something like $125.60. London smiled—perhaps the amateurs were done—and bid $132. I thought of my checkbook and decided on one last try. I waggled the catalogue—$144.

London glared at me.

Legal Air Cleared On 18-21 Vote Registering

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —An Attorney General's opinion said today that persons between 18 and 21 may register to vote only at their legal residences which "normally" are their parents' homes.

Deputy Attorney General Clayton P. Roche said, "We presume that the county counsel framed his question in the context of minor students because of the location of a campus of the University of California in Santa Barbara County."

State law, Roche said, listed these criteria for legal residence:

—"It is the place where one remains when not called elsewhere for labor or other special or temporary purpose and to which he returns in seasons of repose.

—"There can only be one residence.

—"A residence cannot be lost until another is gained.

—"The residence of the father during his life and, after his death, the residence of the mother while she remains unmarried, is the residence of the unmarried minor child, provided that when the parents are separated, the residence of the parent with whom an unmarried minor child maintains his place of abode is the residence of such unmarried minor child.

—"The residence of the husband is the residence of the wife provided that a married woman who is separated from her husband may establish her own residence.

—"The residence of an unmarried minor who has a parent living cannot be changed by his own act.

Second Time Around For Popularity In Male Wigs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wig makers claim that more and more men are wearing hair pieces of all sorts, including the far-out and the way-down.

Male inhibitions, the wig people say, have been lowered to the point where "he" can be as bushy as "she," and they even predict a national cranial coverup.

If indeed wigs become as popular as the manufacturers hope, it will be their second time around. The wearing of wigs by both sexes dates from the earliest recorded times, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica, but the male wig as we know it today was a French inspiration.

Louis XIV, who as a youth had abundant hair, chose to wear a wig about 1670 when he was in his 40s. Within a few years, one historian noted, "all civilized men in Western Europe felt compelled to do the same."

The English went along with the style, even when fashion dictated the "full-bottomed" wig for men. It may have been just darling but it was hot and cumbrous.

Soon the "campaign" wig was invented along with the riding wig, bag wig and a plaited tail wig tied with bows at the top and bottom.

By the 1740s bob wigs were replacing the long, curled king. Wigs kept getting smaller and smaller and finally ceased to be indispensable. Gentlemen began powdering their own hair, strangely, as if it were a wig.

At about the same time wigs got mixed up in politics. They had been used to denote class and profession. Both the French and American revolutions brought about the abolition of many social customs, including class distinction as indicated by such things as hair styles.

Although wigs began to die out during the reign of George III, the practice held on long afterward among professional men. The most solid bitter enders were doctors, soldiers and clergymen—allied, presumably, with a group of assorted bigwigs.

Finally, by the end of the 18th Century, practically all men had abandoned wigs of all sorts and had returned to where they were before it all began—short hair.

Big Salary Jump For Some Jobs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Wage earners in office and plant occupations in the San Francisco Bay Area received a greater increase in salaries during the past year than in any one year period since 1966.

Office clerical workers had a 5.7 per cent increase in wages between Oct. 1969 and Oct. 1970, according to the U. S. Department of Labor.

In the same period, skilled maintenance workers earned 7.1 per cent more and unskilled plant workers had a pay increase of 8.1 per cent.

Case Referred To Juvenile Court

The case of Steven Harris Millikan, 20, of Woodacre, has been referred to Marin Juvenile Court.

Millikan, who is charged with possession of marijuana and misdemeanor counts of resisting arrest and disturbing the peace, allegedly bit a San Rafael policeman when he was being booked Dec. 4 at the Hall of Justice.

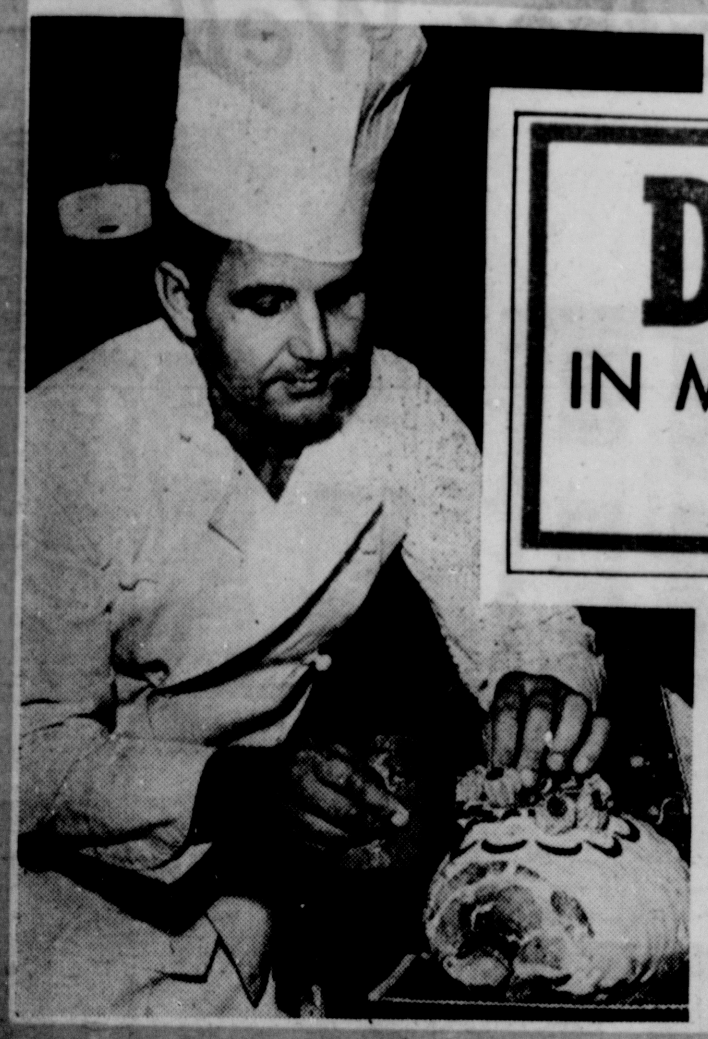
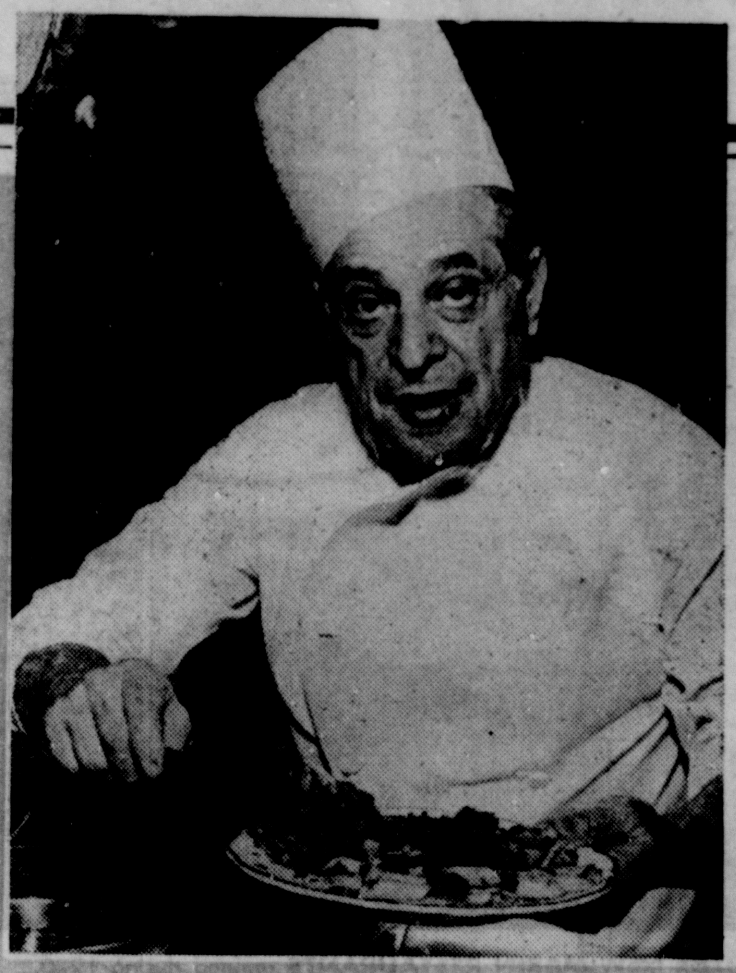
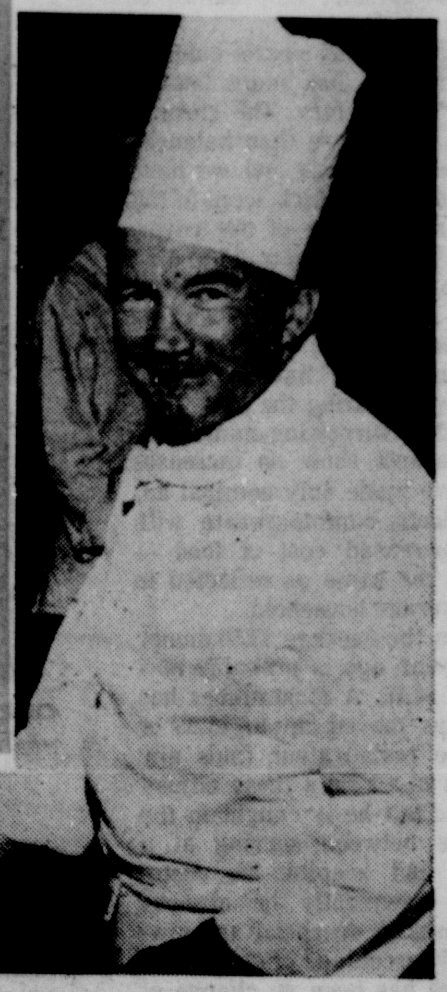
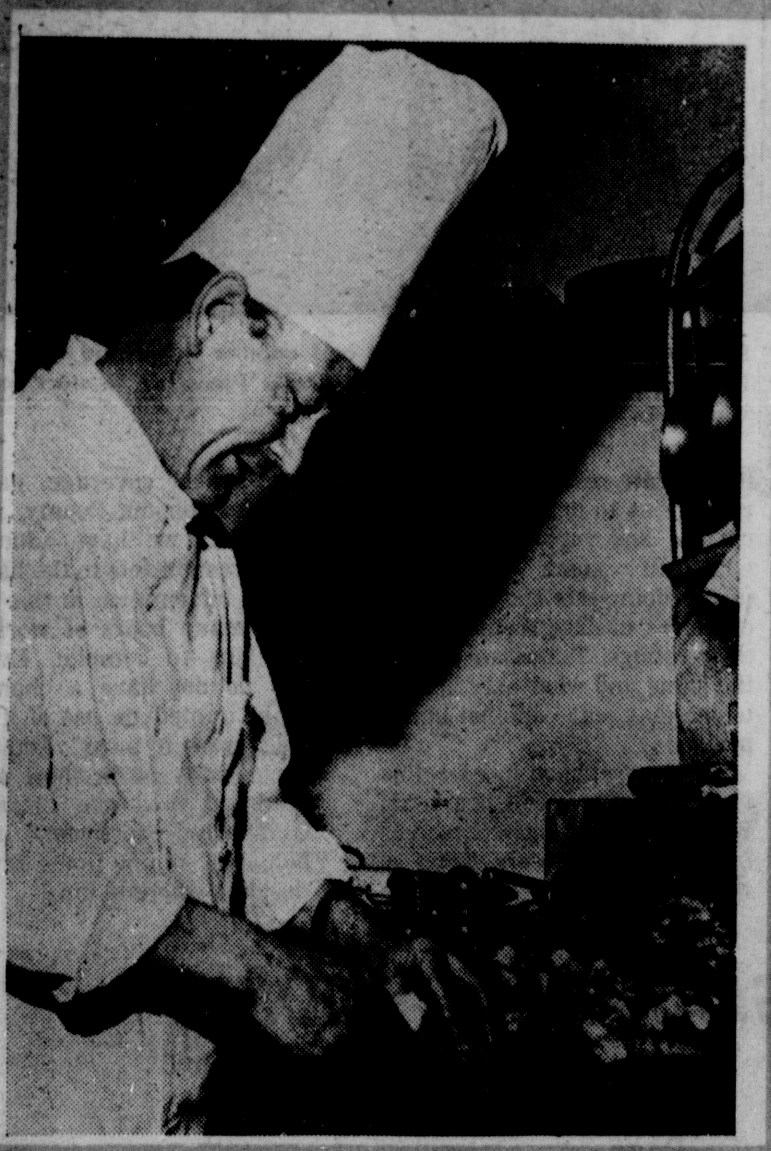
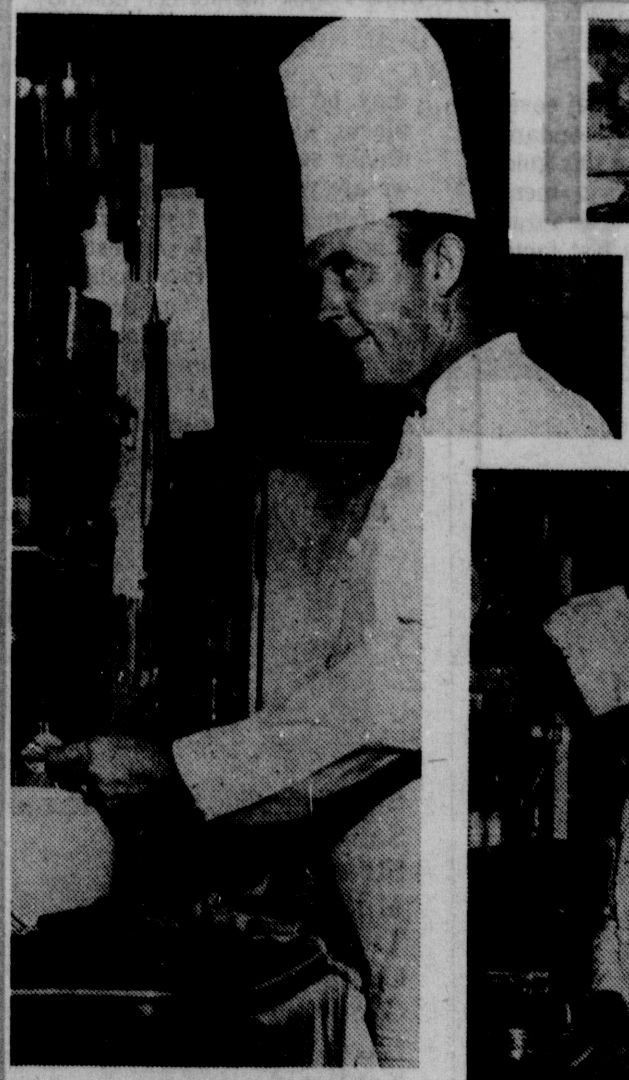
DINING & WINING
IN MARIN AND SONOMA COUNTIES

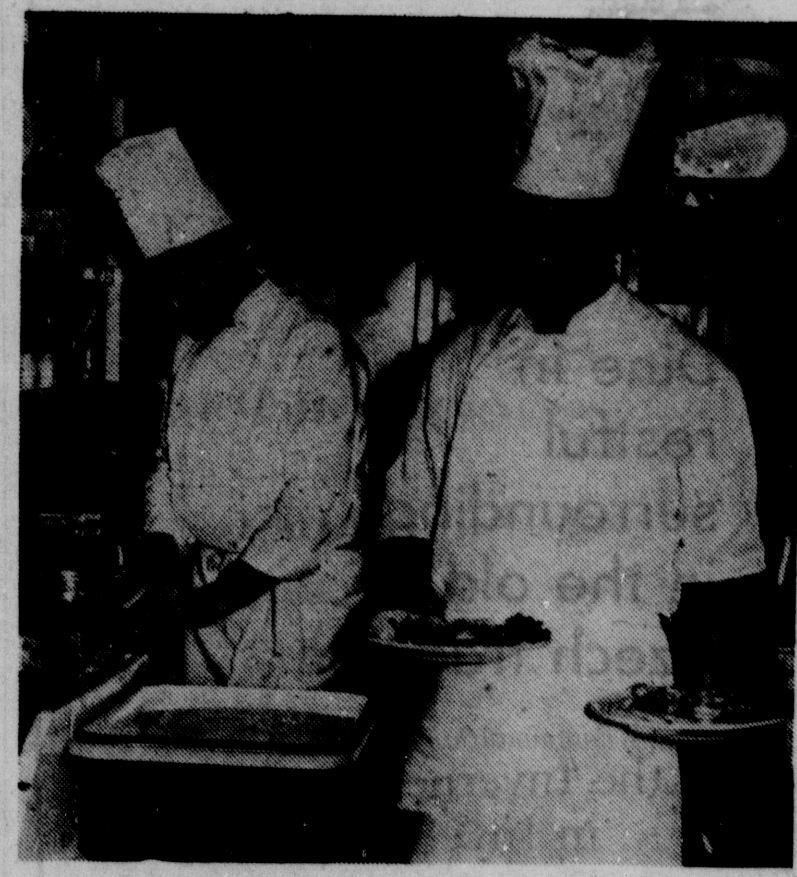


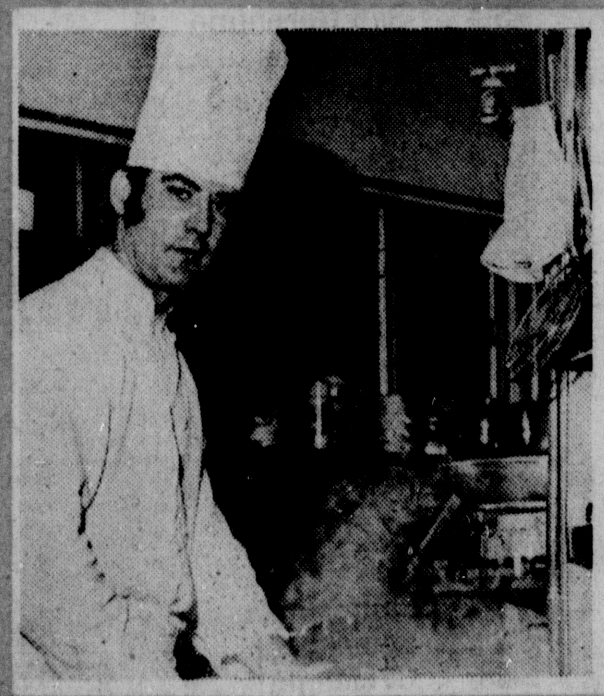












N. Bay Restaurants Weather Well

By HARRY CRAFT

It is fine testimony to Marin and Sonoma County restaurants and to the loyalty of their customers who visited them during the past year, which saw a heavy toll of eating establishments in many areas, that those in the North Bay weathered it farily well.

True, only a few, if any, showed a record year, and there were some closings and several cutbacks in service. But most of the places listed in last year's Dining and Wining Guide are still in this one — although you will find some under different ownership, new names or both.

Actually, this year's guide — our 10th — has more listings than ever before. The closings have been more than balanced by new openings and we have added others which seem to fall within the scope of our coverage. There are now almost three times as many listings here as there were in our 1962 edition.

Meal prices have gone up somewhat during the past year, though a surprising number of restaurants show no increases or have made only nominal adjustments commensurate with the increased cost of food — about the same as reflected in the average household.

Thus the average $3.50 dinner of a year ago is probably now about $3.75. A $5.50 dinner has perhaps moved up to $5.95 or $6. No restaurateur finds any joy in making these adjustments. But he is caught in the middle between serving at a profit and keeping his customers. Frequently he absorbs increases in overhead and lowers his percentage of profit.

There has been no change of policy as to our scope of coverage. The qualifying standards for an appearance in this guide are in type of service, menu, whether or not a restaurant serves dinners. This last factor may be a variable one. Some places have had to minimize dinner service temporarily and we are reluctant to remove one of them from our list if there is a possibility of it being restored if all but one or two conditions are met. Also, it has been our general policy to continue with a corrected listing for a now defunct restaurant for at least one year in order to keep reader-customers informed of its passing.

Beyond this, we make no effort to rate restaurants comparatively as to degree of quality of food and service. We have examined some restaurant guides doing this and often find ourselves in disagreement with their ratings. Tastes are not all the same and what may appeal to one may leave another unimpressed.

The geographical index below is the same as it was last year. We have not extended ourselves farther afield. Before doing so we shall endeavor to intensify our present coverage, particularly in Sonoma County, where this year we have added six more restaurants to the list.

The information in this guide took many hours of work and checking to compile. Even if you do not have a chance to make immediate use of it — do not throw it away. Additional copies may be in short supply until our next one 12 months from now. Meanwhile it can help you many times over in deciding where to dine.

ONE OF THE NEW MARIN RESTAURANTS opened during 1970 was Alvarado Inn at Ignacio. New owners took the former Rancho Rafael, gave it a different look and another name and now serve lunches and dinners throughout the week. Plans are to start serving breakfasts this spring.

Whiskey: Did Irish Invent It?

The Irish believe that St. Patrick himself was the first distiller of whiskey.

At least they are sure someone on the Emerald Isle produced "the water of life."

In medieval times, whiskey was like a liqueur, laced with heather flowers, herbs and spices and colored with saffron, according to wine expert Philip Harding.

Getting back to the Irish — they insist they passed along their knowledge to the Scots and from them it went to the English.

Who Cares Who Invented Cioppino? Just Eat It

Probably no one really knows where "cioppino" got its name or when it was created.

That it was invented by the Italians is fairly certain. Some people believe it was done in San Francisco.

Restaurants and cooks have different recipes. One calls for three kinds of shellfish; others for a combination of fish and shellfish and even entirely of one kind of fish.

Tiburon Vintners, Windsor Winery — Two County Firm

Marin and Sonoma counties share a variety of common interests — in restaurants, geographical proximity and in business.

One of the latter is the case of Tiburon Vintners, Inc. in southern Marin and its affiliated organization, Windsor Vineyards, between Santa Rosa and Healdsburg in Sonoma County.

Tiburon Vintners grows grapes, and produces, markets and sells wines under the Windsor label directly to consumers throughout California. The company's stock has been publicly held since last October. Rodney D. Strong, chairman and chief executive officer, and Peter S. Friedman, president and chief operating officer, are the major stockholders.

The company dates from 1960 when Strong opened a bonded wine cellar, with wine tasting and sales room, in a turn-of-the-century house on Main Street in Tiburon. His parents had been in the wine business in Germany and from them he had acquired and nurtured an avid interest in grape growing and wine making. He devoted his spare moments to furthering his knowledge of viticulture and enology in Europe's great wine producing regions.

The Tiburon wine cellar became a means of turning an avocation into a vocation. He selected premium wines from California producers, bottled them in Tiburon and affixed the Tiburon Vintners label.

In 1962 Strong was approached by a friend who, with some others, had become owners of a vineyard and historic winery at Windsor. It was inactive and Strong was invited to put it into production. There was no hestiation, and the Windsor Vineyards label was born.

At the end of 1963 production was in full swing and the tasting room at Tiburon was too small to remain the sole outlet for Windsor wines. The decision was made to continue selling direct to the consumer, but new consumers within California would be reached by direct response advertising.

Strong was joined by Friedman, a New York advertising executive, in 1964 as a partner and shortly thereafter Tiburon Vintners became a corporation.

Production and sales were increasing and in order to obtain additional vineyard acreage, Strong and Friedman sold stock, following this up with more equity financing in order to construct an entirely new winery embodying the latest-technological advancements in wine production. Construction was begun in 1969 on Windsor property, a short distance from the original winery which remained in production.

The new building, now completed and in production, was built at a cost of more than $1 million and encompasses 28,000 square feet. A land acquisition program has resulted in eight separate vineyards comprising more than 1,000 acres. These vineyards do not produce the lush yields associated with most California grape growing. Instead, in the light clay and thin and rather gravelly soil, the wines produce fewer grapes with a high acidity and moderate sugar content so highly desired for premium table wines.

The vineyards are located in Sonoma's Alexander Valley, Trenton, Forestville and near Healdsburg. Grapes grown on the property are Pinot Noir, Cabernet Sauvignon, Johannisberger Riesling and Chardonnay. And California's unique Zinfandel grapes are grown on the original Windsor properties.

FIRST MAJOR STEP IN WINEMAKING is the crushing of the grapes. This photograph of the Windsor Vineyards crushing complex in Sonoma County was taken last September at the time of the grape harvest.

Glassware Is The Thing When Serving Good Wine

Crystal-clear glassware dramatically enhances the rich colors of California wines — which run through the hues from amber sherry to rich, red burgundy, pink rose, golden sauterne, and the spectacular orange-red of grignolino.

Wine glasses come in a variety of shapes and sizes and nearly every price range. They can be used singly or in sets — depending on the meal, table setting, and extent of the hostess' collection.

Most persons keep it simple, however, eschewing a large supply of glasses. For these, the all-purpose wine glass provides the perfectly practical answer. It features a generous nine-ounce bowl — tulip-shaped to husband the aroma of the wine, topping a short stem for beauty and utility. Those who prefer a more formal all-purpose glass will find several available with the same size and shape, but with longer stems.

The all-purpose wine glass is an excellent start in assembling glassware. As a person serves wine more frequently, he may add other styles of wine glasses to his collection.

The next logical addition may be the stately tulip-shaped Champagne glasses holding nine ounces, the hollow-stemmed and saucer-shaped, often used for parties and weddings. The Champagne flute is gaining popularity in this country after centuries of use in Europe. Traditionally it features a long, narrow bowl on a short stem.

The round-bowl sherry glass, a deep, narrow appetizer or dessert wine glass, is another excellent gift choice. It is eye-appealing and with a capacity of six ounces, and easily holds three-ounce servings.

A tall, slender-stemmed Rhine glass, with a round bowl — characteristic of glassware when reisling, traminer, sylvaner and other Rhine wines are poured — shows off the wine's subtle, light, straw-color or pale greenish tones. The extra long stems insure that the chilled wine will not be affected by the warmth of the hand.

Other white wine glasses often have shorter stems and larger bowls that Rhine wine glasses. With a capacity of eight to 10 ounces, these glasses are used for Chablis or Sauterne-type wines.

Glasses designed expecially for red table wines (nine to 26 ounces) are similar to the all-purpose wine glass in shape and capacity, although the stems usually are longer. Some unusual ones are the great, balloon-shaped burgundy glasses on tall stems, and the voluminous, tulip-shaped claret glasses.

With interest in wine increasing rapidly in this country, more varied selections of wine glasses are appearing in more and more stores.

'Dining In' — Air Force Tradition, Protocol

Everyone knows what "dining out" is — and does it.

And it seems logical to assume, then, that "dining in" means staying at home.

Not necessarily. The "Dining In" is an English tradition that began in medieval monasteries and spread to early universities and then into the military.

It is in Air Force protocol, and the late Gen. H. H. Arnold is credited with putting it there to bring together officers for camaraderie, good feeling and sociability.

Everything is very formal. Dress uniform and medals are worn. Everyone is expected to behave himself. Smoking is forbidden until after a formality called the lighting of the afterburner.

There are wine pouring ceremonies and many toasts, starting with honors to the President, secretary of the Air Force and his chief of staff. Eventually it gets down to toasting those who couldn't be there and then to some who could.

When the Dining-In ends, everyone stands at attention until the commander and the head table depart.

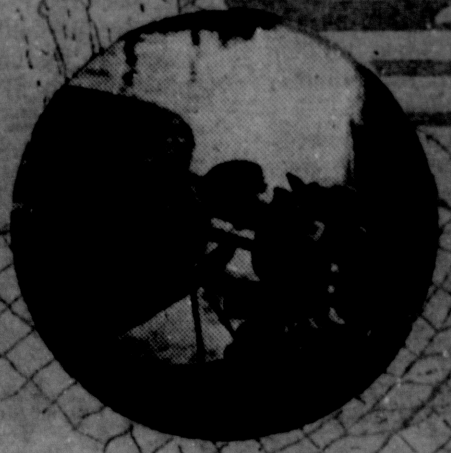
Sabella's OF MARIN



The story of the Sabella's actually begins in the 19th century when the family lived in a small Sicilian village and fished in the turquoise waters off Tunisia. In 1887 Luciano Sabella, at the age of fifteen, set sail for America and made the long trek across country to San Francisco, where he settled around the lower slopes of Telegraph Hill. Some years later, Luciano married Angela Scafani whose family had arrived from the same small village.

Angelo Sabella was born in 1904, the fourth of a family of thirteen. One of the first things he remembered was a walk he took with his grandmother in 1906 shortly after the earthquake on Columbus and Taylor Streets. A huge crack opened in the street before them. The earthquake was the occasion of Angelo's first trip to Marin. His father loaded his entire family and all their belongings aboard his fishing boat, and took them to a tent camp in Tiburon. After the great fire was controlled the Sabella's moved back to Stockton and Francisco Streets.

As a young lad, Angelo delivered the Italian language newspaper, Il Vocce del Popolo, on the cobblestoned streets of Telegraph Hill. Later he hawked crabs through the Barbary Coast for ten cents each and fifteen cents for two after school. In 1915, Angelo was at the prow of his father's fishing boat, The Marconi, when they won the gold cup at the Panama International Exposition Fisherman's Boat Race around Alcatraz Island. As Angelo grew up he worked with his father at their Crab Stand No. 3 Fisherman's Wharf, where two younger brothers and a nephew still carry on the family tradition.

In 1928, Angelo married Vita Ra, and in 1932 the young Sabella's opened the family's first seafood restaurant at the end of the Wharf in Santa Barbara. Arthur Brisbane, renowned Hearst Columnist; devoted an entire column to the young Sabella's acclaiming their fine food and warm hospitality. Many people still come to the Marin restaurant remembering the Sabella's from their seven years in Southern California. In 1940, Angelo returned to Fisherman's Wharf and was associated with his brother, Antone Sabella.

In 1951, Angelo moved to Marin and established a restaurant just north of the Richardson Bay Bridge on the Redwood Highway. His aim was to establish a family restaurant which would not depend on transient trade but one that would appeal continually to Bay Area residents.

The Sabella family's love of the sea is always with them and reflected in the fine family recipes that please even the most discerning of the gourmets.
